Proponents, Opponents Heard On Huge West Quincy Project

Traffic, Jobs Issues At Store Hearing

By BILL DONCASTER

"Braintree gets the taxes and Quincy gets the traffic," was the cry of many Quincy residents Monday at a City Council public hearing on a $10 million home improvement retail store proposed in West Quincy at the Braintree line.

The 104,000 square foot Home Quarters store proposes to build on the Quincy-Braintree line between Willard and Rockdale Sts., about 5 acres in Quincy, 10 in Braintree. The store and all the parking will be on the Braintree side. The driveway will be in Quincy, opening onto Willard St.

Tom Southworth, of Home Quarters, estimated that the project will create roughly 200 contruction jobs for the two years it will take to complete and 200 more retail jobs after completion.

Ronald Iacobucci, of the South Shore Building Trades Council, spoke in support of the project citing the need for jobs in the area, and saying the success of the Home Depot store, also on Willard St., is an example of how this project can work as well.

About 10 people spoke or were recorded as being in favor of the project, most of those were union laborers.

Residents speaking against cited an already congested Willard St. as reasons to stop the project. Some cited traffic during peak hours from the Cinema at the South Shore Plaza in Braintree and talk of a second floor to that mall as being of major concern. Roughly 20 people were recorded as

Downtown Ammunition License Denied

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A request to open a fishing, camping and hunting store at 14 Cottage Ave., Quincy Center, was denied Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

Police Chief Francis Mullen and other board members said they had too many reservations about granting an ammunition license at the site.

"That particular location, I'm not comfortable with (an ammunition license there)," said Mullen. "It's a safety thing."

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue expressed similar sentiments.

"I agree with the chief," she said. "I'm opposed to this license."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said he would only support an ammunition license at the site if guns could be purchased only through a catalog at the store.

The board also received a letter from the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association which stated that while the QCBPA "accepts the concept of a sporting goods store in Quincy Center," it also has "serious reservations to the sale of firearms." The board had continued the matter from its previous meeting mainly to solicit the QCBPA's opinion regarding the request.

Bill Spinks from Bay State Community Services at 15 Cottage Ave. and Mitch Finnegan from Impact Quincy, which is located at the same address, also spoke against the license at the meeting. Spinks, whose organizations assists people who have had alcoholic, drug or family abuse problems, said he would feel uncomfortable with a guns being sold across the street from the door his clients use as entry and exit.

Finnegan, who said that there is a "connection in many people's minds between guns and violence," said he would be concerned about an ammunition license being

Bethany Pastor Resigns After Stormy Ministry

Rev. Roger Ketcham has resigned as pastor of Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center, after a near two-year ministry, the last half of it marked by controversy.

Rev. Ketcham submitted his resignation Saturday and it was accepted by members of the church Sunday.

Church officials had little or no comment on the resignation or the reason for it.

But other church sources said the resignation came to a head in the wake of several stormy months during which some members of the church expressed dissatisfaction with Rev. Ketcham's performance as pastor.

He was on a probation period.

It was also learned that the vote on the separation agreement between Rev. Ketcham and the church was 155 for and eight against.

One church member described the church as a "house divided" during the controversy leading up to the resignation.

Asked for comment when reached at his Squanto Rd., Merrymount home by The Sun Monday,

'I'm Going To Miss This'

Warren Watson Closes Chapter On Library Career

By MICHAEL WHALEN

One might think that Warren Watson is leaving the Thomas Crane Public Library because he's tired of looking at so many books.

But Watson, 68, who will retire Friday after serving as the library's director for 25 years, says that isn't the case at all.

"I still read voraciously," said Watson, adding that "I always have a book by the bed." One of the best parts of working at the Crane library, he said, is that everyone on staff reads so much that employees are constantly introducing each other to the works of different authors.

"We all get so excited about it," he said. "I'm going to miss this."

Watson said the reason for his retirement is something far simpler.

"I just thought it was time to go," he said, "and to make way for younger and more energetic leadership."

That leadership will be provided by Ann McLaughlin, 44, who has served as assistant library director for the past 10 years. Watson noted that McLaughlin's considerable experience, good relationship with the library's Board of Trustees, and hard work in establishing the library's literacy program make her the ideal person to succeed him.

"As far as I'm concerned, the library couldn't be in better hands," he said. "I'm sure it will prosper."

Not that it has done badly under Watson, a 1943 graduate of North Quincy High School who received bachelor's (1948) and master's (1950) degrees from Boston College and did news and editorial work for nearly 10 years before beginning his library career in 1959. He worked at the Boston Public Library and the Boston College library and, after receiving a degree in library and informational science from Simmons College in 1962, became assistant director of the Framingham Public Library.

In December 1965, he was promoted to the position of library director in Framingham. Finally, he was named director of the Crane library in March 1968.

The work he has done over the years, he said, has left him with a great feeling of accomplishment.

"As far as the work is concerned, there is almost daily gratification derived from being in a public library," he said. "There is such a variety of different needs to be addressed--children's services, popular reading, recreational and information services--that's what gives us the satisfaction."

Watson said he is proud of the improvements made at the library in the years he has been director, since the needs of the reading public are constantly changing.

"Accessibility (of books) has improved because of what we call 'output measure,'" he said. "We concentrate more on what the public's getting than how to get the materials. We also count turnover, the ratio between how many books the library has and how they are circulated, as well as the amount of time it takes a person to receive a book."

Improvements in automated services in recent years have also helped improve the library's efficiency, Watson said.

"These are things that have developed during my time that are all to the good," he said. "More and more material is available to more people when they need it."

Personally, however, what has touched him most is watching his staff members go on to bigger and better things. Watson has appointed all of the 38 Crane employees currently on staff, and noted that at least four of his former employees have gone on to become library directors in other communities.

"My greatest internal satisfaction has come from my relationship with the staff, and my opportunity to encourage them to develop," he said. "I've hired some talented people over the years, and I've tried my best to give them a little support."

Watson was recently honored for his many years in library administration by friends and colleagues at a celebration at the Neighborhood Club.

"I was very warmed by the kinds of comments they made," he said. "They had a lot of nice things to say." Watson also recently received best wishes from the public at a reception held at the library and from the City Council, who presented him with a certificate of appreciation.

Watson said he will continue to serve as an advisor to the library and on a planning and development committee which will begin meeting in the fall to discuss plans for a new library addition. Watson added that he would like to see the addition project, which will cost $5 to $7 million, "seriously underway" in the next five years.

Other than that, however, Watson said he and his wife Elizabeth, who reside in Squantum, will be taking things one day at a time in the future.

"I have no single grand plan for retirement," he said. "We'll work on our own timetable, which I like."

Restaurant, License Board Reach Compromise On Extending Weekend Hours

By MICHAEL WHALEN

In a compromise reached with The Pilgrim Restaurant, 1472 Hancock St., The Quincy License Board Tuesday agreed to extend the restaurant's closing time on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays an additional six hours.

Owner Richard Carriger told the board he wanted to keep the restaurant open 24 hours a day on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, saying that there are a number of people in the area who work late and would like a place to eat.

Police Chief Francis Mullen, however, told Carriger that other businesses such as the International House of Pancakes at Washington Street and McGrath Highway have made similar requests but were told they must conform to a late-night closing. Mullen said the same should be done with The Pilgrim Restaurant "just to be consistent," telling Carriger his feelings were nothing personal.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey agreed, calling Carriger "a fine person," and made a motion that the restaurant, which normally closes at 8 p.m., be allowed to extend its closing time on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays to 2 a.m.

Carriger agreed to the extension and, at Mulvey's suggestion, said he would report back to the board in September to inform them on how the new schedule is working out.

New Restaurant To Open At Former Bentley's Site

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request from Gilesin Enterprises, Inc. to open a new restaurant at the site of the former Bentley's Sports Club and Grill.

The matter had been continued from the board's previous meeting because of its policy of reviewing all requests for All-Alcoholic and/or Common Victualer Licenses twice. Applicant Kevin Gill was granted both licenses by the board.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said he recommended a closing time of midnight at the site, and also that gates be installed at the site "to prevent disturbance" and that Gill's request for two pool tables at the restaurant be denied.

"I just don't think it's necessary (to have pool tables)," said Mullen.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, however, suggested that the board grant Gill's request for a closing time of 1 p.m.

"I just think it's very hard to be competitive when almost everyone else is closing at one o'clock," said Shea, the board chairman.

Other board members agreed with Shea, saying that 1 p.m. should be the closing time and that the two pool tables should be allowed. Board members also agreed with Mullen, however, that gates would be installed at the site and that Entertainment and Video Licenses, neither of which had been requested by Gill, would be allowed at the site.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at its meeting Tuesday:

Council Approves $7.8 Million Bond Issue

By BILL DONCASTER

On Monday the Quincy City Council voted to float a $7.8 million dollar bond package which was submitted by Mayor James Sheets earlier this month.

The package includes bond issues for the renovations on the city's school's and other public buildings, departmental equipment, seawall repairs, sewers and drains and other matters.

Only one item was not passed, a $265,000 fire and police communications bond, which was referred back to the finance committee.

Accoring to Thomas Koch, executive secretary to the mayor, that money will be used with the Enhanced 911 system to be intalled in 1994. He said there was no hurry to issue the bond as Quincy will be submitting a plan for the system next week.

Councillors Bruce Ayers and Michael Cheney both praised the $1.15 million for construction of new seawalls in Squantum. They and Councillor Joseph Laraia said that for years the city has been using a "band aid" approach in combatting erosion.

This appropriation, they said, will do much to improve the impact of storms along the shoreline.

A $200,000 bond was issued to purchase new water meters, at roughly $75 apiece, to replace defective ones so that billing could be more accurate.

There was little other discussion since all the items had been discussed at lenght at prior meeting, said chairman of the Finance Committee, Tim Cahill.

Councillors Petition State To OK Kolson Salary

By BILL DONCASTER

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson hasn't been paid for his work as a city councillor.

City Council passed a home rule petition Monday night so that he can.

The petition must first go to the mayor, then, if signed by him voted on by the state legislature and signed by the governor.

Kolson hasn't drawn the $10,000 city councillor's salary in the four years he's been in office due to a conflict of interest law the prohibits a housing authority employee from collecting a salary.

Kolson is a building maintenance supervisor for the Quincy Housing Authority.

Councillor Michael Cheney and other councillors would like to see an exception made in his favor because his salary is paid through state and federal funds, and they see no conflict of interest.

PETER KOLSON

"We've looked into it and there would be nothing wrong with him getting paid," Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro said.

According to City Auditor Robert Foy, Kolson does not draw any salary from the city, and would not be eligible to receive any sort of pension from the city.

"This exception would just allow him to take a salary for a job he's already doing," said Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien.

Councillor Joe Laraia said before voting that he would like to see a petition or something else showing Kolson's constituents feelings on the matter. He said Kolson's not drawing a salary might have been a factor in voting for him for some. He later voted in favor.

"He earns his money as much as we do," said DeCristofaro, "maybe more, I don't know. There is nothing ethically wrong with this, it is proper."

Kolson said he would like to collect the salary, but it would not be a factor in seeking re-election.

"It would certainly be a help to my family," said Kolson, he estimated that he spends 30 to 35 hours to week in work related to his Council position.

Complaint Filed Over Alleged Noise Violations

Quincy Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey filed a complaint in Quincy District Court on Monday regarding alleged noise ordinance violations at Interstate Distributors, Inc., in Squantum.

Mulvey filed the complaint in response to years of complaints from residents of the SeaWinds Condominiums on Quincy Shore Drive. Some residents of the building say they are disturbed by late night and early morning noise from loading and unloading of trucks.

There will be a show-cause hearing on July 13, when the courts will determine whether the case warrants a trial.

Mulvey said he also suggested that residents of SeaWinds hire a lawyer to file a civil suit against Interstate Distributors. Since it is an ordinance, the most the city can do is issue a $100 fine for each violation, which may not be enough to get them to stop operating at night.

Peter Eleey, an attorney for Interstate, has said recently that Interstate has no intention of ceasing night work, due to the timely nature of their business, distributing periodicals, night and morning activity is necessary.

He's also said that any attempt to stop it may be in violation of the First Amendment, which protects the freedom of the press, including distribution of literature.

Mulvey is also investigating into whether or not Interstate has been issued a "commercial hauling license," which was brought up by Nancy Maule McNally, an attorney who lives in SeaWinds.

If they are not licensed, Mulvey said, the city may be able to be more effective about curbing late night activity.

Stores That Are Open, Closed In Quincy This Holiday Weekend

With the Independence Day holiday falling on a Sunday this year, Police Chief Francis Mullen announces what Quincy stores will be allowed to open and what stores will be closed during the holiday weekend.

Retail stores and supermarkets may open Sunday, July 4th but will be closed Monday, July 5th.

Liquor stores will not open Sunday but will be allowed to open Monday under state law.

The Class Of 1930 A Class To Remember

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The oldsters continue to care about the youngsters.

In 1980, the 1930 graduates of Quincy High School celebrated their 50th anniversary. They decided to establish a scholarship fund for future Quincy High School and Vo-Tech graduates.

A committee of 14 was formed to carry out this decision. In 1985, it was decided to include North Quincy High.

Enthusiastic contributions to the fund continued to pour in from all over the country.

The fund was carefully managed by the late James Walsh and since his death, by Jimmy McGuiness and Gerry Gherardi. Scholarships went from $200 each to $500 each.

But now, in 1993, the members are in their early 80's and feeling the burdens of their years, so the committee reluctantly decided to collect no more contributions. The fund, now $12,000, has been placed into the care of Quincy High School's principal, Lloyd Hill. He will continue to give out $1,500 a year from this fund to graduates of Quincy High School, The Center for Technical Education, and North Quincy High School; each candidate to get $500 for as long as the fund lasts.

In this way, the scholarship will go on into the next century, and perhaps, memorialize the graduates of 1930.

It is hoped that other alumni groups will try the project, too. It has been very worthwhile.

COPING WITH OSTEOARTHRITIS

Osteoarthritis, or OA, occurs when the cartilage that acts as a cushion between the ends of bones becomes worn or pitted. Although this form of arthritis is not generally as severe as some other types, it can be extremely painful. Besides the joint discomfort of OA, it can also result in pieces of bone being chipped off as bones rub against each other. The disease may develop slowly, starting on one side of the body or in a particular joint. It is usually characterized by only slight swelling or sensation of heat in the affected joint. There is no cure, but OA can be managed with a comprehensive approach including education, treatment for joint damage, and coping techniques for stress and pain.

P.S. Osteoarthritis has been around at least since about 1250 B.C., when it is known to have plagued Egypt's Pharaoh Ramses II.

Patients suffering from chronically painful conditions like osteoarthritis often find relief using the tools of meditation and biofeedback. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment, and our new, more comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Ervin Drops Out

As it turns out, Martin Ervin will be voting for Mayor James Sheets this year instead of running against him.

ERVIN

Ervin will officially withdraw from the mayor's race today (Thursday) in a letter to City Clerk Joseph Shea. He had already filed nomination papers.

Ervin, who is 23 and would have been the first black candidate for any elective public office, says he is getting out because of personal and not political reasons.

"There are a lot of personal reasons for my decision," he says. "It doesn't have anything to do with politics. My personal life is very dear to me."

Now that he won't be a challenger, would he vote for Sheets?

SHEETS

"Yes, I'll vote for Jim Sheets," he says. "He's a gentleman. He's got to be the nicest politician I've ever met."

Ervin first met and talked with Sheets in the latter's office a few weeks ago and came away impressed.

Among the subjects he discussed with Sheets was the need for youth centers. He feels Sheets will now make that one of his priorities for the future.

Ervin says he plans to become more active in the community especially involving the needs of youth.

And, he says, he plans o return to the political scene as a candidate two years from now.

"This," he says, "is only the beginning for me."

A READER HAS some thoughts of his own regarding the recent suggestion here by Ward 4 City Councillor Tom Fabrizio that the new Early Childhood Center to be built on the site of the former Lincoln School be named after late Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa.

In offering a number of reasons why the honor would be appropriate, Fabrizio noted that Della Chiesa was born in a house at 43 Rodman St., just a stone's throw away from the old Lincoln School which he attended.

Not quite so, says Alfred Benedetti of 73 Rodman St., a long-time friend and neighbor of Della Chiesa. The latter lived on Rodman St. but was not born there.

Benedetti agrees there should be "a memorial" not only for Della Chiesa but for another Rodman St. resident at the new school.

Benedetti writes:

"The article on Amelio Della Chiesa, The Quincy Sun, June 17, the location where he was born is not correct. I came to South Quincy in 1903. There was no house at 43 Rodman St. It was an empty lot.

"The Della Chiesa family lived on Trafford St. and later built the house on Rodman St. We were neighbors for many years.

"The Quincy Ledger (also The Quincy Sun) had an article on the dedication of the North Quincy branch library in memory of Della Chiesa on Sept. 7, 1986. Della Chiesa bequested to the city libraries in 1975, $140,000. The interest was to be used to build a library in South Quincy.

"Another South Quincy native, Angelo Vergobbi, also from Rodman St., was never in politics, left the city libraries $100,000.

"Nothing that I have seen has been done for Angelo, except a portrait hung up high in the main library. No one knows who the portrait represents.

"Both Amelio and Angelo attended the Lincoln School and both were generous benefactors to the city.

"A memorial should be provided for the two men at the new school on the former location of the old Lincoln School."

CITY COUNCILLOR Joseph LaRaia who was named to fill the unexpired term of Patricia Toland who resigned to become assistant city clerk, says he will get his election campaign in high gear this month.

LARAIA

"There's a lot of new voters out there," he notes, indicating his plans to get around to them.

LaRaia had his first fundraiser scheduled last night (Wednesday) at Coddington's Restaurant, Quincy Sq, 7 to 9 p.m. Tickets were $25 per person.

CHRISTINE CEDRONE, candidate for School Committee, kicks off her campaign at a fundraiser Tuesday, July 6, 7 to 10 p.m. at the Adams Heights Men's Club, Bower Rd., Quincy Point. Tickets are $15 per person and may be obtained by calling 479-2217. They will also be available at the door.

A MEMORIAL 10K road race honoring the late U.S. Deputy Marshall William F. Degan of Quincy, will be held Sunday, Sept. 19, beginning and ending at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Degan was killed in the line of duty in Idaho last August when he was gunned down outside a fugitive's fortified cabin on a mountainside.

Degan also served in the U.S. Marine Corps and held the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Proceeds from the race will go to the Quincy DARE program and the Marine's "Toys For Tots" program, both of which he strongly supported.

His wife, Karen, is honorary chairman of the planning committee. Members include: Dan Stock, Steve DeRoche, Bob Winter, John Hasson, Rick Fitspatrick, Rich Coleman, Bill Graney and Don Donohue.

Quincy Group Not Connected To MWRA, Officials Say

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announces that it does not have any affiliation with a group soliciting money in Quincy and promising to lower water and sewer rates.

Members of the group have been going door to door in Quincy soliciting funds. They state that contributions to their campaign will help public education and lobbying for the Boston Harbor Project, and more specifically, they speak of reducing water and sewer rates.

MWRA officials stressed that while they are aware this group exists, there is no connection between the two, although the group may use the MWRA's name. Residents are advised that all MWRA employees carry proper identification.

Touched By Quincy's Flag Day Parade

(On Monday, June 14, I attended the Flag Day Parade that was held in Quincy. The parade and its audience was very inspiring, and I wanted to convey my feelings in writing, so the enclosed composition came to mind. I thought the organizers of the that parade would like to know that they touched at least one person in attendance, and hopefully your other readers were as moved as I was by this event.)

By KATHERINE RYDER

Flag Day is an annual holiday that generally means nothing to me.

When I think of Flag Day-and I only do that when I notice it once a year on my calender- I reflect on it as a particular day of the year that is reserved for the thought of "Old Glory." Whoop-de-do.

I have never contemplated it as an especially patriotic holiday, I mean it's nothing like July 4- we don't even get the day off! Honestly, I have never given this day much consideration at all. The way I see it, it's just one day out of the year when the population breaks out its American flags from the attic and proudly displays them outside- only to be forgotten there for the rest of the summer.

On this particular Flag Day, the historic City of Quincy was hosting a Flag Day parade to be followed by a flag raising ceremony and fireworks display. My father, a Quincy businessman, informed me of this event a few days prior to its arrival. I took in the news with about as much enthusiasm as a turtle gives to a world crises. The only reason that I had given it any thought at all was because my dad told me that he and my mom would be carrying one of the flags in the parade.

My day hadn't gone any worse than usual, but I would have enjoyed a nice, quiet, relaxing evening at home which would have definitely included an early bedtime. All during the day, however, I kept thinking back on how excited my dad seemed about the whole event in general, and how when I was a kid both my parents always made an effort to see me march in parades (even the stupid little Santa parades through the mall), and I decided that I had to go - for them.

My boyfriend met me in Quincy Center and we went out for some dinner before the occasion. Our meal was hardly edible, and between the bad food and the humidity in the air we were not the most joyous couple. As we strolled towards the parade route, I glanced over at the audience and was immediately disappointed by its size.

One of the things that truly disgusts me in this decade is the general public's total lack of interest in their own communities and neighborhoods. It seems so different from my parent's age when people looked out for one another and joined in local happenings.

One of the reasons that on-lookers saddened me was that there seemed to be so few of them. I chalked this up to the time of day (7 p.m. on Monday evening-who could possibly be home?), and proceeded to go about finding a good viewing territory.

Chris (my boyfriend) and I managed (oh, how difficult) to find a front row location, and chatted amongst ourselves until the festivities began. Our wait wasn't too long, and we finally heard the all too familiar strains of police sirens, only this time we didn't mind them since they were leading the happy procession.

As the first segment of the parade passed by, the mostly disinterested audience members paid hardly any attention at all. There were a few clappers (maybe two), but in total individuals barely noticed what was right in front of them.

The next pack of marchers came and went, and it was at this time I noticed a gentleman standing next to us. His appearance was nothing startling, but it was his actions that caught my attention. The troop that was marching by us was a Minuteman Corps with their drummers and gun slingers. As they came around the corner towards us my neighbor began to clap - loudly. I glanced over at him and noticed that he had an excited look on his face, one you might see on a young child at his first parade. His enthusiasm was infectious, and I began to clap for the marchers too. Clapping gave me a warm, happy feeling inside, and I was delighted that I had been chosen to stand next to that gentleman on my right.

A war veterans marching band was next to stroll by, and before we saw them we heard the music; the song was "God Bless America." As the procession made its way around the corner past us, the musicians relaxed the hold on their instruments and sang the lyrics of that wonderfully patriotic tune. The crowd that I (and that very passionate man) was a part of broke out into thunderous applause (okay, maybe not thunderous, but everyone was clapping). Being the extremely sentimental and emotional person that I am, my eyes began to pool behind my dark sunglasses, and although the tears never travelled beyond their home, I felt greatly touched by my surrounding patrons, and I was honestly glad that Chris and I had attended.

The participants kept strolling by and the crowd continued to cheer; by the time my parents turned the corner I was really enjoying myself. As soon as I saw them my hear filled with pride. When they walked past us I waved and called to them. I wanted everyone around me to know that they were my mon and dad.

At the time of the fireworks display at Adam's Field in Quincy, I was safely holed up up in my Hull residence. I had wanted to hang around for the rest of the fun, but my weary form was advising me otherwise. I heard a loud weatherish noise as I was getting ready for bed; I knew that thunder storms were in the forecast, but the sound was too persistent.

I made my way up to our third floor to see whatever there was to see when I was reminded of the evening's finale. I discovered that if I sat in the third floor bay window I, too, was able to partake in the dazzling sight taking place above Quincy's dark night skies, even it I was about 25 minutes away.

Of course, the sound wasn't as loud as it was in Quincy (definitely a big part in fireworks viewing), but I had the soothing chorus of the ocean as it made its nightly rounds on Nantasket Beach. I gave thought to our country's stately symbol and how proud I am to be an American, and as much as I complain about policies and politics and whatnot, I as so very glad for my freedom and wouldn't trade it for anything.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Michael Cheney Candidate For Re-election To City Council

MICHAEL CHENEY

Councillor-at-Large Michael Cheney announces he will be a candidate for re-election to the Quincy City Council. Cheney has served five years as Ward 1 Councillor and four years as councillor-at-Large.

Cheney has chaired the Environmental Control Committee where he fought to rezone several hundred parcels of land to open space and has established a number of ordinances to preserve open space. He has also served as Chairman of the Public Saftey Committee and advocated that a police study be conducted that resulted in a "Pelicy and Procedures Manual" established for the Quincy Police Department. As former chairman of the Ordinance Committtee, Cheney advocated a recodification of city ordinances. This process is being put in place at present and will facilitate researching and accessing local laws, he noted.

Currently Cheney serves as chairman of the Tourism Committee through which he has established Quincy's First Night Celebration which is a non-alcoholic, family celebration of New Year's Eve. He also serves as Chairman of the event.

In announcing his candidacy, Cheney expressed his desire to attract business to the City of Quincy to create jobs for the residents of Quincy. He said he is also committed to protect and preserve the quality of life in our neighborhoods. At a recent gathering of supporters, Cheney reiterated he will continue to be accessible and responsive to the residents of Quincy.

"The uniqueness of each neighborhood in Quincy is what makes Quincy a great City to live in and to raise your family in," he said. "I pledge to the residents of Quincy that I will continue to work to preserve the character of Quincy and improve on the quality of life for all."

Cheney noted he has also been active in the fight to lower MWRA sewer-water bills. He said many other communities have tacked on additional charges above and beyond the MWRA costs of delivering services. Cheney said Quincy has not done so.

"It is important to make sure that residents receive evey dollar's worth of services for every dollar paid whether it be MWRA bills of their tax dollars," he said.

A Cheney ordinance created the Human Relations Commission, which recenty passed in the City Council and establsihes appointments by the mayor to serve on the commission.

"The City of Quincy is a diverse city and the establishment of a Human Relations Commission will be a positive force that will help foster a better understanding across cultural lines," he said.

Council Hears Proposal For College Governance Change

By BILL DONCASTER

Quincy City Council heard a proposal Monday night for a new system of governance for Quincy College.

School Committee member Linda Stice, who is chairman of the Quincy College Governance Committee, said the current proposal consists of a 13 member board, a separation of the College from the school committee, and that the School Superintendent should not be part of it.

"When it was first founded," Stice said, "Quincy College was just sort of a grades 13 and 14 in the School system. Quincy hasn't changed much, but the college has."

Stice said that Quincy residents now make up a minority in the student body, the College is no longer supported by tax dollars, it is entirely tuition and grant financed.

Councillor Tim Cahill said he was anxious to get the issue of college governance finished.

"I'd like to see this done by September," Cahill said. "The school committee has enough to worry about with K through 12."

According to Cahill, Mayor James Sheets has made it clear he will not sign any plan until it has been approved by the school committee.

Stice said the school committee is not planning to debate the plan until their July 21 meeting.

The plan requires City Council approval before it is submitted to the state Legislature in the form of a home rule petition.

All Councillors that spoke on the subject Monday night commended the committee for the work put in, but said it was a lengthy document that could not be dealt with all at once.

SOUTH SHORE HOSPITAL Nurse Geraldine Lewis of Quincy, right, recently brought her daughters, Christine, 11, and Jennifer, 16, to work as part of "Take Our Daughters to Work Day," sponsored by the Ms. Foundation for Women. The Lewis' daughters help their mom strip a bed for a patient. They also helped assemble charts and provided refreshments to patients recovering from surgery. The program familiarized young women with what adults do at the workplace.

being against the project.

The project falls in Ward 4, Councillor Thomas Fabrizio's ward, who said, "I don't know if the plan presented can satisfy demands of residents."

He said he had reservations about the traffic pattern Home Quarters showed at the meeting, including the 250 foot driveway emptying onto Willard St.

Southworth said traffic was as much a concern for Home Quarters as it is for residents of the area, and that the project will include new traffic lights for the street and other safeguards.

Fabrizio said that the state measures roads with a "level of service rating" on a scale from A to F, F being the lowest, and that Willard St. already has an E rating.

"I don't see yet how this can work as they're proposing it now," he said.

Fabrizio also noted the same concerns about South Shore Plaza's possible second floor and the cinema.

Fabrizio played a major role in ironing out an agreement betwen developers of Home Depot and concerned residents in 1991 and said he is reserving judgement on this project until he sees engineer plans.

"We have to look at technical aspects of planning this project," he said.

Fabrizio's opponent for City Council, Mike D'Amico, who lives on Willard St., spoke out against the proposal.

"This has to stop," D'Amico said, "What's in this for me and my fellow residents? Trucks, worries and traffic. There is no benefit to the residents in this area."

Mention was made by representatives of Home Quarters that they would make a payment to the city in lieu of taxes, and perhaps donate unused land from the project to the city.

"There has been no talk of what that payment would be," said Fabrizio "but if they own land then they pay taxes."

He also said that accepting such a land donation may be counter productive, as it may be more worthwhile to collect the property taxes from it.

Also of concern, is that this project will require far more blating then Home Depot did.

"There will be a tremendous amount of blasting," Fabrizio said.

He added that he thought the present parking plan was insufficient, and if Home Quarters went into additional parking, they would have to blast through 90 feet of rock to level the area.

Sean Barry Candidate For School Committee

SEAN BARRY

Sean L. Barry, of 184 Marlboro St., Wollaston, has announced his candidacy for the Quincy School Committee.

Barry told more than 200 at a campaign kickoff party at Coddington's, Quincy Sq., that he has been working at keeping involved in education issues since his first bid for the committee two years ago.

In the 1991 September Primary, Barry finished seventh in a field of 11, just 23 votes short of being nominated.

"Coming that close after working so hard was a real learning experience," Barry said. "We're in this race to win, and I will work as hard as I can and as long as it takes to win this election."

Barry, 28, is manager of public affairs at Quincy College where he also works as an adjunct professor.

"My teaching experience precedes Quincy College, though I have found the students at Quincy are motivated, bright and challenging," Barry said. "These students are certain of what they want from life, and they know adversity first hand. The personal success stories of so many Quincy College students are inspiring."

Barry has taught developmental education and state and local government.

Barry is also affiliated with the Edward T. Sullivan Labor Management Center at Quincy College. The Sullivan Center is sponsored by Local 254 of the Service Employees International Union, the largest local union in the state.

"Unions have become the whipping boy of aspiring politicians for the past decade," he said. "While such a simplistic indictment of labor unions is convenient for politicians looking for an easy target, many people forget that their improved quality of life and current conditions were due to the efforts of organized labor. I haven't forgotten that, and generations of my family wouldn't let me forget that either."

Barry earned a B.A. degree from Ohio Wesleyan Univeristy, where he double majored in journalism and politics and government. He holds a master's degree in journalism and public affairs from the American University. Barry was a graduate fellow at American; teaching classes in writing and reporting. He received the James McIntyre Graduate Scholarship in 1990.

Barry is continuing his education as a night student in the American Studies Master's Program at the University of Massachusetts at Boston. He plans to enter a part-time doctoral program next year.

A lifelong Quincy resident, he is the son of Jeanne F. (Liuzzi) Barry and the late Paul J. Barry.

Barry is a member of the Ward 5 Democratic Committee and has served as a delegate to several state conventions.

Each semester, Barry involves his classes in a community service project such as a canned food drive or volunteer effort.

In January of 1992 Barry lost his right leg to complications from cancer. He currently uses crutches and a prosthetic while campaigning.

"Nobody will work as hard as me in this campaign," Barry said. "It takes me longer to get to every neighborhood, but I'm trying and there are plenty of good people helping me out."

Shortly after leaving the hospital last year Barry was addressing the School Committee on issues such as overcrowding and in favor of tightening attendance policies.

"I didn't do that because it was the right thing to do politically, I did it because I wanted to be there. I want to be involved in decisions regarding the Quincy Schools."

"Quincy Schools are doing a good job in educating Quincy's children. There are so many positive things which need to be recognized. There are always issues which require attention, and those issues demand a school committee that is compassionate, caring and committed to values and to fiscal responsibilty. We cannot overextend ourselves in this economy, as a school committee member I'll commit all of my energy to finding the good elements and preserving them, recognizing the bad elements and correcting them, and taking on the challenges facing our community schools, preparing our system for long term success, not short term emotions."

Among the issues Barry said he plans to address are changes in the governance of Quincy College; renovation and preservation of existing school buildings; matters of public saftey; and preserving or restoring extracurricular programs.

"I won't forget that the taxpayers of Quincy, most of whom have no children in the system, support our schools and deserve our consideration," he said.

MWRA Asks Judge To Consider Scale-Back Of Harbor Project

The Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) has asked federal Judge A. David Mazzone to begin the process of scaling back costs for certain future work on the Boston Harbor Project.

Responding not only to ratepayer concerns but to new technical data, the MWRA will propose how the Court can consider more cost-effective ways of achieving compliance with federal law.

In a special report to Judge Mazzone, who oversees the harbor project, the authority is asking that he "endorse and establish a framework for aggressive and sustained review of the Court ordered capital facilities to insure that expenditures of public funds be kept to the minimum necessary to comply with the mandates of the Clean Water Act."

MWRA Executive Director Douglas B. MacDonald noted "the MWRA Advisory Board, the MWRA Legislative Caucus, the House Post Audit Committee, the Governor, the mayors in our district and others have helped guide the way toward substantial savings in the overall program. Now its time for the MWRA, on behalf of our ratepayers, to step up to the plate. We can make this happen."

The framework proposed by the MWRA includes: examining new date with an eye toward reducing the scope of planned facilities; developing regulatory standards to support creative, cost-effective compliance strategies; and developing a schedule to reassess the scope of the project while maintaining the existing compliance schedule. The Authority would work with other parties to the lawsuit to work on the details of the plan.

According to the court filing "the Authority has strong reason to believe... that the scope of the Boston Harbor capital program can be reduced significantly without compromising compliance." Savings could be achieved in the following areas:

•Secondary Treatment: a potential savings of $90-130 million by eliminating one portion of the plant and possible reduction of another portion.

•Combined Sewer Overflows: A possible savings of $700 million by substantially reducing the size of a proposed deep tunnel storage system.

•Related Facilities: A possible savings in excess of $20-35 million scaling back sludge handling equipment and other facilities.

•Unestimated savings through reduced operating and maintenance costs, consideration of alternative treatment technologies, reduction of extraneous flows to the plant and expanded pollution prevention strategies.

"This is a banner day for ratepayer," MacDonald said. "The Senate budget provides hope for immediate and significant rate relief, and the MWRA's strategy calls for a serious reexamination of our long-term capital investments." Senate Ways and Means Committee Chairman Thomas Birmingham announced June 17 the Senate version of the state budget which would provide up to $27 million in debt assistance to MWRA ratepayer and allows for homeowners to deduct a portion of their sewer fees from federal taxes.

MacDonald noted that the June 17 announcement in no way affects current construction under way on Deer Island. Approximately 2,500 workers are now traveling to the construction site daily. About 43 percent of the work is complete on the first phase of the primary treatment plant and other facilities, scheduled to open in July 1994. Work is also proceeding on the 9.5 mile outfall tunnel, the secondary treatment plant, sludge digesters and other related facilities.

WHAT IS A "SLIPPED DISC"?

The term "slipped disc" has been used commonly by doctors and patients alike, to generally describe an injury to one of the 23 "jelly-like" shock absorbers found between each of the bones or vertebrae of the spine. These intervertebral discs are ligaments which actually consist of a "jelly-like" middle surrounded by rings of fibrocartilage. While these discs do not actually "slip" from between the spinal bones, they can be worn, compressed, bulged or ruptured, causing pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves. It is the bulged or ruptured disc that pressures or "pinches" the nerve which actually causes the severe back and/or leg pain that may result. Often times, muscle spasms will accompany a disc injury as the body attempts to stabilize or splint the damaged lower back or neck.

While the intervertibral discs may loose some of their height and resiliency and dry out slightly over the years, the final straw of a disc injury may be a sudden twist or slip, an improper lift, or a seemingly minor accident.

Chiropractors are well qualified in the prevention and/or treatment of disc injuries and often employ the modern technology of M.R.I. or Catscan to ensure accurate diagnosis. Chiropractors use a drugless, non-surgical approach which may include manipulation, forms of therapy, proper exercise and bed rest.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A reader sent me the following poem by an Unknown Author and we would like to share it with you...

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing
And you like him, or if you love him, say it now!

Don't withhold your approbation
'Till the parson makes oration
And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow.
For no matter how you shout it
He won't really care about it
He won't know how many tear drops you have shed.
If you think some praise is due him
Now's the time to hand it to him
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead!
More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny
And the hearty warm approval of a friend;
Oh! it gives to life a savor
And strengthens those who waver
And gives one heart and courage to the end.
If one earns your praise - bestow it!
If you like him - let him know it!
Let the words of true encouragement be said!
Let's not wait 'till life is over,
And he lies beneath the clover
For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.
There is no substitute for praise from a well-meaning and good heart.

granted at the site because of "the type of message it environmentally sends."

Applicant Paul Miller said he and his partner, Glen McAuliffe, had taken all necessary precautions in a case of a break-in at the store. He said he would have an alarm system at the site which would automatically dial the police station during any break-in, as well as a backup Honeywell system which would notify authorities in the event of the phone lines being cut.

Miller said iron bars would also be placed on the windows and doors at the site, further frustrating any would-be burglar.

Board members remained firm in their opposition, but agreed that if no ammunition license were granted, they would have no problems with the store being operated at the site.

Miller said the ammunition license would probably be "50 to 80 percent" of the store's drawing power, and his partner agreed.

"Fishing and camping are more seasonal than hunting," said McAuliffe.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, the only board member who spoke in favor of the license, noted that Miller already has a license from the federal government allowing him to buy and sell weapons from his home. Mulvey said that by applying to the board for the license to open the store, Miller was seeking to make the weapons sales a "legitimate" business.

"These people have good character," said Mulvey. "There is a proliferation around the United States of people with these (federal government) licenses working out of basements, their homes, or whatever. He (Miller) wants to go legitimate with this."

When Mulvey made a motion to grant the ammunition license request, however, it was not seconded by a single board member.

"The motion fails," said City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman. "Gentlemen (Miller and McAuliffe), you'll have to come before us at a later time."

Shea said after the meeting that because the motion received no second and the board did not actually take a vote on the matter, the applicants may reapply for the same license at a different location whenever they choose to do so.

Rev. Ketcham said, "No comment" and hung up.

The Sun also asked his attorney, George G. Burke, to comment on the matter. Burke would only say:

"There are two sides to this. He had many friends and supporters in the church who were with him. He is a very fine man.

"A friendly disposition of the matter was reached on both sides."

Church Moderator Lisa Andre was also asked to comment.

"I wasn't prepared for a call from a newspaper so I have no comment other than he did resign and we did accept the resignation."

Andre reportedly submitted her resignation as moderator effective in September. Her husband, John, a retired Quincy police officer, plans to enter the ministry and they will move to Maine where he will study at the Bangor Theological Seminary.

Harry Massey, Jr., of Easton, formerly of Quincy, was elected moderator-elect.

William MacDonald of Weymouth, formerly of Quincy, chairman of the Church Committee, also had no comment on the resignation.

He said his committee will conduct a search for a permanent replacement for Rev. Ketcham.

The committee held an emergency meeting Monday night to find an interim minister for this Sunday's worship service.

Rev. M. James Workman, former pastor of First Congregational Church in Braintree, was selected. Ironically, the title of his sermon Sunday will be "A Rainbow for God's Children After the Storm."

Rev. Ketcham came to Bethany in September, 1991 succeeding Rev. J. William Arnold. He was serving at three churches in the New Braintree area when he was called in June of that year. He is a former New York civil engineer.

Earlier this year, Rev. Ketcham was named "Man of the Year" by the Protestant Social Service Bureau.

That in itself touched off a controversy as those members of the church dissatisfied with his performance as pastor criticized his selection for the honor.

A letter sent to the Protestant Bureau protesting his selection cited such alleged problems as inappropriate language, and actions, using incorrect names at weddings and funerals and other alleged incidents.

Residents To Receive Discount On Flood Insurance Policies

Quincy residents will receive a five percent discount on flood insurance as policies are renewed on or after Oct. 1.

In a letter to Mayor James Sheets, FEMA Deputy Administrator Francis Reilly informed Quincy that the five percent discount is a result of Quincy's participation in the Flood Insurance Programs Community Rating System.

Quincy became involved in the rating system through the efforts of Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson who brought the program to the attention of the Sheets administration.

Earlier this year, DPW Commissioner David Colton submitted documentation which was provided by various city departments and compiled by the engineering department. The documentation included flood plain management, flood emergency education and flood hazard mitigation efforts the city undertakes as a matter of course.

The program will become a permanent addition to the responsibilities of the engineering department. The department hopes to improve Quincy's rating in future years to produce greater savings.

Bellotti, Ayers Office Hours Tonight

Rep. Michael Bellotti and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers will hold office hours tonight (Thursday) from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Atlantic Neighborhood Center.

Citizens are encouraged to attend to discuss issues on both the state and city levels.

Morrisette Wins Exhibition Game At Hall Of Fame

By TOM SULLIVAN

After a week off from Zone 6 competition, the defending champion Morrisette Legion baseball team returned to Zone 6 action Tuesday night against Weymouth.

During the past week Morrisette broke even in exhibition games against out-of-state teams.

The team traveled to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., and walloped Whitestown, N.Y., 9-0, at Doubleday Field, Sunday.

The team traveled by bus on Saturday and checked into a motel. The players visited the Hall of Fame and met curator Ted Spencer, formerly of Quincy, and toured the facility. It was the first visit to the Hall for most of the players.

Coach Dave Perdios used five pitchers, Mike Patch, Sean Donovan, Matt O'Toole, Pat Bryan and Dan Duncan. They combined for a four-hitter and struck out 10.

The highlight of the game was a long three-run homer by Jay Schnabel (he also had two singles). Also contributing to the attack were Dave Reinhart with a double and a single, Chris Cotter with a double, Robbie Kane with a double and Donovan, O'Toole, Duncan, Tom Malvesti, Adam Calvert, Pat Shea and Jim Sapienza all with a single each.

Last Thursday night at Braintree Morrisette dropped a 4-3 decision to touring Gainsville, Fla., which was on a two-week tour along the East Coast.

Gainsville starter Ricky Burton held Morrisette to a single by Schnabel. he hurt his arm and was relieved in the fifth inning.

The Florida team led off the game with three straight hits off starter O'Toole but scored only one unearned run.

It scored another run off Donovan on a hit, double steal and ground out. It widened its lead to 4-0 by scoring two runs off Duncan on three hits.

Reinhart greeted the new Florida pitcher with a home run over the left field fence, followed by a walk to Serge Belcastro and a triple by Malvesti, who scored on a ground out. Duncan also singled but Shea and Kane grounded out to end any further damage.

Morrisette put two more on in the sixth as Sapienza led off with a single but was thrown out trying to steal. Schnabel walked and, with two outs, Belcastro singled, but a strikeout ended the threat and the game.

Morrisette has a busy schedule starting with last Tuesday's game with Weymouth. It played a makeup game at Milton last night (Wednesday), it will play host to Canton tonight (Thursday) at 8:30 at Adams Field, will face a New York all-star team Friday at 5:30 at Braintree, will play at West Roxbury next Tuesday at 8 o'clock and will host East Hartford, last year's Connecticut and Northeast Regional champion that eliminated Morrisette from the regionals, next Wednesday at 7:30 at Adams Field.

MATT FLYNN of North Quincy, a freshman, played for the Dean Junior College basketball team, which finished with a 19-8 record this season. Flynn, a graduate of North Quincy High, was one of four point guards. The son of William and Maureen Flynn, he was sidelined for a part of the season with an ankle injury.

5 Former Quincy Youth Players Oilers' Starters

By TOM SULLIVAN

Chris Noble, one of Quincy High's premier quarterbacks of recent years, is one of five Quincy and North Quincy players who will be starters for the Randolph Oilers of the Eastern Football League, who open their season July 9.

Noble is joined by three former North Quincy standouts, wide receiver Kevin MacDougal, and linebacker Ryan Craig and Dave Joyce, a center, and Quincy's Joe Baker, a big 265-pound offensive lineman.

"All five are outstanding players and should help us tremendously," said Oiler owner and GM Peter O'Kane. "This is our 20th year in the league and we have been blessed with excellent quarterbacks throughout the years and I believe Noble will follow in the same tradition."

The Oilers open July 9 against the Boston Braves, formerly the Hyde Park Cowboys, at 7:30 p.m. at Randolph's Memorial Field. Noble played one season for the Cowboys.

The other teams in the league are the Mitchell Memorial Club Cobras, of Middleboro, the Braves, the Hockamock team out of Mansfield, the Charlestown Townies, the Medway Tigers, Ocean Park, R.I., Merrimack Valley and two Maine teams, the Sabres and the Lewiston Warriors.

FREEZING OUT CFC'S

Most people are aware that chlorofluorocarbons (CFC's) are largely responsible for the deterioration of the earth's upper ozone layer. It is also a fact that the single largest source of CFC emissions has been automobile air-conditioning systems which use a refrigerant known as R-12 (tradename, Freon). In an effort to curb CFC emissions, the EPA has limited the sale of small containers of CFC refrigerant to certified technicians (and substantially raised its price), thereby preventing driveway mechanics from recharging their own systems. By the end of 1995, all production of CFC's will be phased out completely, to be replaced by the non-CFC refrigerant R-134a. Up to that time, lost refrigerant in leaking systems can only be replaced by a certified technician with recycling equipment.

HINT: It is not possible to introduce non-CFC R-134a into an older air-conditioning system intended for use with R-12.

It is very important to keep your car properly maintained. Our entire staff of technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is dedicated to providing automotive service excellence, so if its necessary to repair your air-conditioning system or if you are having a problem with your brakes and muffler, we suggest you come in and see us first. We will give your car the care it should have. For all your automotive needs, we are located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Car Transport Firm Told Not To Use City Streets

A car transport company cannot use city streets for business purposes, the Quincy License Board ruled Tuesday.

At the request of Police Chief Francis Mullen, New England Auto Terminal owner Michael Venuti was brought before the board to answer charges that he had violated city ordinances by allowing his company to load and unload cars from on McGrath Highway near Elm St. The business, which is located at 190 Elm St., delivers cars around the country for people who are moving or on vacation.

Neighbors have also complained that the car carriers used by the company make too much noise when they arrive late at night and early in the morning.

Venuti, who appeared before the License Board March 16 because of similar complaints, had said at the time he would use a private lot off Field St. for his business. Venuti said Tuesday, however, that the land at the Field St. site had since been sold and he again has had to use McGrath Highway until he finds another lot.

Mullen said an automobile recently slipped off a car carrier on McGrath Highway, which could have caused innocent passers-by to be injured or killed.

"This is what bothered me before, that something like this might happen," said Mullen, who referred to Venuti's recent use of McGrath Highway as "defiance" of the instructions the board gave him at its March 16 meeting.

Venuti's attorney, Melvin Ravech, asked that the board continue the matter until its July 27 summer meeting to allow time for Venuti to find another lot. In the interim, both Ravech and Venuti agreed, the company would not load or unload any vehicles at McGrath Highway.

Mosquito Spraying Today

The Quincy Health Department has been notified by the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project that an early morning application of the pesticide resmethtrin, for the control of adult mosquitos, will occur today (Thursday).

The areas east of Hancock St. and east of Washington will receive the application. The area may include some of the following neighborhoods: Squantum, eastern portions of Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, coastal Wollaston, Merrymount, Houghs Neck, Germantown and coastal Quincy Point.

Selected areas west of Hancock St. and west of Washington St. were scheduled to be sprayed Tuesday.

Sprayings occur between 2 and 7 a.m. If inclement weather occurs (high winds, rain or low temperatures), or equipment fails, the application is added to the next scheduled day, or rescheduled the following day.

Elderly Woman, Peace Activists Picket Outside Quincy IRS Office

An 85-year-old woman who in conscience has refused for 26 years to pay income taxes in support of war and killing such as the recent missile attack on Baghad planned to picket the Quincy Internal Revenue Service office Wednesday.

Cynthia Foster of Jamaica Plain was joined by representatives of various peace organizations and other supporters in a demonstration which was scheduled to begin at noon in front of the IRS office at 1458 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

They protested seizure by the IRS of the elderly woman's bank account. "I'll be there because I refuse to pay taxes for military spending, for war, for killing," Foster said in a statement released to the Sun before it went to press Tuesday.

She and her supporters deplore the killing of innocent civilians and the wounding of many more in last Saturday's missile attack ordered by President Clinton. They point to the killing of hundreds of hundreds of innocent, non-combatant civilians in military actions of recent years against Panama, Grenada, Lybia, Iranians in the Persian Gulf, Lebanon, and especially the Gulf War, where thousands of children have died in the war and its aftermath.

Among those who planned to be part of the demonstration will be members of New England War Tax Resistance, and of Veterans for Peace.

License Board Takes Summer Recess

The Quincy License Board is in recess for the summer.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, the board chairman, said Tuesday the board will hold one summer meeting scheduled for July 27 at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

The board will resume its regular schedule Sept. 8, Shea said.

City of Quincy, Massachusetts

Office of the Mayor

Welcome to Historic Quincy

This year I am proud to welcome you to Quincy, the City of Presidents and extend a cordial invitation to visit the National Park Service Visitors Center, located at Presidents Place, in Quincy Square.

Quincy has many places of historical interest -- the birth-places of two Presidents (the only father and son Presidents to serve this great Country), John and John Quincy Adams; the burial places of these two Presidents and their wives; Adams National Historic Site (sometimes called the Adams' Summer White House; Abigail Adams Cairn; Adams Academy Building (now the home of the Quincy Historical Society); Colonel Josiah Quincy House; Granite Railway Incline; Hancock Cemetery; Quincy City Hall (Greek Revival structure of Quincy Granite); the Quincy Homestead; and many other sites.

Soon the U.S.S. Salem will be released to the City of Quincy by the United States Navy to be berthed at the former Fore River Shipyard. Plans are well underway for the new United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum which will also be at the same location.

Enjoy your visit in this great City while you brush up on history and come back again soon.

Sincerely,

James A Sheets

After Painstaking Renewal Project

John Adams Birthplace Has Original Look

The birthplace of John Adams, second president of the United States, looks like it did when he and his parents, Deacon John and Susanna lived there.

It took on that "as it was" look after a painstaking six-year reconstruction project in the 1980s.

Visitors to the John Adams Birthplace, which peers over the shoulder of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace on Franklin St., South Quincy, can now see more completely how the house looked.

The house is well furnished and looks like it did when John and Abigail lived in it.

The final renovation touches were to the room where Deacon John Adams made shoes.

The rooms are furnished from the period of Deacon John and his wife and probably reflected her tast. They are furnished not elaborately, but sufficiently to have a lived-in look.

The birthplace was probably built in the late 17th or early 18th Century for less than $1,000 in the pounds of the day and the clapboards were hand-hewn from trees that grew in its fields.

The pine clapboards of the John Adams Birthplace are unpainted and the U.S. National Park Service, which restored the house, insists that based on research the house will remain that way, despite the fact that John Adams was known to have preferred it white.

For more than 80 years they were the little red farmhouses at the foot of Penn's Hill. But research turned up the fact that Abigail Adams, the wife of the second president, wanted them "stone" and white in color.

Since what Abigail wanted, Abigail usually got, in the summer of 1980, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace was repainted to Abigail's taste, the "stone" color determined to be a sort of off-white mixed especially for the occasion from a late 18th Century formula.

The John Adams Birthplace was painted white so that both houses would look as they did in 1807, the year the last Adams lived in them, but later research indicated it was unpainted.

The birthplaces, parts of which date back to the 17th Century, were taken over by the National Park Service on May 1, 1979, after years of semi-neglect due to lack of restoration and maintenance funds.

The John Quincy Adams Birthplace re-opened in 1982 for the first time in three years after undergoing a $175,000 rehabilitation faithful to the lives of the prominent family that lived there.

If you close your eyes and give your imagination full rein you can see them now as they were more than 200 years ago.

JOHN ADAMS BIRTHPLACE

There is Abigail Adams in the new pink gingham dress. There is the curly-haired infant, Thomas Boylston Adams, bouncing on his father's knee. And there is John Adams, home from the Continental Congress in Philadelphia for the first time in a year, sitting at the table drinking a cup of tea.

The setting, right down to the pewter plates and candlesticks, is reproduced faithfully in the corner room of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

The furnishings of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace are precise reproductions of those that were in the house when the second president lived there. The originals are at the Old House, the Adams National Historic Site, from which they cannot be removed under the ownership agreement with the Adams family.

The most interesting room in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace is John Adams' old law office, in which the elder Adams, James Bowdoin and Samuel Adams drafted the Massachusetts State Constitution, the model on which the U.S. Constitution was based.

The law office is furnished pretty much as John Adams had it.

There is the hutch table on which he wrote the State Constitution; the bookcase filled with books that probably were there in John Adams' day, judging by an inventory of his law library; his old writing desk and two chairs that were copies from those in his second law office in Boston.

Pastels of Abigail and John, originally done in Salem, were photographically reproduced by photographer George Dow and now hang in Abigail's sitting room. The originals are in the possession of the Massachusetts Historical Society.

Abigail's old kitchen cabinet was discovered serving as a bookcase in the Old House.

The cabinet was reproduced and installed in the kitchen of the John Quincy Adams Birthplace along with copies of the blue china that John purchased when he was emissary to Holland.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 to Nov. 10 with guided tours. The last full tour is at 4:15 p.m. Admission is $2.00 for adults and children over age 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days. Park passes available.

The Adams Cottages

Our Only Father - Son Presidents Born Here

It was the North Precinct of Braintree then, a sprawling tract of woods and farmlands on the gently rolling hills some 10 miles south of the Boston Stone along the winding Coast Road to Plymouth.

Something less than 1,500 people lived in the North, Middle and South Precincts of Braintree in the year 1735 and two of them were Deacon John Adams, 44, farmer and cordwainer, and his wife, Susanna, 26.

Their home was a weathered gray farmhouse with a high peaked roof and attached lean-to kitchen set on seven acres of farmland at roughly Milepost 11 of the Coast Road, just where it turned up the wooded slopes of Penn's Hill toward the Monatiquot River ford.

He was a pillar of his rural community. Mr. Adams was, a deacon in the First Parish Church, a lieutenant in the Braintree militia and a town constable with a forceful personality and tact that enabled him to collect taxes from his neighbors.

He was a hard-working farmer whose cider was acknowledged best in town, he worked in leather during the winter months, and he had an eye on an adjoining piece of farmland, 9½ acres owned by the Billings brothers, complete with a farmhouse similar to his own.

Susanna Adams was a Boylston of Brookline, socially a cut above her husband, and perhaps there were moments in the simple house at the foot of Penn's Hill when she thought of the home of her uncle, the noted Dr. Zabdiel Boylston of Brookline, whose furniture came all the way from London.

Their first child, a son who was named John for his father, was born in the southeast bedroom of the farmhouse on Oct. 19, 1735 (Old Style). He would become the second president of the United States.

Deacon John purchased the house next door for 500 pounds in 1744 and it was ready 20 years later when young John moved in with his brand new bride, the former Abigail Smith, the preacher's sparkling daughter from the next town of Weymouth.

Their second child, a son who was named John Quincy Adams after his great grandfather, Col. John Quincy, was born there on July 11, 1767. He would become the sixth president of the United States.

The junction of Franklin St., Independence Ave., and President Ave. in South Quincy is the only place in the country where the birthplaces of two presidents who are father and son stand side by side in the same city.

The precise age of the two cottages at the foot of Penn's Hill is not known.

When the John Adams Birthplace was retored by the Daughters of Revolution in 1897, a brick bearing the date 1681 was discovered under the southeast corner, and the house was known to have been occupied by one Joseph Penniman in that year.

And a man named Samuel Belcher was living in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace as early as 1663, when it was little more than a one-room shack with fireplace. It was built to its present size in 1716, as evidenced by a date brick found in the new fireplace.

According to Henry Adams, a grandson of President John Quincy Adams, no member of the family lived in the cottages after 1818, although ownership remained in the Adams family until 1940.

Both houses were restored by the Adams Realty Trust, the John Quincy Adams Birthplace in 1896 at a cost of $1,650 and the John Adams Birthplace a year later at an expense of $515.49.

They were presented to the city of Quincy in 1940 and supervised by the Quincy Historical Society until they were turned over to the U.S. National Park Service in 1979.

The Adams Birthplaces are at 133 and 141 Franklin St. They are open daily, including Sundays and holidays, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. from April 19 through Nov. 10, with guided tours. Admission is $2 for adults and children over age 16, which also includes admission to the Adams Mansion within seven days.

HISTORIC QUINCY

The City of Quincy has almost everything a city can offer with its brilliant, magnificent shoreline, its national historic sites, its two colleges and its neighborhoods. It is rich in heritage, natural and human resources – and it is particularly enriched by its unique blend of old and new.

First settled in 1625 at Mount Wollaston, separated in 1640 from Boston as a town called Braintree, our Quincy was established as a town of its own in 1792 and incorporated as a city in 1888.

It continues to be one of the finest cities in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It produced two presidents of the United States. The mortal remains of Quincy's two most famous sons, Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams, lie at the First Parish Church, Unitarian, in Quincy Square. The citizens of the City of Quincy are very proud of its history and, working together, they are ready to meet the challenges they face as they look to the future and the 21st century.

ADAMS MANSION NATIONAL HISTORIC SITE

The Adams Mansion

Summer White House And Home Of 2 Presidents

Josiah Quincy, the one who built railroads around New England and founded the cooperative bank movement in Massachusetts, was in his boyhood a frequent visitor to the mansion where John Adams, the second president of the United States, lived in retirement.

Later, he wrote with wry amusement about Sunday dinner with the aging patriarch of the Adams clan and his wife, Abigail, a dinner that inevitably began with a thick pudding made from boiled corn meal.

"...it being thought desirable to take the edge off one's hunger before reaching the joint," wrote Quincy.

"Indeed, it was considered wise to stimulate the young to fill themselves with pudding, by the assurance that the boy who managed to eat the most of it should be helped most abundantly to the meat, which was to follow.

"It need not be said that neither the winner nor his competitors found much room for meat at the close of their contest; and so the domestic economy of the arrangement was very apparent."

Quincy, as a young Harvard law student, stopped by several times a week in summer to talk and read to the former President. He found the visits delightful. Indeed, the Adams of the cold and austere public mien was never more relaxed and warm than he was at his country home in Quincy.

The original house, a small part of the present building, was built probably in 1731 by Major Leonard Vassall, a wealthy West Indian sugar planter who lived in Cambridge and apparently used it for a summer place.

His daughter, Mrs. Anna Borland, who was a Loyalist during the Revolution, abandoned the house to leave with the British forces when they evacuated Boston in 1776. For a while it was used as a haven for rebel refugees fleeing the war zones.

Mrs. Borland returned to reclaim the house after the Revolution and John Adams, then in Europe as the first American ambassador to London, purchased it for 600 pounds through the good offices of the Cotton Tufts of Weymouth, his wife Abigail's cousin.

The Adamses were about to return to the United States after seven years abroad and Abigail was concerned that John's books and papers and the furnishings they had acquired in Europe would not fit into their old farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill where they lived before.

The deal was closed on Sept. 26, 1787, and the deed is still on file in the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds in which the Adams purchase is specified as a house, barn and other buildings on seven acres of land with some 76 acres more scattered around the North Precinct of Braintree.

There are indications that Abigail was at first disappointed with her purchase. It was a lot smaller than she remembered it.

"In height and breadth it feels like a wren's house," she wrote to her daughter, Abigail, the wife of Col. William S. Smith, "Let Col. Smith come without heels to his shoes or he will not be able to walk upright."

Abigail and John Adams moved into the house, which they named "Peacefield," after his retirement from the presidency in 1801 and lived there until they died.

It was from the "Old House," as the family called it, that John Adams carried on his long and increasingly warm correspondence with his old rival, Thomas Jefferson of Virginia, who had succeeded him in the presidency. In retirement, they became firm friends as they outlasted their contemporaries.

"Thomas Jefferson lives," whispered John Adams as he lay dying in the Old House. He was wrong. Jefferson, in far away Monticello, Va., had preceded him in death by a few hours on the same day.

It was July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence.

The Old House which served as summer White House for two presidents, was home to four generations of the Adams family, the last, Brooks Adams, dying in February, 1927. It was taken over by the U.S. National Park Service in 1946 to become the Adams Mansion National Historic Site.

The site at 135 Adams St. is open to the public from April 19 to Nov. 10 daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The last full tour os at 4:15 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults and children over 16, and includes admission to the Adams Birthplaces within seven days.

THE FIRST PARISH CHURCH

TOMBS OF PRESIDENTS John and John Quincy Adams and their wive in First Parish Church.

First Parish Church

Where 2 Presidents, Their Wives Are Entombed

In 1949, when the present First Parish Church building, the Old Stone Temple, was 121 years old, it was ruled officially that the church is older than the city itself and the town before it.

It was then that the late historian William Churchill Edwards was called upon to resolve a minor dispute that involved the rounding of the corners of the church lot in downtown Quincy.

"Almost the first subject to which the minds of the earlv settlers of our country were turned after they landed here was the formation ot a church," said Edwards.

The first church in these parts was established as a branch of the Church of Boston in 1636. It became a church in its own right in 1639. The Mount Wollaston section of Boston was incorporated as the town of Braintree on May 23, 1640. Ergo, the church came first!

Quincy's first house of worship, the branch of the Church of Boston, was called the "Chappel of Ease," and if it was neglected by early historians it was because its first pastor, the Rev. John Wheelwright, his sister-in-law, Anne Hutchinson, and others were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony for heresy.

The new church, the one that lasted, was gathered by convenant on Sept. 26, 1639, and it was holding services in its third meeting house in 1732 when its pastor was the Rev. John Hancock, father of the bold first signer of the Declaration of Independence. Son John also was a member.

The affairs of the church and the town of Quincy were one and the same until 1824 when church and state were separated in Massachusetts and the Congregational Society was established to handle parochial matters.

The old Hancock meeting house was still standing, although a little run down, on the south lawn of the present church lot in 1822 when former President John Adams deeded the interest from certain of his lands and granite from his pastures to build a stone temple.

It was completed in Greek revival style at a cost of $30,488.56-which was some $3,000 less than architect Alexander Parrish's estimate-and dedicated Nov. 12, 1828, with John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States holding Pew No. 1.

Even before the church was dedicated, the mortal remains of its benefactors, John and Abigail Adams, were transferred to tombs in the crypt of the church and, in 1852, the bodies of John Quincy Adams and his wife, Louisa, joined them

It is the only church in the United States in which two Presidents are buried. The only other church in which a President is buried is the Episcopal Cathedral in Washington D.C., where President Woodrow Wilson is entombed.

An active Unitarian Universalist Church, it is open to the public for tours Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Wednesday, Nov. 10. Donation of $1 is encouraged. For further information call the church office at 773-1290.

Why We Pronounce It 'Quin-zee'

Why do we pronounce Quincy "Quin-zee" when just about everyone else in the country refers to it as "Quin-see?"

There are 19 other Quincys in the U.S., but they pronounce it "Quin-see."

Can they be right and we be wrong?

Not according to Quincy's late city historian, William C. Edwards who never budged an inch whenever the argument ever came up. And it still comes up.

The reason we pronounce it "Quin-zee" is very simple.

"That's the way the Quincy family pronounced it," he used to explain.

"The original Quincy family which settled here at Mount Wollaston pronounced it 'Quin-zee,' including Col. John Quincy after whom Quincy, Mass.--the first Quincy--was named in 1792."

Colonel Quincy was the great grandfather of sixth president John Quincy Adams.

Apparently all 19 other Quincys in the U.S. were named after John Quincy Adams.

And, apparently the early settlers of those communities thought John Quincy pronounced it John "Quin-see."

Anyway, that is how Edwards explained it. Seems like a sound argument.

City Hall

Seat Of Government For 149 Years

Daniel and Hannah French deeded the land to the town of Quincy for $1,000 with the stipulation that it "shall not be used for any other purpose than as a place for a Town House for the said Inhabitants,"

And, with a few minor transgressions of that vow, the solid structure of Quincy granite on Quincy Square has been just that for the past 149 years, the nerve center of government for first the town and then the city.

It was the great hall on the second floor that the popular John Quincy Adams II, grandson of a president of the United States, held forth as town moderator for many years and, with his brother, Charles Francis Adams Jr., gave informal direction to town affairs.

One of the earliest ordinances passed by the first City Council on March 8, 1889 was the adoption of the City Seal emblazoned with the four most significant dates in Quincy's history:

1625, for the first settlement on Mount Wollaston; 1640, for its separation from Boston as the town of Braintree; 1792, for its separation from Braintree as the town of Quincy; and 1888, for its incorporation as a city.

CITY HALL

Designed by the architect Solomon Willard - who received $280 for drawing up the plans and superintending construction for five months - the City Hall was completed and occupied for the first time on Nov. 1, 1844.

It cost exactly $19,115.93 to build, including 88 cents to John Briesler for lead to seal the chimney.

In 1979, when a 3 and one half story reflective glass addition was built behind the old City Hall, the cost was $1.9 million.

Quincy Was Almost Hancock

If some of the early settlers had their way, you would be living in the city of Hancock today instead of the city of Quincy.

Quincy, like George Washington, was born on Feb. 22.

On Feb. 22, 1792, the General Court of Massachusetts passed an act incorporating the North Precinct of Old Braintree as the separate town of Quincy.

But, just before that, quite a few of the residents wanted the new town named after native-son John Hancock instead of Boston-born Col. John Quincy.

Colonel Quincy, who had represented Old Braintree in the General Court, was the great grandfather of President John Quincy Adams.

Many people today think Quincy was named after the sixth President but the honor actually goes to his great grandfather.

John Hancock who was born in the North Precinct, was governor of Massachusetts when the General Court passed the act incorporating the new town as Quincy. He signed the act the following day.

But at the first town meeting of the new town in May, a petition was presented to change the name from Quincy to Hancock in honor of the patriot and first signer of the Declaration of Independence. The move was finally defeated after a stormy verbal battle.

Opponents argued that Hancock

was still alive and that the honor should go to a distinguished-but deceased-person.

Colonel Quincy met those requirements. He was both distinguished - and deceased.

He had represented Old Braintree in the General Court from 1717 to 1741 - 12 of those years as Speaker of the House. He died in 1767 at age 77 -- two days after John Quincy Adams was born.

Quincy became a city June 11, 1888.

But a lot of people will go right on thinking Quincy was named after John Quincy Adams.

THE GRANITE RAILWAY

The Granite Railway

First Commercial Railroad In U.S.

It was the darndest looking contraption that many amoung the distinguished gathering had ever seen.

Each of the three wagons had four wheels, 6 and one half feet in diameter, surmounted by a smaller gear wheel which was used to raise and lower the cargo platform that was slung low between the wheels.

It rode on foot-high wooden rails, topped by iron plate, which rested on stone sleepers or cross ties, placed eight feet apart and firmly supported on crushed granite to a depth beyond the frost line.

On Saturday, Oct. 7, 1826, the wagons were laden with 16 tons of the finest Quincy granite and the opening day guests were properly amazed when a single horse moved the whole thing with ease more than three miles to a special wharf on the Neponset River.

The granite blocks, a particularly hard and weather-resistant stone capable of taking a brilliant polish, were en route to Charlestown, where they were building a monument to the Battle of Bunker Hill.

The Granite Railway, the first such commercial venture in the United States, was built specifically to transport stone for the Bunker Hill Monument.

That it became successful, and a model for others around the country, is a tribute to three vastly dissimilar men, the engineer Gridley Bryant, the architect Solomon Willard and the financier, Col. Thomas Handasyd Perkins.

Bryant was 27 at the time but already an engineer of note. He invented the eight wheeled railroad car and, when a fellow named Ross Winans of Baltimore sued to establish a patent on it, Bryant was able to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the U.S. Supreme Court.

Willard, then 43, was a great bear of a man, gentle, obliging, industrious. Frivolity, it was said, was alien to him and he was never known to run. He could be crotchety, too. He was a carpenter turned wood-carver, turned stone-carver and, finally architect.

Perkins was the autocratic, 52-year-old merchant king of Boston who was said to have been offered the post of Secretary of the Navy by President Washington and turned it down with the observation that he owned more ships than the Navy.

It was Perkins who lobbied the Railway's charter through a puzzled and obstinate State Legislature, which had never been called upon to incorporate a commercial railroad before. It was Perkins who financed it, too, largely with his own money.

Even in its early days, the Granite Railway was a tourist attraction of some magnitude.

Daniel Webster, who used to stop off for a pick-me-up in Quincy en route from Boston and Washington to his home in Marshfield, viewed it and decided that it would never succeed because of the frost that would form on the rails in the winter.

The President of the United States, a local boy named John Quincy Adams, visited in August, 1827, got caught in a thunderstorm and took shelter in a shed where Willard's stone-cutters were hacking away at monument granite.

A group of visitors were riding up the Railway's incline in an empty car on July 25, 1832, when the chain broke and catapulted them over a 40-foot cliff. One was killed in what may have been the first railroad fatality in the United States.

The Granite Railway Co. survived until 1870, some 27 years after the Bunker Hill Monument was finished, when most of its track was taken over by the Old Colony Railroad, which in turn became a division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Today much of the roadbed, over which freight moved commercially on rails for the first time in America, is buried under the macadam of the Southeast Expressway.

The incline of the old Railway has been restored and is located at the dead end of Mullin Ave. in West Quincy. It is open to the public year round, 24 hours a day. There is no admission charge.

Moswetuset Hummock

'Birthplace Of Massachusetts'

The Indians saw it as a hill (wetuset) shaped like an arrowhead (mos) so they called it "Moswetuset" and when English tongues got through mangling the word it came out "Massachusetts," which became the name of the bay and then the state.

The little wooded hillock near the junction of East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive was once the seat of the sachem Chickatabot, who comes down through the pages of Quincy history as a rather pathetic figure.

He was the chief of the Moswetuset Indians, a once great tribe that occupied the coast north of Plymouth.

A few years before, under the great sachem Nanepashemet, the Moswetuset had been able to field some 3,000 warriors for a war with the Nanepashemet was killed.

Then came the plague.

In two years the mighty Moswetuset were all but wiped out. No more than 60 of them were left to till their fields on the banks of the Neponset River. Sachem Chickatabot fled his home on the hill in Wollaston and took refuge on Moswetuset Hummock.

That was the situation in 1621 when Capt. Myles Standish landed from a shallop with an exploring party of Plymouth Pilgrims that included the Indian guide Squanto (or Tsquantum), whose name was given to the peninsula that stuck out in the bay.

The tragic Chickatabot died not long after the Pilgrims' visit and he was succeeded as sachem by his son, Josiah Wampatuck, a boy who knew a good deal when he saw one.

Wampatuck sold what was left of his virtually deserted tribal lands to a group of whites for 12 pounds, 10 shillings. The lands included most of what is today the city of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Randolph and Holbrook.

Moswetuset Hummock, identified by a marker stone and maintained in its natural state, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

The Thomas Crane Library

A Romanesque Architectural Beauty

He came to Quincy as a boy of 7, grew to young manhood on a farm in Quincy Point, learned the granite-cutters' trade, and left at the age of 26 to win fame and fortune in stone in New York City.

That was the last Quincy saw of Thomas Crane for half a century until one February day in 1880, five years after his death, when his son, Albert, appeared with $20,000 with which to build a memorial -- preferably a library -- to his father.

"My father always retained a strong feeling for the town of Quincy," was his only explanation.

Albert Crane himself chose the man to design the building, Henry Hobson Richardson, grandson of the English scientist Dr. Joseph Priestly and the foremost architect of the day.

His reputation was so formidable that he was able to tell Crane, "I can not guarantee that the building, when completed, shall conform to (your) ideas of beauty and taste," and still get the job.

Richardson's Romanesque building, which now houses the reference section of the library, was dedicated on May 30, 1882, with the principal oration delivered by Charles Francis Adams, Jr., chairman of the Board of Trustees.

It was Adams who gave the library its name. Albert Crane wanted it to be "The Quincy Free Public Library." Adams insisted on "The Thomas Crane Public Library."

"Who's giving the building?" asked Albert Crane.

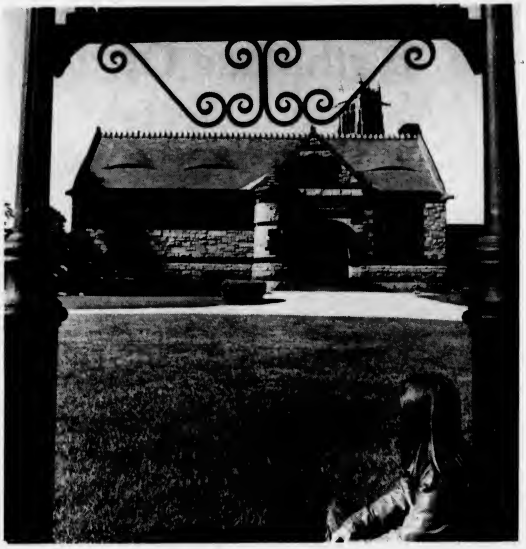
"You are, but you wouldn't have if it hadn't been for me," said Adams, who was used to having his way around Quincy, and that was that.

President John Adams' modest collection of books was housed in the library until 1893, when it was discovered that in 11 years only two persons, one of them Charles Francis Adams, Jr., had asked to see them. They were then transferred to the Boston Public Library.

At the start, Richardson's magnificent building was all but hidden behind a grain store, a hotel, an office building and four homes that lined Washington St.

Albert Crane, however, was a persistent man and, by the time he died in 1917, he had purchased and torn down all the buildings, leaving a broad expanse of open space to enhance the library.

But before the lawn could be seeded, World War I intervened and, in a burst of patriotism -- "Food will win the war," they said -- the area was planted with potatoes, tended by an expert brought in from Maine. The experiment failed.



THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"There wasn't a potato in the lot that was anywhere near as large as a golf ball," said Mayor Joseph L. Whiton. The harvest was donated to the poor farm.

Albert Crane also put up $64,000 to build the Spear St. wing of the library in 1907-08 and the Crane family gave yet another $164,000 for the free standing addition, built in 1936, that now houses the stacks and the children's section.

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., is open to the public, free of charge, Monday to Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. It is closed on Saturdays during June, July and August.

Dorothy Quincy Homestead

John Hancock's Declaration Of Love

An aura of romance surrounds the stately old house that is set back in the trees from the corner of Hancock St. and Butler Rd., on the banks of Furnace Brook.

There is the wallpaper with its blue cupids and pink flowers that was imported from France for the wedding of Dorothy Quincy, the vivacious daughter of the house, to Quincy-born John Hancock, a patriot on the run with a price on his head.

There are the words "You I Love and You alone," addressed by Hancock to his beloved Dorothy and scratched on a window pane with his diamond ring just before he fled to Lexington on the eve of the Revolution.

And there are the secret chambers and passageways, used, it was said, to hide fugitive patriots during the Revolution and, at an earlier date, even certain Englishmen fleeing a charge of regicide in the death of King Charles I.

Parts of the house were built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy, the second of the name, on land that was granted to an earlier Edmund in 1638. The major part was built in 1706 by Edmund the third. (There were six Edmunds in all, four in a direct line; two nephews.)

The house was the social center of old Braintree during the regime of the fourth Edmund, largely because he sired five beautiful daughters around whom swirled a whole future generation of judges, generals and merchant kings.

The undisputed belle of the household was Dorothy, the coquettish youngest of the eight Quincy children, whose troth was soon plighted to John Hancock, the wealthy young businessman from Boston who was already becoming known as a leader of the rebels.

Tradition has it that they were to have been married in the north parlor of the Quincy homestead with its French cupid wallpaper when Revolution intervened and John had to flee with the British on his heels.

Eventually, they were wed Aug. 28, 1775, at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of Aaron Burr (later vice president of the United States) in Fairfield, Conn.

After the Revolution and the death of Edmund the fourth in 1788 the old house passed from the Quincy family. The Hancocks wanted nothing to do with it. Their only son, John George Washington Hancock, was killed in a skating accident at age 9 while on a visit in 1787.

The house was acquired in 1904 by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who restored it with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing, and gave it to the state with the proviso that the Dames continue to run it.

John Adams 'Father'

U.S., State Constitution Both Born Here

Quincy, birthplace of John Adams, John Quincy Adams and John Hancock, also has claim to the birth of the U.S. Constitution.

The seed for this precious document was planted here.

The U.S. Constitution was modeled after the Massachusetts Constitution which was written by John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin in the law office of the John Quincy Adams birthplace in Quincy.

There is every reason to believe that John Adams did not want to go to the Massachusetts Constitution Convention in Cambridge in 1779.

He had arrived home only seven days before on the French frigate La Sensible after nearly 18 months in Paris helping to negotiate a commercial and military alliance with France. He was in such a rush to get home that he apparently landed the day before La Sensible reached Boston by rowing ashore from Nantasket Roads.

He missed his wife, Abigail, terribly, and she him.

"One was angry, another was full of Greif, and the third with Melancholy, so that I burnt them all," he wrote to her from Passy on Dec. 18, 1778, listing his complaints with her most recent letters. "If you write me in ths style I shall leave of writing intirely, it kills me.

"Am I not wretched Enough, in this Banishment, without this? What Course shall I take to convince you that my Heart is warm? I beg you would never more write to me in such a strain for it really makes me unhappy."

"How lonely are my days?" she wrote on a Sunday evening, Dec. 27, "How solitary are my Nights? How insupportable the Idea that 3000 leigues, and the vast ocean now devide us -- but devide only our persons for the Heart of my Friend is in the Bosom of his partner."

Somewhere on the vast ocean the two letters passed each other.

Paris and the dissolute court of Louis XVI held small appeal to the Puritan in John Adams, even when his closest everyday companions were Dr. Benjamin Franklin, still with an eye for the ladies at age 73, and the swashbuckling Capt. John Paul Jones, half patriot, half pirate, who had just taken command of the leaky old East Indiaman he had renamed Bon Homme Richard.

The American colonies, newly reborn as the United States of America, were going through the most dismal period of the War for Independence. Inflation was rampant: butcher's meat, a dollar to eight shillings a pound; flour, fifty dollars a hundredweight. The news from the fighting front was of defeat, privation and horror.

Like many Braintree wives whose husbands were away at war, Abigail Adams was forced into the unaccustomed role of head of the household, a function she filled with determination.

"I cannot avoid sometimes repining that the gifts of fortune were not bestowed upon us, that I might have enjoyed the happiness of spending my days with my partner," she wrote, "but as it is, I think it my duty to attend with frugality and economy to our own private affairs; and if I cannot add to our little substance, yet see to it that it is not diminished."

She abstained from drinking black market tea, allowing herself one tiny complaint: "I should like a little green (tea), but they say there is none to be had here. I only wish it for a medicine, as a relief to a nervous pain in my head to which I am sometimes subject."

John Adams attended the opening session of the Constitutional Convention in Cambridge on Wednesday, Sept. 1, 1779. On Saturday, he was named to a committee of 30 to prepare the declaration of rights and the constitution. On Monday, the committee delegated the task to a subcommittee of three, John and Samuel Adams; and James Bowdoin.

Thus it was that John Adams wound up in the law office of his home at the foot of Penn's Hill, paired with his firebrand cousin, Sam, and his ailing friend, James Bowdoin, to write a Constitution for the state of Massachusetts, which in turn became the model for the Constitution of the United States.

The patient, hard-working John Adams, of course, did most of the work.

"I was by the Convention put upon the Committee -- by the Committee upon the subcommittee -- and by the subcommittee appointed a sub subcommittee -- so that I had the honor to be principal Engineer," he wrote to his friend, Edmund Jennings. Payroll records indicate that he was paid 90 pounds for his work.

The so-called "Adams draft" of the Massachusetts Constitution was accepted by the Convention with a few alterations but by that time John Adams was long gone back to Europe, this time to help negotiate a treaty of peace with Britain and serve as America's first minister to London. He did not see the farm at the foot of Penn's Hill again for another eight years.

But he was immensely heartened by these words from the pen of his ever-loving Abigail, written on Oct. 15, 1780:

"Our Massachusetts Constitution is read with admiration in New York and pronounced by the Royal Governor as the best republican form he ever saw."

WRITING TABLE in old law office is spot where John Adams labored over his law cases in the John Quincy Adams Birthplace.

It Was Richard

For years, the first name of Capt. Wollaston, the leader of the original settlers of Quincy in 1625, was lost to history.

Only recently did the researches of H. Hobart Holly, historian of the Quincy Historical Society, turn up the information that it probably was Richard.

Quincy Quiz

What was the role in Quincy's history of "Thomas Morton of Clifford's Inn, Gent.?"

Answer:

Thomas Morton, dubbing himself the "Lord of Misrule," took control of the Mt. Wollaston settlement in 1627, changed the name to Merry Mount, erected a maypole and cavorted with the Indians until the Pilgrims of Plymouth and the Puritans of Boston put an end to such carrying ons.

What was the role in Quincy's history of Francis L. Souther?

Answer:

Francis L. Souther was a member of the Hancock Light Guards, Fourth Massachusetts Regiment, who was killed at the Battle of Big Bethel on June 10, 1861, the first Union soldier to die in combat in the Civil War.

A Third Generation Continues Our Traditions.

Quincy has changed a great deal since Sweeney Funeral Home was established in 1917. But, it's nice to know some things will never change. Like the observance of traditional values and customs.

At Sweeney Funeral Homes, older residents are quick to notice the subtle reminders of yesteryear, such as the grey gloves our funeral director still wears. Like the characteristic top hat and tails that our founder, Dennis Sweeney, wore over 30 years ago, they reflect our Tradition. One that has been built on a dignified and instinctive concern for the city's bereaved families for three generations.

Today, our founder's grand-nephew, Dennis S. Sweeney has continued the family's philosophy of maintaining a beautiful, home-like atmosphere.

And like his namesake, who started pre-arrangements in the 1940s, Dennis believes in helping residents to plan for the future. Pre-planning means that this financial decision is not left for a family to decide while they are attempting to cope with a major personal loss. It's a difficult time, a time when family members are least able to make the wisest choice.

Sweeney Funeral Homes has been helping South Shore residents with difficult decisions for over 70 years. Call Dennis Sweeney at (617) 773-2728 for a free consultation. There's no time like the present.

John Quincy Adams:

The Old Flame Still Burned

The old man's bitterness glowed from every word as he penned them in his diary on June 17, 1843, the day the Bunker Hill Monument was dedicated.

"What a name in the annals of mankind is Bunker Hill! What a day was the 17th of June, 1775! And what a burlesque upon them both is an oration upon them by Daniel Webster!"

The old man despised Webster as a turncoat to his own heritage, one whose compromises had sold out to slavery.

"The ideal associations of the thundering cannon, which I heard, and the smoke of burning Charlestown, which I saw, on that awful day . . How could I have witnessed all this at once, without an unbecoming burst of indignation.

"Daniel Webster is a heartless traitor to the cause of freedom; John Tyler [the President] is a slave-monger. What have these to do with the Quincy granite pyramid on the brow of Bunker Hill?

"I stayed home . . "

The old flame still burned in John Quincy Adams at 75.

Josiah Quincy Homestead

Lookout For Spying On British Ships

Abigail Adams stood with her great uncle, Col. Josiah Quincy, in a window of his mansion overlooking Wollaston Beach and watched the tall masts of 170 ships stand slowly out to sea. It was March 17, 1776. The British were evacuating Boston.

But even in triumph there was tragedy.

Aboard the departing ships were more than 1,000 Loyalists, Americans who had chosen King above country, and one of them was Abigail's cousin, Samuel Quincy, the Colonel's only remaining son, an avowed Tory.

"I take a long farewell," his sister, Hannah, wrote to him for one last time. "Let it not be published that a brother of such brothers fled from his country. Can you expect to walk uprightly now? Can you take fire in your bosom and not be burned?"

Two of Col. Josiah Quincy's sons had died young. Now he had no more.

But there was no time for regrets. The work of revolution had begun. The second floor of the house at what is now 20 Muirhead St., Wollaston, was a lookout from which the 66-year-old Colonel spied on British ship movements for his friend, Gen. George Washington.

A few months before, Col. Quincy watched the Royal Governor, Gen. Thomas Gage depart and he scratched on a pane of window glass the reminder: "Oct. 10, 1775, General Gage sailed for England with a fair wind."

This time he remained in the window for three days as the British tall ships moved restlessly about the Harbor as if reluctant to leave. Finally, on March 20, the last of them passed through the roadstead and out to sea.

The mansion in Wollaston reached full social flower under the aegis of the Colonel's grandson, the third Josiah, the "Great Mayor" of Boston, president of Harvard and Congressman, who called it "Tranquillia" and used it as his summer home.

It was there that the Marquis de Lafayette visited one Sunday afternoon after dinner with his friend, exPresident John Adams at the Adams Mansion. He carried flowers from the Adams garden for Mrs. Eliza Susan Quincy and her five attractive daughters.

The house was built in 1770 by the old Colonel himself, the first in a line of six Josiahs. It was said that, while most families passed their line from sire to son, the Quincys went from 'Siah to 'Siah.

But, while there were six Josiahs and innumerable Edmunds, the city was named for yet another member of the prolific family -- Col. John Quincy, the great grandfather of John Quincy Adams sixth president of the United States.

JOSIAH QUINCY HOMESTEAD

The Josiah Quincy Homestead is open to the public from June 1 to Oct. 31 Tuesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday from noon to 5 p.m. Visits may be made at other times by appointment. Admission is $4 for adults, $3.50 for senior citizens and $2 for children age 12 and under.

How Many Miles From Boston?

Stone mile markers across Hancock Street from each other indicate that the traveler is both 7¼ and 10 miles from Boston. And both are correct.

The 10-miles marker was placed on the Old Coast Road, one of the oldest highways in the United States still in existence, which went from Boston to Plymouth in 1639 by way of inland Milton.

The 7¼-mile marker was raised after the first bridge over the Neponset River was built in 1803, creating the Neponset Turnpike, which is today Hancock St. in North Quincy and Wollaston.

Abigail Adams Cairn

The Smoke Could Be Seen Over Bunker Hill

Abigail Adams was awakened at dawn in the farmhouse at the foot of Penn's Hill by the sound of far-off guns. All through the sweltering morning of June 17, 1775, as she hustled about with the chores, the dull boom of cannon intruded on her consciousness.

Riders on the Coast Road to Plymouth, stopping at the farmhouse for a drink of water, told her of a great battle underway on Breed's Hill in Charlestown.

One of them brought word that Dr. Joseph Warren had been killed in the fighting and little Abby, age 10, burst into tears , and John Quincy, nearly 8, felt bewildered and sad, for Dr. Warren was the Adams family doctor in Boston.

In the afternoon, Abigail could stand it no longer. Taking Abby and John Quincy by the hand, she walked up the Coast Road to the top of Penn's Hill and climbed up on the rocks for a better view.

The panorama of the Bay, a shimmering blue in the sunshine, spread out before them, the tiny houses on the three hills of Boston and, beyond, the black smoke rising in billows.

"Good God," exclaimed Abigail, "they are burning Charlestown!"

The scene etched itself forever in John Quincy's memory.

The early days of the Revolution were times of turmoil in Old Braintree and its North Precinct, which was later called Quincy.

Abigail's husband, John, was away most of the time at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, leaving 31-year old Abigail to manage the farm and look to the needs of four small children, Abigail, John Quincy, Charles, 5, and Thomas Boylston, 3.

There were days of alarm as the British, penned up in Boston by the brand new Continental Army, foraged up and down the coast for supplies. Refugees from occupied Boston and the inner towns of Dorchester and Roxbury sometimes slept in the kitchen and in the fields.

As the wife of a member of Congress, Abigail was a center of attention. The house on the Coast Road was a favorite stopping place for travelers to Plymouth. Politicians up from Philadelphia made it a point to stop by for a visit with John Adams' wife.

Abigail was invited to visit Gen. George Washington's headquarters at Winter Hill. The aristocratic Washington was suspect among New Englanders. He was a Virginian; he was an Anglican; and, it was said, he held slaves. But John Adams liked him and Abigail was soon charmed.

ABIGAIL ADAMS CAIRN

One day, young John Quincy came home to find his Uncle Elihu melting down Abigail's pewter spoons in the kitchen to make bullet molds. He looked at his mother and she looked back at him and something indefinable passed between them.

"Do you wonder," wrote the sixth president of the United States some 68 years later, "that a boy of 7 who witnessed this scene should be a patriot."

In 1896, where the old Coast Road (now Franklin St.) meets Viden Rd. atop Penn's Hill a stone cairn was built to mark the spot where Abigail and young John Quincy watched the Battle of Bunker Hill. It is open to the public free of charge.

First Iron Works

Steel Industry Born Here In 1644

It failed after nine years of effort and, since failure was anathema in a growing America, perhaps that is why the site and even the memory of the first commercial iron blast furnace in the United States was lost for so long.

It flourished, if that is the word, from 1644 to 1653 on the banks of the Mount Wollaston River in a section of Old Braintree called, "the Woods." It left its name on the river, now Furnace Brook in West Quincy.

Iron was an important commodity in Colonial Massachusetts, particularly for nails and pots and pans. Unfortunately, iron utensils had to be imported from England, a costly process for the penny-wise colonists.

With this in mind, John Winthrop Jr., son of the governor of the Massachusetts Bay colony [Did someone cry "Nepotism?"], went to London and formed the "Company of Undertakers for the Ironworks in New England." He, of course, was the local agent.

The Company gave Winthrop a thousand pounds of capital and a work crew of indentured servants, many of whom ran away when they heard they were going to the wilds of America. Jail was better than that!

When, after a search from Maine to Plymouth, he decided to locate in Quincy, Winthrop was also granted 3,000 acres of land, with subsidiary land rights elsewhere in the colony, and a 21-year monopoly.

The operation was deemed of such importance that the iron workers were given exemption from militia duty, this at a time when war was imminent with the Narragansett Indians and with Ninigret, sachem of the Niantics.

The first iron was turned out in 1644, but young Winthrop was fired the next year, to be succeeded by Richard Leader. It is interesting to note that one of America's earliest magnates toiled for a salary of 100 pounds a year.

The ore from which iron was blasted on the banks of Furnace Brook came from the swamps and bogs. It was not a high quality product. Water power from a dram thrown across the Brook was inadequate. Quincy iron proved to be more expensive than the imported kind.

The Company of Undertakers appealed for fresh money in 1646 and apparently there were enough investors ready to send good money after bad because the furnace was still in operation in 1650 when the Scotch Prisoners arrived.

The Scots were rugged Highlanders, soldiers in the army of the future King Charles II who were captured by Oliver Cromwell in the Battle of Dunbar. They suffered the fate common to most 17th Century prisoners of war.

Cromwell shipped 272 of them to New England, cheap labor in an effort to make Quincy iron works a paying proposition. It didn't work. The Company of Undertakers went bankrupt in 1653 and "the Woods" went back to the bear and the deer.

Meanwhile, with the same Richard Leader as agent, construction began on a second iron works on the North Shore in Saugus in 1646. When it was completed in 1650 it was recognized as the first integrated iron industry in America.

Adams Academy

On Site Of John Hancock's Birthplace

By modern standards, the boarding house at the corner of Hancock and Depot Sts. had all the aspects of a genteel prison.

Residents were forbidden to leave between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. They could not enter or leave at any time except by the hall door. They were banned from pool halls and bars. Smoking materials also were forbidden to them.

In exchange for good behavior, plus tuition ranging from $75 to $150 a year, they were given the best prep school education of the day for they were students at Adams Academy, which flourished from 1872 to 1907 in Quincy.

The academy was a gift of John Adams, the second President of the United States, who always had his checkbook ready to fill the spiritual and educational needs of the citizens of his beloved Quincy.

The trust fund, nourished by "rents, profits and emoluments" from certain Adams-owned properties, was set up in the Adams will of 1822, but it was not until 1869 that the fund was deemed large enough to start construction.

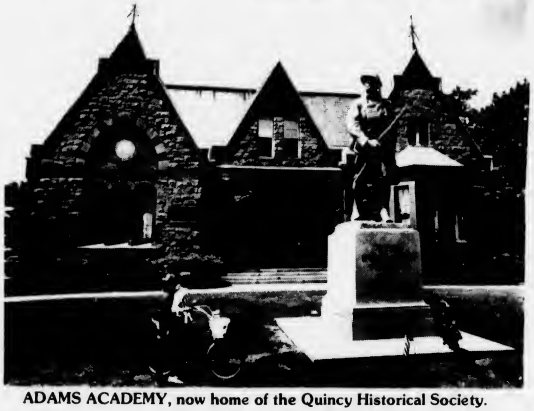
The location was specified by Adams himself as the corner of Adams and Hancock Sts., site of the birthplace of his childhood friend, John Hancock, the first signer of the Delcaration of Independence.

The doors opened to the first students, 24 of them, on Sept. 4, 1872. Five years later, the academy reached a peak enrollment of 154 with an international student body ---25 from Quincy, four from Washington, D.C., 125 and 14 states, two from England and one from Chile.

It had one of the earliest prep school football teams, too, recording a tie with the Resolutes of Boston on Oct. 21, 1876, a scant seven years after Princeton and Rutgers played the first college game. It whipped Andover three times from 1877-79.

The admissions catalogue specified that applicants be "well prepared in the usual studies of good grammar schools" and warned that "no pupils are desired to give them a collegiate education."

The best known headmaster was Dr. William Everett, once acclaimed as one of the seven smartest men in the world. He ran the academy with a firm hand from 1878 to 1893 and again from 1897 to 1907. From 1893 to 1897, he was a U.S. congressman from Lynn.



ADAMS ACADEMY, now home of the Quincy Historical Society.

Dr. Leverett, an aimiable if sometimes waspish eccentric, was widely known as the man who hated Abraham Lincoln. He had reason. His father was Edward Everett, whose masterful oration at Gettysburg was over-shadowed by Lincoln's notes scribbled on the back of an envelope.

It was Dr. Everett who signaled the passing of Adams Academy --- and many other 19th Century classical prep schools --- at graduation exercises in 1907 when he said that "unless someone comes forward and planks down $50,000, the academy will be closed."

Nobody did and on June 22, 1907, the Adams Academy officially closed it doors.

The building today is occupied by the Quincy Historical Society, which maintains a museum and research library in the old classrooms as well as an expanded gift shop.

The museum and gift shop are open all year, Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. The library is open Monday and Wednesday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. or by appointment. It is closed Sunday and holidays. There is a $1 fee for non-members; children age 12 and under are admitted free.

Abigail Adams Wife, Mother Of Presidents

Mrs. John Adams, the former Abigail Smith of Weymouth, is the only woman to be wife of one president and mother of another --- and she could have been grandmother of a vice president.

Husband John was chief executive from 1797 to 1801; son of John Quincy occupied the White House from 1825 to 1829; and grandson Charles Francis Adams ran for vice president on the Free Soil ticket in 1848.

An early advocate of women's rights, Abigail Adams once wrote to her husband, John:

"In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make, I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

"Do not put such unlimited power into the hands of the husbands. Remember, all men would be tyrants if they could."

ABIGAIL ADAMS

Abigail Adams: A Woman Of Special Honors

Abigail (Smith) Adams was the only woman to be the wife of one President and mother of another.

She was the wife of John Adams, our second President.

She died in 1818, however, and did not see her son John Quincy Adams elected our sixth President.

John Adams did live to see his son become President in 1825.

We are proud to be a part of Quincy, a city with a rich and historical past and a great future.

Patriots, Early Settlers, Intrigue Buried Here

Henry, the first Adams in Quincy, is buried there. So is the Rev. John Hancock, father of the first signer of the Declaration of Independence. And Col. John Quincy, for whom the city is named.

But of all the 800 graves in the Hancock Cemetery, the Old Burying Ground of Colonial Quincy, most intriguing is one marked by a tombstone bearing this cryptic epitaph:

"Erected to the memory of John R. Grieve: Died Nov. 12, 1850, age 22 years, and Hannah Banks, his wife, died Nov. 12, 1850, age 15 years. Both of Zanesville, Ohio. Deluded by the writings of A.J. Davis."

The mystery of John and Hannah has never been fully solved.

They came to Quincy in 1850, not as man and wife, but as male cousins, John Green and George Sands. They obtained work in a shoe factory but rarely left their lodgings on Elm St., spending long hours reading books on spiritualism.

Co-workers thought that George Sands looked frail, almost effeminate. It was widely suspected that "he" was a girl. A scheme was devised to test the theory.

One day at lunch one of the shoe workers tossed George an apple. A man would catch it by closing his legs; a woman by spreading her skirt. Guess what "George" did!

Humiliated, John and Hannah never went back to the factory. Nor did they ever return to the house on Elm St. Their frozen bodies were found next spring by rabbit hunters on Penn's Hill, locked in a loving embrace.

Several months later, the father of John Grieve arrived from Ohio to bury the young couple. It was he who directed the words to be chiselled on the headstone. He explained no further.

A.J. Davis was never identified for sure. But Andrew Jackson Davis, a spiritualist, hypnotist and faith healer, was then practicing in Boston.

Among the belongings found in the Elm St. lodging house were these words, written by 15-year-old Hannah Banks:

"To the oppressed and down-trodden, to the suffering and afflicted, I would cry out...Death is only an event, only a circumstance in the eternal life experience of the human soul. Death is simply a birth into a new and perfect state of existence."

Not far from the grave of John and Hannah is a tomb bearing words that cry out of an earlier injustice:

"Three precious friends under this tombstone lie

"Patterns to aged, youth and infancy.

HANCOCK CEMETERY

"A great mother, her learned son, with child.

"The first and least went free. He was exiled.

"In love to Christ, this country, and dear friends

"He left his own, cross'd seas and for amends

"Was here extoll'd, and envy'd all in a breath,

"His noble consort leaves, is drawn to death,

"Stranger changes may befall us ere we die,

"Blest they who will arrive eternity.

"God grant some names, O thou New England's friend.

"Don't sooner fade than thine, if times don't mend."

The tomb with its hidden message contains the family of the Rev. Leonard Hoar, third president of Harvard College, a man too liberal for his times.

He was forced by the General Court of the Massachusetts Bay Colony to resign at the instigation of religious opponents and jealous colleagues for permitting Harvard to "languish and decay." Eight months later in November 1675, he was dead at 45.

In 1975, the same General Court, now of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, righted the 300-year-old wrong done to the Rev. Mr. Hoar by "proclaiming and confirming his innocence of any misdeeds while president of Harvard College."

The cemetery, on Hancock St., Quincy Sq., next to City Hall, is open to the public. There is no admission charge.

Quincy's Newest Tourist Attraction

The U.S. Naval And Shipbuilding Museum

The Quincy Fore River Shipyard, one of the most productive and prolific shipyards in the country before closing in 1986, will be the site of the city's newest tourist attraction in 1994.

The $5 million United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum is scheduled to open next spring on a six-acre site on the banks of the Fore River. The museum will consist of an array of naval vessels and three exhibit halls full of artifacts explaining and detailing ship-building in Quincy, naval history, naval life and ship design.

The museum will also be the home of the Massachusetts Military Research Center, the most extensive private collection of U.S. military artifacts, documents and records in the United States.

The museum's crown jewel will be the U.S.S. Salem (CA-139), the largest "big gun" cruiser for the USN which was built by Bethlehem Steel and launched at the Quincy shipyard in March, 1947. The Salem is expected to steam home in late August or early September and museum organizers hope to have the ship open for tours later this year.

Equipped with 8-inch guns and automatic firing, the U.S.S. Salem was faster, more durable and more heavily armed than its predecessor. The 718-foot ship was longer than any battleship attacked at Pearl Harbor. It once served as the flag ship of the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea.

Other ships are expected to join the Salem, including submarines, destroyers and other historical vessels. Besides visitation, these ships will be used for educational and instructional purposes.

But Quincy's naval museum will be more than just a naval museum. With the Massachusetts Military Research Center, the museum will be unlike any other in the country.

The military collection, with thousands of artifacts from the Revolutionary War to the present, is the second largest military archives in the United States. Only the federal government's National Military Archives in Washington is larger.

The collection, valued at $50 to $60 million, consists of:

Four tons of historical documents; 200,000 paintings, lithographs, and photographs; hundreds of antique flags, uniforms and firearms; and thousands of miscellaneous military artifacts dating from the early Massachusetts Militia (1776-1820) to recent engagements like the Persian Gulf War.

In addition, there are weapons, tanks, armored personnel carriers, howitzers, cannons and a variety of small arms, swords and bayonets.

One of the oldest artifacts is a war document signed by John Hancock when he was governor of Massachusetts in 1787. Recent additions include a captured Iraqi armored vehicle and two U.S. tanks.

The museum will be unique in that many artifacts will be grouped into exhibits. Each exhibit will have a particular theme and explain a facet of military past told from a human perspective. The exhibits will change continually, giving the museum a new look and visitors a reason to return again and again.

For instance, a working trench system will be recreated inside the museum "right down to the smell." The research center has one of the largest collections of World War I artifacts and visitors will be able to walk through the sound-wired trench and hear "bullets whizzing by."

A ballistics range complying with federal and state regulations is also planned so reenactment groups who drill on the USNSM can test fire their period weapons.

The museum will also feature many state-of-the-art amenities.

A 100-seat theater will show vintage feature films and video interviews with shipyard workers and sailors. A benefactor's lounge and function room will accommodate up to 800 people for ship reunions and social functions.

Drill grounds will be the site of militia musters by historical reenactment groups. A museum gift shop will offer gifts, photos, books and other memorabilia.

For most of the 20th century, the Quincy Fore River Shipyard bustled with activity, producing more than 700 Navy vessels as well as cargo and passenger ships from 1903 to 1986.

The United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum and Massachusetts Military Research Center will preserve that proud heritage and allow visitors of all ages to relive those glory years, and remember the thousands of workers who helped manufacture some of the world's mightiest ships.

To learn more about the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, call 617-479-7900 or send for a free brochure: USNSM, 1250 Hancock St., Suite 105N, Quincy, MA 02169.

"Quincy built ..."

It was the best thing you could say about a ship. It stood for quality, durability, craftsmanship, innovation, and pride. And it was the hallmark of the more than 700 vessels built at Quincy's famous Fore River Shipyard.

Now, that history will be preserved at the new US Naval and Shipbuilding Museum scheduled to open in the Spring of 1994. The 10-acre complex on Quincy's Fore River will feature:

- The U.S.S. SALEM heavy cruiser open for guided tours of the crew's quarters, bridge, and command centers--and special events in the Admiral's suite.
- The new Massachusetts Military Research Center including historical archives and hands-on exhibits of artillery, tanks, and other equipment from U.S. and enemy forces.
- Three exhibit halls full of displays on Shipbuilding in Quincy, Naval History, Naval Life, and Ship Design.
- A 100-seat theater showing vintage feature films and video interviews with Shipyard workers and sailors.
- The Benefactors' Lounge and Function Room accommodating up to 800 people for ship reunions and social functions.
- Drill grounds for militia musters by historical reenactment groups.
- Visiting Tall Ships and other foreign vessels.

$9 Million Senior Health Care Facility Planned

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A plan to construct a $9 million elderly nursing and health care facility in Quincy Center was unveiled Tuesday, signaling what city and development officials hope is the next significant step toward downtown revitalization.

Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group of Norwell will develop the facility to be known as Hancock Park. The announcement was made by the Quincy 2000 Corporation, the public-private corporation charged with revitalizing Quincy's business districts.

The project calls for several components, including: a 142-bed nursing and rehabilitation center; an adult day health center and an assisted living residence.

Mayor James Sheets said the project, the first for Quincy 2000, will help revitalize Quincy Center, especially the southern end of Hancock St. He said Quincy 2000 was instrumental in bringing together numerous parties including the developer and trade unions.

"This is why Quincy 2000 was formed--to bring together all parties in order to facilitate development. This clearly indicates that Quincy 2000 works as a concept and in practice.

"It's kind of the opening gun so to speak in terms of Quincy 200 which is the city, the business community and labor all

Public Hearing Tonight On MWRA Pump Project

State Sen. Michael Morrissey and State Reps. Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano and Michael Bellotti announce that the MWRA will hold a public hearing tonight (Thursday) at part of its facilities planning process for the MWRA's Quincy Pump Facilities project.

The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. MWRA officials will give a brief summary of the project, describe the recommended alternative and the associated impacts, and answer questions and receive comments from the public and local officials.

The project will consist of the rehabilitation-replacement of three pump stations and three force mains located in Quincy. The stations are owned and operated by the MWRA and provide exclusive use to the residents of Quincy.

The Quincy Pump Station is a 52 m.g.d. (millions of gallons per day) facility which went on line in 1906. The Squantum Pump Station is an 8 m.g.d. facility constructed in the late 1930s and the Houghs Neck Lift Station is a 2.8 m.g.d. facility which has been in continuous use since 1942.

MWRA officials have said that the rehabilitation-replacement of the facilities and related force mains is necessary to provide the city with reliable service into the next century. The completion of the project will reduce the likelihood of back-ups, overflows and breakage in the city's sewerage system.

AN AUTOMOBILE involved an accident on the Fore River Bridge several months ago was part of a thought-provoking display with the message "Don't Drink and Drive -- Make It a Safe Holiday" set up outside the Quincy Police Station on Sea St during the holiday weekend. According to Chief Francis Mullen, approximately 50,000 vehicles pass through the intersection of Sea St., Coddington St. and Southern Artery on a daily basis. Mullen said he thought the display was effective and sent a message to motorists. "This holiday weekend was relatively quiet compared to other Fourths," Mullen said, adding there were no fatal accidents in Quincy.

Immunization Clinic For Children July 16

The Quincy Health Department and the Alliance for The Homeless will hold immunization clinics for children at the John F. Kennedy Health Center Auditorium Friday, July 16 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m.

The clinics will provide immunization to children ages one month to six years who are Quincy residents. Contact the public health nurses to schedule an appointment.

Nurses can be reach weekdays from 1 to 4 p.m. by calling 376-1284.

Mosquito Sprayings Scheduled This Week

The Quincy Health Department has received notice from the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project regarding early morning applications this week of the pesticide resmethrin for the control of adult mosquitoes.

Sprayings were scheduled for the following dates and sites:

•July 6 (last Tuesday) in selected areas of Quincy west of Hancock St. and west of Washington St., including Montclair, western portions of Atlantic, inland portions of Wollaston, South Quincy, and inland sections of Quincy Point.

•July 8 (today) in selected areas of Quincy east of Hancock St. and east of Washington St., including Squantum, eastern portions of Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, coastal Wollaston, Merrymount, Houghs Neck, Germantown, and coastal Quincy Point.

Not all areas as described above will be entirely sprayed on a given date. Attempts will be made to spray as large an area of western Quincy on Tuesdays and as large an area of Eastern Quincy on Thursdays. The spraying will occur between 2 and 7 a.m.

If inclement weather occurs or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next scheduled day, or rescheduled for the following day.

Resmethrin is used due to its compatibility with the environment, very low toxicity to mammals, low irritation levels, and the fact it does not harm other wildlife.

Notice of future spraying dates (the following week's schedule) will be made available to the Health Department from the Mosquito Control Project (762-3681) each Friday afternoon through September.

WELCH HEALTHCARE and Retirement Group of Norwell has unveiled a plan to construct a $9 million elderly nursing and health care facility in Quincy Center in the Parkingway. The facility would be located adjacent to two existing senior housing centers, Hancock House and Hancock Court. Officials hope to start construction in September, 1994.

$9 Million Senior Health Care Facility Planned

working together. This is also indicative of the fact that we are moving to put more retail clients on the southern end of Hancock St.

"The residents of the health care facility and their visitors will give that end of Hancock St. a tremendous boost."

D'Aprix agreed. "This project cements the revitalization of a key part of Quincy Center. There is no doubt that this development project will spawn additional development in Quincy Center.

"Moreover, the jobs provided will serve to stimulate the Quincy economy."

Sheets also praised the development concept and Welch Healthcare whom he called a "top notch group." We're pleased they have chosen to move into Quincy and this part of Quincy Center."

The mayor and Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, thanked Peter O'Connell for helping to facilitate the project. O'Connell's development firm is selling the land for the project to the Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

The six-story, 100,000-square-foot building will be located on the Parkingway adjacent to the existing senior housing centers in Quincy Center known as Hancock House and Hancock Court. Essentially, the facility will have four aspects.

The 142-bed nursing and rehabilitation center will focus on post-acute rehabilitation, skilled nursing care, specialized Alzheimer's care and respite care.

The adult day health center will serve up to 24 clients per day by offering therapies, counselling, meals and social stimulation.

Transportation and respite for caregivers will be available.

The assisted living residence will feature 40 private studio and one-bedroom apartments. The residence is geared toward elders who may need additional care but not daily care services and skilled nursing.

Among those services will be meals, housekeeping, personal care and wellness programs, 24-hour emergency response, and activities and transportation.

The assisted living residence will also include "the Commons," which will consist of a dining room, library and parlor, club room, wellness center, and shops such as a cafe, general store and salon.

Finally, Hancock Park will be integrated with Hancock House and Hancock Court to make up a "care campus." The campus will allow a delivery of services to all residents, coordination of activities and transportation and access to shops.

Officials behind the project say the facility will address the growing elderly population in Quincy. Presently, there are approximately 14,000 citizens age 65 or older in Quincy. That number is projected to increase to 15,000 by the end of the decade.

According to Paul Casale of Welch Healthcare, Massachusetts estimates a need for 1146 nursing home beds by the year 2000. Current supply is 485, he noted.

Casale said projects such as Hancock Park gives seniors housing and support services for those 75 and older while allowing elders to remain independent and avoid premature institutionalization.

Economically, Hancock Park has other pluses. Officials say the project will provide construction jobs and stimulate the local economy. Once finished, the facility is expected to employ 160 full and part-time workers with an annual payroll of about $3.6 million.

In addition, the facility will generate real estate tax revenue and have little impact on city services, officials said.

Construction is expected to start in September, 1994 and continue for 12 to 14 months. Welch Healthcare is confident the project will be financed by the Department of Housing and Urban Development in the form of a FHA mortgage, similar to the Quincy Hospital reconstruction project of the late 1980s.

"We feel very confident that HUD will go along with it," Casale said. Welch Healthcare went through a similar process in receiving permission to build a similar facility in Hingham later this year.

One business, Prestige Cleaners, will be relocated in the immediate area to make way for the demolition.

The building's exterior will consist of granite, bricks and a metal roof. Architect Richard Heym said the building was designed incorporating features of other buildings in the area.

The Zoning Board of Appeals was expected to approve a variance for the project at its meeting Tuesday. The project would not need City Council approval because the land is zoned business, not Planned Unit Development. Sheets has sent a letter to the Zoning Board stating his "full support" for the project.

10,000 Gallon Animal Fat Spill Quickly Cleaned Up

By BILL DONCASTER

Ten thousand gallons of animal fat that spilled from a Procter & Gamble rail car on Monday, was cleaned up by Tuesday afternoon, according to the Coast Guard marine safety office in Boston and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

The bulk of the animal fat was contained on a gravel roadway with 10 to 20 percent flowing into a storm drain and into the Fore River.

Coast Guard sources said the spills of this nature are usually cleaned up quickly, since the fatty acids float to the surface. It was cleaned up using a containment boom and removed from the water using absorbant pads or vacuuming.

It posed no threat the environment, according to the Coast Guard, as it is had a very mild acidic content. It is used as an animal feed supplement.

The spill happened Monday at 3:45 as a 20,000 gallon capacity rail car spilled roughly 10,000 gallons at the Procter & Gamble Plant while awaiting shipment.

According to Gorman, it was the result of a drain cap being knocked off the car.

The cleanup was done by Clean Harbors, Inc., of Boston, with the cooperation of Procter & Gamble and the Coast Guard.

QUINCY DEPUTY FIRE Chief Paul Cuddy shows Krista Aronson, age six, how to "Stop, Drop and Roll" at Quincy Hospital's recent Safety Saturday program as a group of children look on. Cuddy said it is important for young children to react quickly if they are faced with a fire emergency.

One Injured But Little Trouble At H N Bonfire

Despite an injury, Police Chief Francis Mullen said there was little trouble at the Houghs Neck 4th of July bonfire Saturday night.

"It was a bigger crowd than anticipated," said Mullen. "Any time you have that many people gathered in one place, you have a potential situation."

There was one injury when someone threw a firecracker, an M-80, into the fire. Diane Cole was hurt when it exploded near her leg. According to Mullen she was treated at Quincy Hospital and released.

He said in years past there has been little incident at the neighborhood 4th of July bonfire.

"With the exception of the firecracker," Mullen said, "there wasn't a problem this year either."

Mullen did add that there was drinking going on at the event, and it seemed as though people were coming in from outside the area.

Mullen said that before next year's bonfire he plans to meet with Houghs Neck neighborhood leaders and councillors to see if the event can't be even safer.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the Quincy Fire Department does not officially condone the bonfire.

"But if we tried to put a stop to it we'd have a pretty unruly crowd on our hands," Gorman said.

The fire department for the past three years has been on hand at the event and extinguishes the fire about midnight, after the fireworks are over.

Snug Harbor School Holds Reading Day

Snug Harbor Community School recently held its second annual Reading Day.

Former students, college age through adult, were invited to read a book to a class and talk to the children about Germantown and Snug Harbor School when they attended. Alumni were encouraged to talk about their life since they left the school and what they are doing now.

Alumni who participated this year are:

Rep. Steve Tobin, Attorney Thomas S. Barrett, Attorney Paul Wahlberg, Attorney Michael Long, Dawn Elwood, assistant publisher of Parents' Paper, Nancy Hebert, second grade teacher, Bernazzani School; Edmund Grogan, social studies teacher at Atlantic Middle School; and Delores Terry, first grade teacher, Snug Harbor Community School.

Pictures were taken of the alumni and each of them filled out a form which the school plans to use for a "Wall of Fame." The wall will include the picture of each alumni accompanied underneath with the Germantown address where they lived, their occupation (if working outside the home); and words of advice to current students.

'TIS THE SEASON FOR SKIN CANCER ALERT

Maybe all those children's songs about "Mr. Golden Sun" and "Let The Sun Shine In" should get a rewrite. After all, the sun is responsible for most cases of skin cancer, and skin cancer is the most common type of cancer in the United States. That means that now, during the season of sun-worshipping, we need to be careful. Protection from the sun is a must, in the form of protective clothing (sun hats, long sleeves and pants) and sunscreen, with the higher the Sun Protection Factor (SPF) the better. However, protection must be linked with being alert to the signs of skin cancer. Any new growth, change in skin color or texture, or sore that doesn't heal should receive prompt professional attention.

P.S. All skin cancers are curable - IF they are treated before they have a chance to spread to other parts of the body.

Remember to apply your sunscreen at least a half hour before venturing outside. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Dr. Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St, Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Republican Movement

The Republicans are coming.

Not like the British. But they're coming.

They're coming back to the political front.

Of the seven new faces in this year's city election, five are Republicans. The other two are Democrats.

Of course, the city election is non-partisan and candidates don't have a D or R designation with their names on the ballot.

But the fact there are five new Republicans running for office in a Democratic stronghold like Quincy is interesting to say the least.

For some time now a lot of Republicans haven't been too gung-ho about taking on Democrats. Oh, they've thought about it and dreamed about it but when it came right down to it, political discretion often seemed to be the better of political valor.

You can't blame them either. Not if you look at the voter registration figures. As of the last official count last Oct. 22 Quincy had 48,048 registered voters. Of these, 27,808 were Democrats, 6,894 were Republicans and 13,346 were unenrolled.

It means Republicans are outnumbered by Democrats by 20,914. It also means Democrats outnumber Republicans and the unenrolled together by 7,568.

So, even allowing for the fact that the city election is non-partisan, the five new Republican candidates deserve a pat on the back.

The five—all candidates for School Committee—are: Wendell Caley, Jr., Christine Cedrone, Shareda Hosein, Ron McCarthy and John Spada.

The two new Democratic faces, incidentally, belong to Michael D'Amico, Ward 4 City Councillor candidate and Gregory Hanley, School Committee candidate.

It's encouraging to see the Republican activity in this year's city election.

Which raises a question: Will it carry over into next year's state election which is partisan, openly pitting Republican against Democrat?

MARTIN ERVIN has officially taken himself out of this year's mayoral race. He withdrew in a letter received on Tuesday by City Clerk Joseph Shea. The request in writing to withdraw is necessary because Ervin had already filed his nomination papers.

ERVIN'S DEPARTURE leaves Mayor James Sheets with a possible date with history.

Sheets could be the first mayor in the city's history to twice run for re-election unopposed. No other mayor has had that political distinction.

He is one of the only three mayors who have been unopposed for re-election once. That was 1991. The only other two accorded the distinction were Thomas Burgin in 1940 and Frank McCauley in 1983.

Unless someone enters this year's mayoral field Sheets would be the first to run twice unopposed.

FORMER CITY COUNCILLOR Warren Powers will be sworn in Tuesday, July 19 as associate justice of Quincy District Court.

POWERS

He will take the oath of office at 5:15 p.m. in the chamber of the House of Representatives at the State House at a ceremony headed by Gov. William Weld and Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci. A reception will follow.

Powers, 51, served as Ward 5 councillor from 1974 to 1977. He has been a Norfolk County assistant district attorney since 1971 and has been in charge of all district court jury trials in the county.

Powers is married to the formerly Holly Grazioso of Quincy and they now live in Norfolk.

FRANK McCAULEY always liked to look and plan ahead when he was Quincy mayor. He still does. He's already preparing for the fifth annual Jimmy Fund Marathon Walk which will be held Sunday, Oct. 10 with a 7 a.m. starting time.

McCAULEY

The 26.2-mile walk, which covers the same route as the Boston Marathon, is sponsored by the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

McCauley was among the more than 400 walkers honored recently at a reception for those who last year raised $500 or more.

McCauley raised $9,611—third highest total among 3,500 walkers bringing his four-year total to $23,564. His time for last year's walk was six hours and 13 minutes.

Anyone wishing to sponsor Frank this year and help a most worthy cause, can reach him at 479-6230.

Commends Morrissey For Not Bowing To Special Interest Pressure

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This letter serves to commend Sen. Michael Morrissey who stood up for the environment, for students' rights and for MASSPIRG. It also serves to point up another outrageous example of public interest sway on Beacon Hill.

At approximately 7 a.m. on Wednesday, June 23 the state Senate adopted an amendment to the FY94 budget sponsored by Sen. Brian Lees (R-E. Longmeadow) to destroy MASSPIRG's college campus program.

This amendment was being lobbied for by the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, a special interest trade association at odds with MASSPIRG's consumer and environmental agenda. It was stuck onto a budget, a tactic which precludes both the public hearing process that legislation is supposed to go through, as well as the citizens' right to repeal it (budgets cannot be repealed through referendum).

The passage of this amendment, by a vote of 20-19, with Senate President William Bulger casting a rare deciding vote, is a shameless and anti-democratic move on the part of the state legislature. There are hundreds of students, faculty, administrators, and college presidents signed onto a statement denouncing this attack for what it really is--a political attack on an effective interest organization that counters some of the tremendous special interest influence on public policy in Massachusetts.

The Senate's action is a black mark against the efforts of all who work to protect the environment.

We are lucky to have a senator that stands up for us and does not bow in the face of special interest pressure!

Time Running Out On Chelsea-- A Very Special Dog

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Chelsea is a very special dog.

A seven-year-old Doberman Pinscher who has been specially trained as an "assistance dog"--one that helps people with limitations caused by illness, injury or birth defects--she has helped countless people throughout the South Shore, most notably her owner, North Quincy native Ann Sava. She has brought hope to the hopeless, companionship to the lonely, joy to the saddened.

And now, Chelsea is dying.

Sava, 41, who now lives in North Weymouth, explained in a recent interview that Chelsea began having intestinal problems last February, and after a series of tests, a malignant melanoma tumor was discovered. The intestinal problems were treated with medication and the tumor removed, Sava said, and it appeared that Chelsea had weathered the storm.

Unfortunately, Sava's joy quickly turned to renewed anguish when Chelsea was diagnosed last week with cirrhosis of the liver, a common disease among Dobermans. The cirrhosis, which doctors now say was the cause of the original intestinal problems, will in all likelihood spread very rapidly, leading to either a coma or a quick and relatively death.

Originally, Sava said, Chelsea had been diagnosed with Wobbler Syndrome, another illness common among Dobermans which affects the neck vertebrae and eventually leads to complete paralysis. Because Chelsea has had problems walking in recent days, it was believed that Wobbler Syndrome was the reason, but it has since been ruled that the liver disease is the root of her problems.

The bottom line, however, remains the same: Chelsea, who has helped so many others find the way to independence, is now for the first time in her life dependent on others.

It wasn't supposed to end this way. Sava, who was injured in an industrial accident in 1986--an occurrence which caused her to lose the use of her right arm, damaged her back, and left her in constant pain--had purchased Chelsea as a newborn puppy that same year with the idea of keeping her as an everyday housepet.

In 1988, however, doctors told Sava that her injuries had left her permanently disabled. Sava, who knew her dog was exceptionally smart--Chelsea had been completely house-trained at six months--decided to have Chelsea trained as an assistance dog.

With the help of Mike Kelley, a local professional trainer, Sava taught Chelsea the many responsibilities of living with a disabled person. The results, she said, have exceeded even her own expectations.

"She learned so unbelievably quick," said Sava. "She started doing everything for me."

Indeed, Chelsea helps Sava in and out of bed and the shower, picks up any items that Sava drops ("even those as small as rings and coins"), assists Sava at the supermarket by taking items off shelves to low for her to reach, and even answers the phone.

Most importantly, Chelsea has the uncanny ability to predict the chronic migraines which have plagued Sava since her accident. According to Sava, Chelsea can sense the migraines 15 to 40 minutes before they occur, and experts have various theories on why certain animals are equipped with this talent.

Sava said for the first time since her accident, she felt a new sense of freedom--and all because of Chelsea.

"She changed my life drastically," said Sava. "She made me feel safe and gave me the courage to go outside. It's often very frightening when life changes and you're suddenly faced with certain limitations.

"She gave me so much. She gave me independence, and I wanted to share that with others, so I started the program."

The program Sava referred to is Partners For The Disabled, which she began in 1989 under the sponsorship of the South Shore Humane Society. Since its inception, Sava and Chelsea have visited schools, church groups, community associations and other organizations throughout the South Shore and given demonstrations teaching people the value of assistance dogs.

(Assistance dogs, Sava noted, can be categorized into three types: "seeing eye" or "guide" dogs that assist the blind, "hearing ear" or "signal" dogs for the deaf, and "service" dogs like Chelsea that help people with other disabilities).

In Quincy, Sava said she and Chelsea have visited every public elementary and middle school as well as The Woodward School, Sacred Heart School, St. Mary's School and various other groups and organizations. Two schools they visit annually are the Squantum School and the Lincoln-Hancock School, the latter of which holds a birthday party for Chelsea each May.

CHELSEA, the terminally ill Doberman Pinscher who has devoted her life to helping people with disabilities, snuggles up to her owner, Ann Sava, in their North Weymouth home.

In addition to the demonstrations, Sava and Chelsea have provided literature and additional information to those who request it, and have helped other individuals find assistance dogs of their own.

Sava has experienced many memorable moments through the program.

"We'd go to places like Children's Hospital (in Boston) and Chelsea would always seem to find the person most in needs of cheering up--she would always pick the right one out of the crowd," said Sava. "Everyone who meets her just sees there's something very special about her."

For Sava, the thought of life without Chelsea is not a pleasant one. Although she has owned a second Doberman, Zephyr, for the past two years--he already performs some of Chelsea's duties, said Sava, but cannot predict the migraines and seems to lack Chelsea's self-confidence--and plans to purchase a puppy for assistance training as soon as possible, Sava said she knows there will never be another Chelsea.

"I'm scared," said Sava. "I feel very vulnerable, like I did before I got her."

For now, however, Chelsea is her number one priority. In an effort to make Chelsea's final days as comfortable as possible, the South Shore Humane Society has set up a fund to help Sava pay for the medical bills which have begun to accumulate since Chelsea became sick.

Sava has vowed, however, that she will not allow Chelsea to suffer any unnecessary pain.

"She is much too dignified," said Sava. "When the time comes, I'm going to have to love her enough to let her go. You have to love them (animals) enough to let them go.

"I promised myself I wouldn't get emotional," she said, fighting off tears and apologizing for doing so.

But her sadness, and her pain, are all too understandable. Chelsea is, after all, a very special dog.

Rickover Lauds Fore River Built USS Long Beach

July 8-14, 1961 — 32 Years Ago

Navy Admiral Hyman G. Rickover, an advocate of a nuclear Navy, said the Fore River-built nuclear frigate USS Long Beach "marks an historic first step in the development of our nuclear powered surface fleet."

Rickover, writing at sea from the Long Beach en route home from sea trials, said in a letter to Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa:

"Once her potentialities are understood the Long Beach may well have the significance for surface naval warfare that the (nuclear submarine) Nautilus had for undersea warfare.

"The ship made her design full power, in fact she exceeded it."

HEDGES HONORED

Col. Charles W. Hedges of Quincy was awarded the Massachusetts Medal of Merit for his "outstanding leadership as a senior officer" in the State Air National Guard.

Hedges, a former Norfolk County Sheriff and state senator, received the medal from Gov. John A. Volpe during ceremonies at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod.

LANGUAGE PROBLEM

It took City Clerk John Gillis nearly an hour to accomplish the three minute chore of filling out a marriage intention form for Harry Karl Berglund and Maria Rosa Uria. Both of Houghs Neck.

Seemed Berglund spoke only Sweedish, Uria only Spanish and Gillis only English — and the interpreter wasn't really well versed in any of them.

Quincy Helps Set New Daffodil Days Benefit Record

Quincy volunteers, residents and businesses helped the South Shore unit of the American Cancer Society sell over 120,000 daffodils and raise a record $61,000 during the recent Daffodil Days program in support of the Society's program of information, education and service in South Shore communities.

Quincy turned in receipts of $26,550 from the sale of 5,310 bouquets of these "first flowers of spring" that stand as a symbol of the increasing hope made possible for cancer patients by research sponsored by the Cancer Society.

"Once again people responded wonderfully and I want to thank the volunteers, residents, businesses, and schools in Quincy who helped make it possible," said Pauline Sweeney, long-time co-chair of the Daffodil Days program of the Unit. "Even in these difficult times and with a new snow storm to make things more difficult, the South Shore again set a record and led all 40 Cancer Society units in the State for the third year in a row."

The South Shore Unit, with an area office in Stoughton, serves the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate, and Weymouth. Volunteers carry out programs of professional education, referral and transportation in these towns.

Sweeney singled out for special commendation employees of State Street South who raised a total of $3,500 in daffodil sales.

She also cited the effort of the students and faculty of Quincy public schools who together raised $11,595 in a program headed by Pat Drew and Jean Healey, teachers at Central Middle School. Members of the Quincy High School Key Club sold daffodils at the Quincy Center MBTA Station; Esther Remick and Maureen Kelly sold at Shaw's supermarket. Quincy residents who helped deliver daffodils included Lisa Gusmini, Rosemary McLaughlin, Bill and Georgia Center, Paula McNally and Barbara Campbell.

Major contributors noted by Sweeney included Arbella Mutual Insurance Company; Burgin Platner Insurance; Colonial Federal Savings Bank; Mary Cooney; The Cooperative Bank employees; Continental Cablevision, Curry Hardware, which provided flowers for Quincy Hospital patients; GTE Shareholders' employees; Harvard Community Health Plan; Interstate Distiributors employees; Lappen's Auto Supply; Margaret Madden; Manet Community Health Center; Charles Murphy, Inc.; National Fire Protection Association employees; Patriot Ledger employees; The Putnam Company employees; Quincy City Hall employees; Quincy Courthouse employees; Quincy Hospital employees; Quincy Municipal Credit Union employees; Quincy VNA; Carol Rizzo; Sacred Heart School students and teachers, headed by Lena O'Connell; South Shore Bank employees; South Shore Hematology/Oncology; and St. Joseph's School.

Pick-up sites in Quincy were at the Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St. and Curry Hardware in West Quincy and North Quincy.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

DARE Program Expanded To Include 7th Graders

The D.A.R.E. program, a partnership between the Quincy Public Schools and the Police Department, has recently been expanded to include grade seven students

The focus of this program is smoking prevention and the effect of the media on our decision-making.

The seventh grade peer leaders at Central Middle School as well as the other three middle underwent two full days of training, provided by Prevention Resources, to learn the harmful effects of smoking, why some teens decide to smoke and techniques for saying "no."

They will visit fourth graders in the elementary schools and give them facts about smoking's harmful effects and discuss ways to deal with peer pressure.

There are 12 peer leaders at Central, working under the guidance of teacher Jane Cammack.

Besides working with the fourth graders, they will be working with their seventh grade peers.

Vane St. Parking Lot Meter Costs Reduced

The parking meters in the Vane St. Parking Lot in Norfolk Downs, North Quincy have been changed from a two hour limit to a five hour limit at a rate of 5 cents an hour.

The change was made through the collaborative efforts of Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, and North Quincy Business Association President Joe Doran.

Ayers said he initiated the change to help increase the number of patrons in the North Quincy business area while also providing a parking option for the merchants.

"Being a small businessman myself, I realize how important businesses are to an area and it is important to try to meet the needs of both patrons and merchants," Ayers said.

The five hour limit on the parking meters will also help to prevent people from parking in the lot and walking to the MBTA station, which was not the intended use for the lot, according to Ayers.

Thomas Fabrizio Candidate For Re-election In Ward 4

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas A. Fabrizio announces he is a candidate for reelection to a third term.

Speaking before 275 supporters recently at the Common Market Place, Fabrizio cited accomplishments made in South and West Quincy over the past three and a half years, and the upcoming challenges and goals for the ward's immediate and long range future.

Fabrizio noted his key role in the 1990 7(M) West Quincy rehabilitation project that successfully replaced the overburdened antiquated neighborhood sewer system and eased a long standing flooding problem that had plagued the area.

He said he successfully prevented the creation of a water transfer station in South Quincy. Fabrizio worked with neighbors and convinced his City Council colleagues the high impact site would adversely affect the largely residential area.

Fabrizio said he also established an order to prevent illegal dumping in the former West Quincy Landfill. He is a leading proponent to turn the site into a municipal recreation facility and a golf course.

In 1990, Fabrizio said he had the former Antonello ironworks site on Williard St. rezoned. The zoning change was designed to allow the neighborhood to have broad input on future development at the site. Later, Georgia based Home Depot was allowed to develop the site under strict conditions set forth after neighborhood meetings.

At the time, the Quincy Citizens Association recognized Fabrizio's efforts, proclaiming, "Fabrizio has heard and recognized community concerns and has come up with measures to assure that the Home Depot project will not only be a financial asset to the city, but also that the neighborhood will be improved, that employment opportunities will be available for local residents and that the city's interest won't vanish after the permit is issued. This the group added is certainly a break through for the voters of Quincy. this councillor (Fabrizio) has proven himself to be a thinking representative of the people of Quincy."

As Chairman of the City Council's Education Committee, Fabrizio said he was able to uniquely assist Ward 4 through the recently approved Capital Project. In South Quincy. the abandoned Lincoln School has been leveled and construction is under way at the site for a new early childhood center that will relieve overcrowding at the Lincoln Hancock School. The Charles A. Bernazzani School, which is located in Ward 3 but serves many West Quincy school children will also be expanded and modernized under the project.

Fabrizio told his supporters: "Together we have worked long and hard on issues of importance both large and small. Yet despite these many accomplishments there are still many challenges that lie ahead."

Fabrizio noted that a new Ward 4 Community Center will be included in the new Early Childhood School in South Quincy. He also spoke on his proposed site plan review ordinance which would establish community standards for development pertaining to issues of traffic, aesthetics and overall neighborhood impact. Fabrizio pledged to continue his commitment to public safety. He has worked closely with the Police Department on crime prevention issues and has asked that the city's ambulance contractor station an ambulance in Ward 4. He said he was also instrumental in replacing Engine 5 in West Quincy with a brand new fire engine.

He thanked the Ward 4 neighborhood association for their cooperation with his monthly community meetings.

Fabrizio, 38, is employed by the Department of Social Services in the Family Resource Unit. He and his wife Kathy (Graham) are the parents of two daughters.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"When you get where you are going, where will you be?" This is a leading question that often is very provocative for people willing to do a little soul searching.

Some people answer: "I'm not going anywhere any more." They assume they are going nowhere in life, that they're standing still. But the fact is we're always moving in some direction. From the moment of conception we are moving on a course that carries us through life to death, and we trust, to something beyond.

There may be times when we might want to stop the world and get off, but life moves on, even then we think we are standing still.

Actually, none of us are created to stand still in life. We are created to grow and develop, not just in the beginning of life, but through to the very end...Too many Christian adults assume that they've done all the growing that's expected of them. "How much more growing am I supposed to do?" Perhaps the best answer is found in Paul's answer to the church at Ephesus: "until we all attain the unity of the faith and of the knowledge of the Son of God, to mature manhood, to the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ, so that we may no longer be children." For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

Morrisette hosted East Hartford, last year's Connecticut and Northeast Regional champions, last night (Wednesday), will host Wollaston Saturday night at 7:30 at Adams Field and will be home to Randolph Monday at 8:30 at Adams. It will face Holbrook in a double header starting at 5:30 next Wednesday at Adams.

Last Friday Morrisette lost to a New York all-star team, 7-5, in an exhibition game at Braintree.

New York got off to a fast start against Morrisette starter Dan Duncan with three hits and a walk for a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

He then settled down and allowed only two hits through the four innings he worked.

Morrisette scored four runs in the fourth. Jay Shnabel drove in two runs with a bases-loaded double, Tom Malvesti singled Schnabel home and the fourth run scored on an error.

Coach Dave Perdios then gave two of his younger pitchers a chance.

Chris Cotter took over in the fifth and got out of a jam when he retired three in a row after giving up two singles.

In the sixth New York scored four runs to take a 6-4 lead. Cotter developed a blister with two outs in the sixth and Perdios called upon young Sean Dolbeare, making his first Legion pitching appearance.

He got out of the sixth and gave up a run in the top of the seventh on a wild pitch.

Morrisette added a run in the bottom half when Dave Reinhart doubled and Malvesti singled.

Reinhart and Malvesti had two hits each, Reinhart and Pat Shea had two hits and Schnable had his two-run double.

"Wins and losses aren't important to us in these exhibition games," said Perdios.

In its latest zone 6 game Morrisette rolled over Canton, 14-3, as Mike Patch pitched a one-hitter as Canton scored three unearned runs. He struck out six and walked three.

Morrisette had 12 hits and took advantage of seven walks and two hit batters.

Morrisette sent 12 men to the plate in the second and scored six runs for a 6-1 lead. It added four in the fourth, three in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Malvesti had a double and single, was hit by a pitch and walked and drove in four runs. Schnabel had a double and single and two RBI, Serge Belcastro two singles and two RBI, Robbie Kane a triple and two walks and an RBI, Shea a single and RBI, Reinhart single and three walks and an RBI, Mark Cahill, Patch and Dolbeara a single each and Adam Calvert and RBI.

Morrisette defeated Weymouth, 7-2, with Sean Donovan pitching a complete game and settling down after giving up both runs in the first inning.

He allowed five hits, struck out six and walked two.

Morrisette scored a run in the first, scored five in the fourth and one in the fifth to hand Weymouth its first zone 6 defeat.

Morrisette played its best defense of the year and Duncan and Brian Hayes made outstanding catches in the outfield and the team had two fast double plays, one started by Malvesti and the other by Belcastro. Weymouth also had three runners cut down on the bases.

A bases-loaded double by Shea and a bases-loaded single by Hayes were the big blows in the five-run fourth. Donovan helped himself with two hits and a perfectly executed squeeze bunt with two strikes on him in the fifth. Shea had a single along with his double, Kane doubled, Schnabel had a single and Malvesti had an infield hit and scored twice.

Morrisette played its second tie game of the season, tying Milton, 5-5, in a game called after seven innings due to darkness.

Matt O'Toole started pitching for Morrisette and went five innings. He found the pitching mound uncomfortable and was wild as he walked six. He allowed eight hits, struck out three and gave up three earned runs. Pat Bryan relieved after a leadoff walk in the sixth and pitched two scoreless innings and allowed no hits. He did walk three, one intentionally.

Malvesti and Hayes had outstanding two-way games. Malvesti reached base four times with a double, a bunt single, a walk and was hit by a pitch.

Hayes threw out two base runners from right field. He reached base three times with a double and single and reached on an error. A highlight of the game was Shea's stealing home.

Duncan had two hits and an RBI, O'Toole a hit and RBI and Mark Cahill beat out a bunt, stole second and scored.

ROUGH RIDERS

When an engine idles roughly, it may be an indication that the fuel mixture in one or more of the cylinders is not igniting. The culprit may be a fuel mixture that is either too rich (with gasoline) or too lean (excessive amounts of air), resulting from deficient fuel delivery or from an air leak in the fuel delivery system. An engine malfunction, such as a loss of vacuum due to a cracked hose or damaged valve, may also be at the heart of the problem, or the cause may rest in the ignition system. Regardless of the source, accurately diagnosing and correcting a rough-idle problem will likely improve fuel economy. If only one dead cylinder were to be the cause of a rough idle in a 4-cylinder engine, it could mean wasting 25 percent on each purchase of gasoline.

HINT: A rough idle may simply be due to a loose ignition cable or vacuum hose.

The best way to make sure your car and its engine functions at its optimum level is to follow a regular maintenance schedule. Our service department at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will be happy to help you set one up. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) our technicians have the best diagnostic equipment available anywhere, including the Hunter computerized brake analyzer. There is no charge for this wonderful service. PRESIDENTIAL CONVALESCENT HOME in Quincy has been purchased from the U.S. Bankruptcy Court Trustee. Outside the home are, from left, Robert Kelleher, home co-owner; Geoffrey Nothnagle, Bert Holden and Elaine Madden of Quincy Savings Bank; Gretchen Kelleher, home co-owner; Joan Trudell of the Small Business Administration; Mayor James Sheets; and Charles R. Simpson Jr., president of Quincy Savings Bank.

Presidential Convalescent Home Purchased With Quincy Savings Bank's Help

After several years of negotiations, Gretchen and Robert Kelleher have purchased the Presidential Convalescent Home from the U.S. Bankruptcy Court Trustee.

The sale means a windfall $325,000 in back taxes to the city of Quincy, as well as peace of mind for residents and employees who were concerned that the home might close if the sale was not approved by the court appointed trustees.

It also means the end to a lengthy process during which the Kellehers tried several times to purchase the nursing home. Earlier attempts to close the final sale faltered when the previous owner was unable to pay back taxes to the city of Quincy, and back wages to nursing home employees.

The Kellehers also ran into trouble when several area banks refused to grant a loan to finance the purchase. Ultimately they were able to obtain financial through a Small Business Administration (SBA) lending program at Quincy Savings bank, through the efforts of Bert Holden and Elaine Madden, commercial loan officers at Quincy Savings, and Joan Trudell of the SBA.

"We were extremely pleased to be able to help the Kellehers purchase Presidential Convalescent Home," said Charles R. Simpson, Jr., president and chief executive officer of Quincy Savings.

Simpson became involved in the deal after several patients, employees and Mayor James Sheets contacted him regarding the Kelleher's plight in trying to arrange financing. One resident, 86-year-old Rose Applegate, wrote Simpson close to 100 letters describing her feelings about the home and asking for the bank's help.

"By their nature, deals involving nursing homes can be very difficult to make," said Simpson. "However, we felt that this was a good loan based in part on the Kellehers' commitment to the facility."

"Gretchen Kelleher has been director of nursing at the home for over 10 years, and both Gretchen and Bob Kelleher know the operation inside and out. Their combined expertise should make the nursing home successful in the coming years. Luckily Joan Trudell of the Small Business Administration shared that assessment, and she advocated for the loan on behalf of the Kellehers at the SBA."

Presidential Convalescent Home 86 residents and 99 employees. Several stopped by a recent gathering of those involved to thank Mayor Sheets for his assistance. However, one patient was insistent on meeting Simpson. In their first meeting since she began her letter writing campaign, resident Rose Applegate thanked Quincy Savings for providing the financing to keep the doors at the Presidential Convalescent Home open. Through the Kellehers' efforts, extensive improvements have been made to the building to make it more comfortable for residents, like Applegate, who call it "Home."

State Police Barracks Recommended In Quincy

State Senator Michael Morrissey (D-Quincy) announces that the State Police, as part of their facilities management plan developed under the Police Consolidation bill, have recommended that a new State Police barracks be constructed on state owned land on the Southeast Expressway in Quincy at the former Howard Johnson site.

The facilities plan is only a recommendation and is subject to available funding and bonding approval. The proposed plan would consolidate the State Police Barracks at the former MDC Police Barracks of the Lower Basin, Old Colony, Blue Hills and possibly Norwood.

Two new stations would be constructed, one in South Boston in conjunction with the Central Artery-Tunnel project, and one in Quincy on the Southeast Expressway on the sit of the former Howard Johnson's Restaurant. The two stations would modernize and update police stations serving the entire South Shore area.

"The location of the barracks at the Quincy would be a tremendous boost to the area," Morrissey said. "Not only would it increase response times to the heavily traveled Southeast Expressway, Route 3 and Route 128, but it would also provide the city of Quincy additional assistance and a speedier response to problems which may develop along MDC roads such as Quincy Shore Drive, Furnace Brook Parkway and the Blue Hills."

Morrissey noted that although police consolidation is proceeding "fairly smoothly," much more must be done if the potential of the consolidated State Police Force is to be realized.

"We must invest in new communications equipment, vehicles and centrally located, modern facilities if this consolidation is to fully succeed," he said. "We cannot allow our state troopers to drive vehicles which are unsafe and unable to communicate with each other while operating from police barracks which do not meet state building codes or modern police standards."

Morrissey promised to push for funding for the new equipment and stations in the next state capital expenditures bond issue.

10,000 Homeless From Floods

City To Send Food, Supplies To Quincy, Ill.

By MICHAEL WHALEN

City officials hope that a relief effort planned to aid the city of Quincy, Ill. will be able to reach the flood-ravaged area by Saturday.

Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley, organizer of the effort, said Tuesday that the 10,000 people who have been forced to leave their homes because of the flooding are in need of immediate relief.

"We would like have the first truck there Saturday," said Bradley, "but it depends on what we get for collection."

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that residents are asked to bring food donations and other personal items such as toothpaste to the central organization point (front lobby) of New City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center. The mayor added it is hoped donations can be loaded into trucks in front of City Hall and mobilized as soon as possible.

The drive to Quincy, Ill. is "1,100 or 1,200 miles," according to Sheets, and would take approximately 20 hours to drive.

Bradley said at press time he was uncertain whether the city would use vehicles leased from a local trucking company or if one of the area's major grocery chains, such as Stop & Shop, Shaw's or Star Market would be able to lend trucks to the effort. Grace Giunchiglia, secretary to the mayor, said local companies that would likely play some part in the effort include Stop & Shop, Procter and Gamble and Gillette Co.

Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano, who is helping to coordinate the program, said the effort could use as many helping hands as possible.

"These people (in Illinois) need food now," said Siciliano, who noted that six members of Quincy High School's STEP (Summer Training Education Program) have already offered to volunteer their time and efforts to the program.

Bradley said he and Mary Timcoe, a past president of the Houghs Neck Legion Post, came up with the idea of aiding Illinois when they heard on the news about the similarly-named city being devastated by flooding.

Sheets said that Quincy, Ill. has no official "sister" relationship with this Quincy, although he has in recent years developed a friendly relationship with former Quincy, Ill. Mayor Vern Hagstrom.

City Sues MWRA Over Rate Charges

By MICHAEL WHALEN

In an attempt to change the methodology by which the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority charges its water and sewer rates, the City of Quincy Tuesday filed a lawsuit against the MWRA in Suffolk Superior Court.

Mayor James Sheets said at a press conference Tuesday that the MWRA, which charges communities by population rather than actual water usage--which also impacts the sewer charge--must be made as soon as possible to change this methodology.

Sheets said the "heart and soul" of the litigation, which is not a class-action lawsuit but will seek a declaratory judgement on the matter, is the fact that when the MWRA was created in 1984, the state legislature required that the sewer charges assessed by the MWRA "shall give account to" five factors:

•Actual costs to the authority of providing services.

•Reasonable provisions to provide incentives to promote conservation of resources and encourage maintenance and improvement of sewer and water systems in a community.

•Reasonable provisions reflecting contributions made by municipalities for leak detection, system rehabilitation, sewage inflow-infiltration reduction projects, separation of combined sewers and other projects to improve overall efficiency.

•Reasonable provisions to reflect a municipality's historical investment in the sewer system and in the former MDC sewer system.

•Reasonable interest charges and penalties for delinquencies in payment.

Sheets said that by using its current methodology for charging water and sewer rates, the MWRA has not lived up to these provisions. City officials have stated in the past that the methodology favors some of the 43 communities under the MWRA's jurisdiction, including Boston, and places an unfair financial burden on others such as Quincy.

The mayor added that while in the past eight months he has seen a

It's Quin-zee Here And Quin-cee There

Our Quincy and Quincy, Ill. have a lot in common but differ over the pronunciation of the name.

It's Quin-zee here and Quin-cee there.

We pronounce it Quin-zee because that's the way the Quincy family pronounced it.

Our Quincy was named on Feb. 22, 1792 for Col. John Quincy, great grandfather of native sixth President John Quincy Adams.

A hamlet with a population of 10 residents was named Quincy, Ill. March 4, 1825 when Adams was inaugurated president.

The county in which it was located was designated Adams county. And the hamlet's main drag was named John's Square.

That little hamlet is now the city of Quincy.

The other 16 Quincys are in California, Florida, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Missouri, Mississippi, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

All 16 pronounce it Quin-cee.

But the Quincy family lived here--not there. And if they pronounce it Quin-zee, that's the way residents here think it should be.

Regardless of the debate over the pronunciation, Quincy, Ill. and our Quincy have had a friendly relationship in the past including the exchange of students between the two cities.

The two cities shared in the commemoration of the 150th anniversary of the opening of the first railroad in the United States in April 2, 1826.

The railway was built here in Quincy to haul Quincy granite from the quarries to the Newponset River where it was barged to Charlestown for construction of the Bunker Hill Monument.

In April 1976, a group of students, teachers and parents from here visited Quincy, Ill. which was celebrating its Bicentennial. They brought granite chips as memento gifts to students in Quincy, Ill.

A week later, Approximately 60 students, teachers and parents from Quincy, Ill. came here and were shown the local historic sites.

Including the birthplace of John Quincy Adams and his father, second president John Adams.

Of the 16 other Quincys, Quincy, Ill. has had the closest ties with our Quincy--a sister-city like relationship.

Hearing Tonight On MWRA Interceptor Relief System

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority will hold a public hearing tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the second floor conference room of Quincy City Hall regarding its plans to build a new regional sewer system to serve 120,000 residents in Braintree, Weymouth, Holbrook, Randolph, Hingham and Quincy.

According to the MWRA, the $128 million system will eliminate raw sewage backups into residential homes, basements and local streets in Braintree and Weymouth and abate the pollution of the Fore and Monatiquot rivers. The authority recently completed a Final Facilities Plan and Environmental Impact Report on the 60-year-old system, which the MWRA says does not have enough capacity to meet current and future needs.

"This new sewer system is long overdue," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald. "For many years, there has been a serious public health threat with raw sewage backing up into homes and streets whenever it rains and it is essential that this project moves forwards."

The recommended alternative includes a deep rock tunnel below Quincy and Weymouth, two new pumping stations (one to replace the existing pump station in Quincy and a new one in North Weymouth), new siphons and gravity sewers and work on existing pipes in Weymouth, East Braintree and Quincy.

Construction of the deep rock tunnel will also allow the MWRA to transport sludge from the Deer Island Wastewater Treatment Plant to the Fore River Pelletizing Plant via pipeline in an inter-island tunnel.

Most of the construction for the project would be done by tunneling. This method, the MWRA says, will avoid digging up streets, backyards and sensitive marsh-land areas, and it's the most acceptable alternative to the communities involved.

MacDonald said the existing sewer system was built in the early 1930s and, despite tremendous growth in the communities, little was done to enlarge the system to prevent the pollution problems, which began in 1954. Planning for the new sewer system began in 1981 by the MDC he noted, but concern from residents about how and where the system would be sited and constructed led to further delays.

Prior to the MWRA Board of Directors vote to approve the recommended plan, all three communities voiced their support, MacDonald said.

There will be a brief presentation summarizing the plan and its environmental impacts, followed by public comment and questions.

Copies of the Final Facilities Plan and Environmental Impact Report are available in the reference section of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St.

Members of the Citizen's Advisory Committee representing Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth met with the authority and its consultants over a two-year period.

Considered 'Armed And Dangerous'

Barnstable Man Wanted In Death Of Quincy Woman

By ROBERT BOSWORTH and MICHAEL WHALEN

A 25-year-old Barnstable man accused of murdering a 24-year-old Quincy woman outside her family's Wollaston home Saturday evening remained at-large Tuesday as local and state authorities stepped up their search for the suspect.

An arrest warrant was issued at 3 p.m. Tuesday for John Anthony Diaz, of 437 Old Mill Rd., Barnstable, who is accused of fatally shooting Dawn E. Brown, a former Quincy resident and 1985 graduate of North Quincy High School.

Police consider the suspect, who allegedly shot Brown in the forehead with a 9mm firearm, armed and dangerous.

"Anyone in contact with him (Diaz) should consider him armed and dangerous," Quincy Police Captain Robert Salvaggio said.

Salvaggio said an arrest warrant was issued after Diaz, who once dated the victim's sister, was positively identified at the murder scene by members of Brown's family.

"He was last seen at 38 Royal Street (the Brown residence) the night of the murder. He was positively identified at the scene," Salvaggio said "As a result of that identification, a warrant was issued today (Tuesday) at 3 p.m."

Salvaggio said Quincy Police, State Police and officials from the Norfolk County District Attorney's office are looking for Diaz, a former boyfriend of Kimberlee Brown. Asked if authorities are confident an arrest will be made soon, Salvaggio said, "We are as confident as we can be. Eventually, he'll be found."

Salvaggio said Logan Airport and other police departments along the Eastern seaboard have been advised of the warrant and the search for

DAWN BROWN

Diaz. Police said they believe Diaz, who will turn 25 Saturday, may be driving a 1991 black Jeep Cherokee 4 X 4 sport model with a red stripe, license plate 589-CKS.

He is described as black, approximately 5-foot 8-inches tall and 185 pounds. He was last seen wearing a blue sweatshirt and blue-jean or denim shorts.

Authorities believe that the killing may be a case of mistaken identity. Police have speculated that Diaz may have wanted to murder Kimberlee Brown in a jealous rage over her impending marriage. In the darkness, the killer may have mistaken Dawn Brown for her sister.

Quincy Police Lt. Neil MacDonald said Kimberlee Brown was interviewed by police Monday but did not disclose further details.

Family members told police that the gunman, who they believe was Diaz, shouted "Kimberlee" before firing a single shot at Dawn Brown with a 9mm firearm from just three feet away. Witnesses included Dawn's fiance, Mitchell Goldstein of New Jersey, and her 12-year-old nephew.

Brown, her fiance and nephew had just returned home from a local Friendly's Restaurant for some ice cream. Brown was shot at around 11:16 p.m and died in a Boston hospital about eight hours later.

At the time of the murder, Kimberlee Brown was with her fiance, David Goldstein--Mitchell's brother--at The Tent, a Marina Bay nightclub. Police went to The Tent after the shooting and escorted Kimberlee, who is now staying at an undisclosed location, away for her own personal safety.

Police have said Kimberlee has been living "in fear of her life" since the shooting.

Kimberlee and her sister Dawn had recently moved to New Jersey where they met the Goldstein brothers. Kimberlee and David Goldstein had introduced Dawn and his brother Mitchell to each other.

Mitchell and Dawn, who had since become engaged, were in Quincy last week to help Kimberlee prepare for her own bridal shower, which was held the night of the shooting.

Dawn was scheduled to begin a new job Monday at Morristown Memorial Hospital in New Jersey. She had taken evening health career courses at Quincy College part-time from 1989 until the past spring semester. The courses prepare students to enter the college's nursing program.

She planned to continue taking night courses from her new apartment in Andover, N.J., about 25 miles northwest of Morristown, according to Peter Pastras, director of psychiatric program development at the hospital. Dawn had been living in New Jersey for only a few weeks.

Her sister Kimberlee had been tranferred by her employer last September to a nearby New Jersey community. Prior to that, the Brown sisters had lived all of their lives in Quincy.

The murder is the second shooting death in Quincy this year.

On Feb. 5, a man was displaying a gun before a friend on Gilmore St. The gun was dropped and went off, fatally wounding the friend. The man was charged with manslaughter.

Pilot Trolley Service To Historic Sites Begins

A pilot trolley bus service linking the various National Park Service sites within Quincy began operation Wednesday and local officials hope the venture will boost the city's tourism effort.

Brush Hill Transportation Company, Beantown Trolley of Randolph, was awarded the contract.

The service, part of a pilot program for this tourist season, connects National Park Service sites within a 3-mile circuit including: the Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St.; the John Adams and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces at 133-141 Franklin St.; the Adams National Historic Site at 135 Adams St. and the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St., where the Adams Presidents and First Ladies are entombed.

National Park Rangers will be aboard the trolley to interpret the area's historical significance. Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site, called the trolley service "a critical link to communicating the Adams story and Quincy history to the park visitor and is a direct result of the efforts by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy, who acknowledges the importance of Quincy's history and contributions of the Adams family to our country."

The trolley will operate seven days a week, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The first trolley will depart from the National Park Service Visitor Center at 9:15 a.m.

The interpretive fee for the optional trolley service costs $1 for adults, 50 cents for children 16 and under; and is free to children children five years and under. The trolley ticket is valid all day.

Peak said a portion of the interpretation fee may be used to subsidize the trolley service which she estimated at $500 per day. The service will be monitored and reviewed monthly. Peak said she hopes the trolley runs through Nov. 10, the end of the tourist season.

The regular and separate entrance fee for the park remains the same: $2 for adults, free for visitors 16 years and younger and 62 years and older. The Park Pass, Golden Eagle Pass, Golden Access Pass, and Golden Age Pass are accepted for the entrance fee.

Peak said the trolley is equipped with a portable ramp for handicapped accessibility. "Next year, with the proper funding, we will put a contract out for bid for a trolley which has a hydraulic unit which is handicapped accessible," she added.

Noting visitation during June was 102 percent higher than 1992, Peak said the trolley service "will greatly enhance the visitor experience and enable visitors to tour the city in an effective, efficient way."

The superintendent said the Adams NHS anticipates offering trolley service next season on a full-time basis, April 19 through Nov. 10 to meet the needs of all park visitors.

"It is also a park goal to include other historic sites along the trail through a cooperative effort working with the city, state and other agencies and organizations." Peak singled out Mayor James Sheets and Cong. Gerry Studds for supporting and promoting tourism and a trolley system within the community.

Adams National Historic Site was established in 1946 as a unit of the Department of the Interior, National Park Service to commemorate and preserve the family home and estate of the presidential Adams family and their descendents. In 1979, the John Adams and John Quincy Adams birthplaces were added to the park boundary.

In 1993, in cooperation with the United First Parish Church, the site interprets the crypts of the Presidents and First Ladies For more information about the site's programs, call the National Park Service Visitor Center at 770-1175.

PRESIDENTIAL WREATH is laid upon the tomb of John Quincy Adams, sixth president of the United States, on his 226th birthday in the crypt located in the basement of United First Parish Church. Sheldon Bennett, church minister; Commander Peter Ligman, U.S. Naval Reserve Center, Quincy Reserve color guard, Lisa Sauvageau, Christine Cartmell, South Weymouth Naval Air Station color guard Petty Officers Scott Allen and Peter Pearson.

FUTURE HOPES FOR CLOG DETECTION

A simple non-evasive test to determine arterial clogging may be on the horizon, thanks to work being done at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Cardiologists there have reported encouraging findings using a new imaging test. A bit of synthetic LDL protein is injected into the bloodstream, where it latches onto any areas in the arteries that are starting to have atherosclerosis build-up. The synthetic hookup packs a radioactive substance that shows up in pictures taken with a special device called a gamma scintillation camera. This lets doctors get a good look at the degree of arterial clogging, including patches that could break off and block blood flow, before arteries become severely blocked.

P.S. The earlier arterial clogging is detected, the easier it is to treat with diet, exercise, and drugs.

The new test ought to prove useful for doctors with patients whose family history or lifestyle makes them particularly susceptible to cardiac disease. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. The First Black Candidate

Martin Ervin, who has since dropped out of the mayor's race, was referred to here and in other newspapers as the first black political candidate in Quincy's history.

ERVIN

Not so.

He may have been the first black candidate—short lived as his campaign was—for mayor but not the first to run for elective office here.

That distinction apparently went to Sam Shellman 61 years ago.

The Sun's "Quincy's Yesterdays" column recently had an item about Shellman's death in 1935 which gave a little background about him. (The item was called to our attention by an anonymous reader.)

Shellman, a native of Georgia came to Quincy in 1911, had a barbershop in Wollaston and lived on Beale St.

In 1932 he ran ran for the City Council at-large with the slogan "The Council Needs More Color."

We did a little research on that election and found there were 20 council at-large candidates in the preliminary runoff that year.

Shellman finished 19th with 635 votes. The last place candidate named Akerstrom had 619. Thomas Burgin who went on to become mayor, state senator and one of the city's great political powers, topped the 20-candidate field with a vote of 9,996.

Shellman collapsed in his barbershop in May, 1935 and died enroute to Quincy Hospital in an ambulance.

STEVE HAWKO of White St. has decided not to run for the Ward 4 City Council seat.

HAWKO

"I came within an inch of getting in," he says, "but because of family considerations, I don't think this is the year for me to be candidate. I think 1995 would be better."

Hawko, an environmental protection department engineer, is a former member of the Medford School Committee and a recent appointee by Mayor James Sheets to the Quincy Park-Recreation Board.

City Sues MWRA Over Charges

"meaningful change" in terms of cooperation from the MWRA, which reduced its FY94 water and sewer assessment from what it originally projected, a more equal balance between communities is required.

"The MWRA has been cooperative with the rate explosion, but the issue we're dealing with today is rate equity," said Sheets. "We are unjustly charged because of the methodology, and if we don't pursue this matter, we think it could be years (before the methodology is changed) and people will continue to pay higher rates."

Sheets said the city is asking three things of the court: to declare the currently methodology for the allocation of sewer charges to the City of Quincy as unlawful. to direct the MWRA to revise its methodology for sewer charges to take into account the criteria outlined above, and to direct the MWRA to prepare a specific plan and timetable for determining charges and submit it to the court for approval.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, who along with special counsel Peter Koff prepared the lawsuit, said plans for the litigation in its current form began to solidify about two months ago. The matter of a lawsuit first was first discussed by the City Council last fall, he said.

McGrath added that while other communities have in past months have discussed with Quincy officials the possibility of jointly filing the lawsuit against the MWRA, it was decided earlier this week that it would be in the city's best interests "to proceed on our own." McGrath said that the possibility remains that other MWRA communities might join Quincy in the litigation, but nothing is certain as yet.

Other officials at the press conference included City Council President Charles Phelan, Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, who recently organized a "Tea Party" at Marina Bay to protest the MWRA water and sewer rates; Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Councillor Joseph LaRaia, Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, and Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader.

Navy Assures Repair Work At Victory Plant

July 15-21, 1921 — 72 Years Ago

Forest I. Neal, president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, received word from Cong. Louis A. Frothingham that the Navy plans to retain the Victory plant at Squantum as a repair base for destroyers and submarines.

"Received personal assurance from Assistant Secretary (Franklin D.) Roosevelt that no charge would be made at present in the status of Squantum Victory plant," said Frothingham in a telegram to Neal.

Earlier, Neal charged that valuable machinery from Squantum plant was being shipped to Norfolk, Va., a move that would seriously cripple the ability of the Victory plant to function as a repair base.

Neal and Chamber Secretary Alfred N. LaBreque claimed that the removal of the machinery was the first step to dismantle the plant and move future repair work to bases in the south.

More than 2,500 men could be employed at the Squantum plant if it were properly used, said Neal. In 24 hours it could be made ready to handle 54 destroyers and a like number of submarines.

CUTBACK AT FORE RIVER

General Manager Sam Wakeman of the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Fore River Shipyard said that a curtailment of Navy spending on ship work will result in the layoff of about 2,500 men at the yard.

The remaining 2,000 workers, it was said, will be working only five days a week and five hours a day from 7 a.m. to 12 noon.

"We are finishing our last merchant contract, which should be delivered during the current month, and we have taken no new contracts," said Wakeman. "Our general policy in laying off men will be to cause the smallest amount of hardship."

Two major naval vessels were under construction at Fore River, the battleship Massachusetts and the scout cruiser Lexington, which were contracted for two years ago. But little work has been done since the keels were laid.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

She is well known throughout the Northeast where she has appeared at festivals, schools and libraries. She has appeared at Three Apples Storytelling Festival, the Museum of Science, Boston's World Trade Center, Me and Thee Coffeehouse and at First Nights in Vermont and Massachusetts. Nationally, she's been recognized by Storytelling Magazine.

The summer storytelling series will continue with performances by Alicia Quintano July 27, Derek Burrows Aug. 3, Carol Duhamel Aug. 10, and the Poobley Greegy Puppet Theater Aug. 17.

Free parking is available in front of the high school, which is located near the North Quincy MBTA Red Line station.

"Lend Me a Tenor" takes place on the biggest night in the history of the Cleveland Grand Opera Company. For this night, a world famous tenor is to perform his greatest role at the gala season-opening performance which the general manager hopes will put Cleveland on the operatic map. SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Through the years we have always shown sensitivity to the needs and desires of the families we have served...We have felt through the years that the confidence and friendships of the people we have served is the best and only proof available that we at DEWARE have met these demands...

Through the years we have believed that how we conduct ourselves WITHIN OUR WALLS in understanding, sympathetic and intellectual guidance, thoughtfulness and unmatched service is our primary concern...Through the years we have consistently believed in the "Top Line of Sensitivity" and not in the "Bottom Line of Dollars!"...Through the years we have always been truthful in answering any and all questions concerning our costs/services/facilities and merchandise. We have always believed that it is our responsibility to provide a range of prices and services that provide exactly what the needs and preferences of the consumer prefer. Over the years our service shows a remarkable consistency of economy. The many, many families of all faiths we have been privileged to serve will confirm this...

Legion Baseball

Morrisette Moves Into Zone 6 Penthouse

The defending champion Morrisette Legion baseball team moved into first place in Zone 6 with a 4-2 victory over Randolph Monday night, improving its record to 8-2-2.

Morrisette will be home to Quincy Friday night at 8:30 at Adams Field and will host Milton next Tuesday at 8:30 at Adams.

Five teams are in the running for the three top state playoff spots as only four points separate the five teams, Morrisette, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton and Randolph.

Sean Donovan pitched Monday night and pitched a five-hitter, settling down after a slow start as he allowed three hits and three runs in the first inning. He allowed only two more hits, walked one and struck out six. The Defense played well and came up with its 14th double play of the season.

Morrisette got a run back in the second when Serge Belcastro tripled and scored when the relay throw got away. Hits by Pat Shea and Donovan were wasted on a disputed double play call for interference.

Morrisette went ahead to stay in the fourth on two hits, a walk and a sacrifice fly.

Dave Reinhart walked, Jay Schnagel hit a ground rule double and Belcastro doubled. Tom Malvesti sacrificed Belcastro to third and he scored on Adam Calvert's sacrifice fly.

Shea had a one-out triple in the fifth but was left stranded. In the sixth Belcastro, who has been swinging a hot bat, singled for his third hit.

Last Saturday night Morrisette defeated Wollaston, 7-3, after Wollaston had taken a 2-0 lead in the first on Duane Holmes' 400-foot homer over the right-center field fence at Adams Field. Mark Swirbalus had singled off starter and complete game winner Mike Patch before Homes' homer.

Morrisette scored a run in the bottom of the first without a hit on walks to Shea and Brian Hayes and a wild pitch.

Morrisette sent eight batters to the plate in the third and scored three runs. Robbie Kane walked, Shea singled and Kane scored on an infield out. Reinhart singled to drive in Shea, Reinhart stole second and scored on Belcastro's single.

Wollaston added an unearned run in the fourth on hits by Sirbalus and Charlie Rozanitis and two errors.

Morrisette scored a run in the fifth on Shnabel's triple and an RBI single by Belcastro. It added two in the sixth, both unearned, on a single by Calvert, a bunt single by Kane, a three-base error and a wild pitch.

Patch and Wollaston's John Russell pitched well. Patch allowed six hits, struck out four and walked one, while Russell, going 5 2/3 innings, allowed eight hits, struck out five and walked four.

Morrisette rolled over Canton, 10-2, in a rain-shortened five-inning game with pitcher Matt O'Toole improving to 3-0 along with a tie and dropping his ERA to 1.60. He allowed three hits and struck out seven.

Morrisette was paced by Kane's double and two singles and three runs scored. It scored four runs in the first, four more in the second, one in the third and another in the fifth.

Hayes had two hits and two RBI, Shea went 2-for-3 and scored twice, Belcastro belted a two-run homer over the left field fence, Reinhart singled in a run and Malvesti and Calvert walked with the bases loaded for two more runs.

In an exhibition game against East Hartford, last year's Connecticut and Northeast Regional champion, Morrisette dropped a 5-4 decision. East Hartford had eliminated Morrisette from the Regionals.

Dan Duncan pitched well for seven innings and Malvesti pitched the eighth and ninth, giving up two hits and no runs.

Earlier Morrisette lost to West Roxbury, 3-1, in a well-played gamed featuring fine pitching. Morrisette self-destructed as W. Roxbury scored twice without a hit in the fifth to break a 1-1 tie.

Donovan pitched a complete game and allowed just one hit, a double in the fourth after a leadoff walk. He walked four and struck out seven. One one W. Roxbury run was earned.

Roxbury pitcher Mike Hauck was equally as tough as he allowed four hits, struck out seven and walked one.

The lone Morrisette run came in the first when Kate beat out an infield hit and scored on Hayes' double. Hayes was thrown out trying for third based. A Reinhart double was wasted.

Quincy Coming On After Slow Start

After getting off to a slow start, (0-4), the Quincy Legion baseball team has won five of its last eight games for a 5-7 record.

Seven of the 12 games were decided by one run with Quincy winning three and losing four.

Two of the losses were in games in which Quincy led (Braintree and Hyde Park) in the first inning. Quincy won its last three games, defeating Hyde Park, 3-2, and sweeping a doubleheader from Wollaston, 3-2 and 11-6.

In the Hyde Park game Dan Burke pitched a two-hitter, striking out 11 and going all the way. George Wirtz had broken a 2-2 tie in the fourth inning, singling in Steve Miller.

In the first game against Wollaston Terry Gaide pitched 6 2/3 innings of one-hit ball only to tire in the seventh after allowing Wollaston to tie the game. Burke came in to get the final out with the bases loaded.

Over 300 Sailors In Lipton Cup Regatta

The seventh annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held Saturday and Sunday off Squantum Yacht Club with a record number of 300 sailors from Canada to Bermuda taking part.

"The Lipton Cup has become the biggest regatta in the East," said Don McGilvray, who heads the event's organization along with Dick Casey and Dave Lewis. "There have been big ones at Newport and in Florida, but we have been contacted by clubs along the East Coast, such as those on Long Island. They all say they want to be sure they are included."

Even the San Diego Yacht Club, current holder of the America's Cup, made inquiries about the Lipton Cup.

It kicks off with social events this Friday night at the Squantum Yacht Club. There will be 18 different boat classes, ranging from the small and quick Lasers to the large ocean-racing PHRF boats. A few years ago the Russian entry in the America's Cup paid a visit to the Lipton Cup.

"The winners of every class will have his or her name on the Lipton Cup," said McGilvray. "The cup is over 60 years old and has an interesting tradition."

The first race will begin at 11 a.m. both days and four courses will be used. For spectators the offshore starting line is 500 yards off Squantum Yacht Club's outer channel marker.

Noble Shines In Debut With Oilers

Chris Noble, who had an outstanding career at Quincy High, made a successful debut as quarterback for the Randolph Oilers, who rallied for two touchdowns in the last period to defeat the Boston Braves (formerly the Hyde Park Cowboys), 18-15, in an Eastern Football League opener last Friday at Randolph.

Noble had a hand in both Oiler touchdowns. He passed to Mark Harding for a 17-yard touchdown to put Randolph up, 9-7, following a field goal by Ray Almeida.

Then he scored himself from the two and Almeida's kick made it 16-7. The other points for the Oilers came on a safety.

Noble's only problem came later when he was caught in traffic, couldn't find a man open and rolled right. He was twisted up, the ball popped out and into the hands of Boston's Todd Stuckey, who raced 86 yards for a touchdown.

"Chris did a fine job and I think he will have a good season for us," said owner and general manager Peter O'Kane.

Noble succeeds another former Quincy standout, Billy Shaughnessy, who retired after a tremendous year for the Oilers last season.

Noble is one of several Quincy players on the Oilers squad. Among others are Frank Calabro, Kevin MacDougall, Ryan Craig, Dave Joyce and Joe Baker.

The Oilers will host defending champion Marlboro Shamrocks this Friday night at 7:30 at Randolph High Field.

Junior League

Continental Wins Second A.L. Title

Continental Cable won its second straight Quincy Junior Baseball League American League title by sweeping its last three regular season games and winding up at 17-5.

However, Cable dropped a 5-4 decision to Beacon Sports in the opening game of the playoffs with Brian Doyle hitting two home runs for Beacon.

Doyle's heroics negated an otherwise strong pitching effort by Chris Bregoli, who struck out 15 in the oppressive heat.

Cable took an early 2-0 lead as Mike Welch and Paul Carney walked with the bases loaded.

Beacon took a 3-2 lead on Doyle's first home run. Cable tied it after Carney drive in Mike Powers, who had walked. Doyle's second homer regained the lead for Beacon but Cable's Ryan Hutchings singled in Welch. Three singles and a walk in the sixth gave Beacon the lead for good with Brent Austin singling in Brendan Donahue.

Tim McGillicuddy threw out two runners at the plate, including the prospective tying run in the sixth.

Cable bounced back to eliminate the Lions, 14-10, in its second playoff game behind the gutsy pitching of Kevin Walsh and the hitting of Welch, Powers and Bregoli, Walsh pitched a six-hitter in going the route.

Cable took a 3-1 lead after Welch's double drove in two in the first. Cable struck for six runs in the second with a Powers double driving in two, a Welch squeeze bunt scoring one and Hutchings driving in another with a double.

Walsh was in command until the Lions struck for six runs in the fourth to tie the game at nine. Andrew Currie and Mike McEvoy haxed the key hits with McEvoy droving in two with a double.

matt Moriarty got the winning Cable rally started with a single. Tim O'Connor followed with a double and Bregoli blasted a three-run homer to deep right center for the winning run. Welch followed a Powers double and a Walsh walk with a single to drive in two more.

Welch had five RBI, Bregoli three And Powers two. Powers had three doubles, Billy Davis and Hutchings had excellent fielding plays.

McEvoy led the Lions with two doubles and three RBI and Pat Dolbeare and Mike Riedy played well.

In the first of its last three regular season games Cable cruised by Burgin Platner, 15-5, as Bregoli pitched a two-hitter and had 12 strikeouts.

Cable exploded for seven runs in the first inning with Powers tripling in two runs and Hutchings and Chad Fitzpatrick droving in runs.

Hutchings had two more RBI in a five-run second, Walsh, who went 2-for-2, drove in three and scored three times and O'Connor scored three runs.

For Burgin Will Tracy had a triple and Brendan Bowes doubled in a run.

Cable then walloped South Shore Buick, 16-6, with Walsh pitching a complete game, striking out 10.

Bregoli drove in five runs with a two-run homer, a triple and double. Walsh went 4-for-4 and had two RBI, Fitzpatrick had an RBI double as did Joe Ardagna, Billy Davis had two hits and an RBI and Paul Flynn also drove in a run.

For Buick, Matt Kisel and a triple and single and J.T. Stevenson and Paul Lentine had two hits each.

Cable finished the regular season with a 5-0 victory over the VFW as Bregoli pitched one-hit ball over four innings and struck out 10. It raised his strikeout total to 121 in 55 innings.

Chris Wilson drove in Fitzpatrick for the first run and in the third, following three walks, Powers doubled three runs in. O'Connor drove in the other run after Walsh had tripled.

Dave Peters UMass Asst. Hockey Coach

Dave Peters, a Quincy native and former North Quincy High hockey coach, has been named an assistant hockey coach at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst after serving the past three years as an assistant coach at Kent State University.

Peters was assistant coach at Kent State two years ago when his team upset Boston College, 4-3, at Conte Forum.

UMass-Amherst head coach Joe Mallen, a B.C. assistant for the past seven years, was impressed by the play of Kent State in that game.

"They came in and beat us on our own ice and I remember saying whoever is doing their recruiting is doing a great job," said Mallen. "It was Dave Peters."

Peters' primary duties with the Minutemen's new hockey program will be recruiting.

"Dave has a lot of talents," added Mallen. "His main forte is recruiting and that's the focus of our whole program right now. The biggest thing we needed was to have a couple of guys with recruiting talents."

Peters attended St. Mary's School in Quincy and attended Abp. Williams High and Boston College, where he played hockey. He came up through the Quincy Youth Hockey program, played in the New England Pro-Amateur League, the Pro Elite League and the Quincy Executive League. He was assistant coach at Weymouth North before taking over the North Quincy reins for the 1989-90 season.

His only Raider team won its first five games against Greater Boston League teams but faltered when the Suburban League got underway and finished at 8-9-2.

He was looking forward to his second year at North as he had a fine returning nucleus, but felt he couldn't pass up the chance to coach at Kent State.

"I enjoyed coaching at North and was really looking forward to a second year," he said. "But I couldn't pass up the chance to coach at the Div. 1 college level. It is a real thrill to be coming home to coach and I'm eagerly looking forward to coaching at UMass."

KEEP PLUGGING AWAY

An auto technician can tell a lot about a car simply by replacing the spark plugs. The electrodes on the replaced plugs should be a golden brown or grayish-tan. If a plug is blackened with carbon buildup, it is a sign that the cylinder is being fed an overly rich fuel/air mixture. If this problem is limited to a single cylinder, the fault could lie with a fuel injector. If all the plugs are laden with carbon, it may be that a clogged air filter is restricting air flow. Blistering of a spark plug's white ceramic top is a sign that the cylinder has been running too hot or overly lean. Cylinder overheating may be due to detonation caused by carbon buildup in the combustion chamber or a restriction in coolant passage. A lean fuel mixture may be a sign of a fuel injector problem or a vacuum leak.

HINT: If even one spark plug is fouled, it may lead to a failed state emissions control test due to high hydrocarbon levels.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO would like to remind you that our technicians here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) look forward to the challenge of giving your car the same level of personal attention they give their own. Whether you need to have your spark plugs replaced, or more extensive work done, make us your first stop. 46 Quincy College Nursing Students Recognized At Ceremony

Forty-six Quincy College nursing students recently participated in a recognition ceremony at First Parish Church, Quincy Square.

The ceremony highlighted two significant moments in the life of the nursing students. First, the certificate of Program Completion was presented and then the students were recognized as peers by nursing professionals.

The students, who represent more than 12 communities, are:

Patrice Ballem, Sarah Beal, Jean Belmont, Jennifer Butler, Jo-Anne Calabro (class secretary), Amy Canty, Myrna Cassion, Dianne Columbus, Andrea Cotterell, Michelle Doody, Michael Forbes, Audile Germain, Linda Guerrero, Claire Halpin, Laurie Hartigan (class treasurer), Jeanell Hartzog, Jeanne Hayes, Ellen Hughes, Carole Jean, Yonide Justinville, Patrick Kane, Maureen Kilroy, Sylvia Lewis, Diane Long, Bethany Maschio, Noreen Massey, Dawn McCarney, Sheila Montgomery (class president), Nicole Nichols, Gladys Obas, Paul Olmsted, Katherine O'Neal, Erin Palm, Charles Parker, Susan Pauli, Jennifer Peterson, Joanne Rodick, Marilyn Rogers, Sandra Shade, Pamela Smith, Margaret Trevains, Karin Turner, Wendy Vaughan, Stacey Verrico, Kevin Wallace, Diana Wright.

Laurie Hartigan received the Alumni Award and Wendy Vaughn received the Faculty Award later during the ceremony.

Guest speaker was Rep. Frank M. Hynes (Marshfield and Scituate). Hynes chaired the Special Commission on Nursing which authored House Bill 6039. This bill fostered the modern nurse's role in health care delivery and provided a response to many of the issues such as the entry into the practice and the shortage of nurses.

House Bill 6039 is an achievement in the history of nursing. Nursing finds its roots in Boston where the first nursing school in America was founded in 1863.

Rev. Dr. Sheldon Bennett, First Parish Church, offered comments and a prayer.

Quincy College Freezes Tuition For The Fifth Consecutive Year

GORDON S. JOHNSON of Quincy, left, is awarded a Volunteer Income Tax Assistance Certificate from Dr. Bernard Meylar, associate professor of Suffolk University's accounting department. The awards are given by the IRS in appreciation for preparing tax returns for the elderly, the Beacon Hill community and Suffolk University students, staff and administration.

For the fifth consecutive year, Quincy College will freeze tuition rates, announces College President O. Clayton Johnson.

Quincy College has experienced increased enrollment each year and has seen its student body grow to more than 5,000 full and part-time students. "We don't need to raise more money," said Johnson.

The college operates on a $6.5 million budget and holds an additional $3.4 million surplus, according to college officials.

The two-year college offers associate and certificate programs as well as non-credit offerings. Tuition ranges from $1700 for full-time liberal arts students to $3,700 for nursing students.

Nationwide, colleges point to increased operating costs and a sagging economy, while attempting to justify tuition increases as high as 15 percent each year. In addition, colleges and universities in Massachusetts have attached additional fees, which also increase yearly, to the annual cost of attendance. Increasing costs erratically each year often place a college education out of the reach of many individuals who are qualified, but lack the financial resources.

Quincy College attracts a diverse student body, drawing students from throughout Southeastern Massachusetts and the world. Minority students comprise more than 21 percent of the student body. International students from more than 35 nations attend Quincy College.

While the average age of a Quincy College student in 28, the average Quincy College student attends Quincy for a variety of reasons. Some are returning to school after raising a family; others seek retraining or improved skills for better jobs; some find Quincy College's day and evening programs fit their schedule.

The Quincy campus is located across from the Quincy Center Red Line MBTA station, making it accessible to students who lack their own transportation.

City Census Shows Overall Gains

Minorities 14% Of Population

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city's population and demographics continue to change, according to local census figures which show Quincy's population has increased slightly to 86,343 of which 14 percent are now minorities.

The latest population figure represents an increase of 1.6 percent or 1,358 over the 84,985 residents counted by the city's door-to-door census in 1992. City Clerk Joseph Shea said this year's figures, collected through the mail, door-to-door and over the phone, are accurate.

"Yes, the census is not an exact science but the figures are accurate," Shea said.

The clerk attributed the small increase to fewer vacancies in the city's rental properties. "There's nothing new as far as development. In 1991 and 1992, we found a lot of empty apartment rooms and condos. This year we didn't find them; they're occupied."

One significant change in the city's demographics is the increase in minority residents from 9.7 percent or 8,646 in 1992 to 14% or 12,166 in 1993. Asians are still the city's leading minority with 10,466 residents or 12.12 percent of Quincy's population.

Shea said the census shows the number of Asians rising in the northern section of the city. He said there is a correlation between Asians and public transportation. "The MBTA and transit has a lot to do with it," he said, adding many Asians rely on transit for public transportation.

Last year, Asians comprised 10 percent of Ward 6 (North Quincy-Montclair) and 8 percent of Ward 5 (Wollaston). This year, those figures are up to 18 percent and 15 percent respectively.

Shea said the city is catching up to the influx of Asians which occurred in Quincy during the 1980s. He noted the 1990 state census pegged the Asian population at 5,577. Last year, 9300 Asians were counted by city census workers.

Essentially, the numbers show that Quincy is becoming more ethnically diverse. In addition, Asians are becoming more pervasive in other areas of Quincy.

"Asian families seem to be leaving rental properties in North Quincy and Montclair and are moving to single-family homes in Southwest Quincy and Quincy Point. Some are also moving to Adams Shore and Houghs Neck.

"Over the last three years, the Asian population has evened out in its distribution. They are now situated throughout the city," Shea said.

The number of black and Hispanic residents also increased but only slightly. Each group continues to represent approximately one percent of the city's population.

Shea said black residents tend to live in Southwest Quincy and Germantown. He said Hispanic residents live throughout the city.

Census figures regarding age and gender breakdowns for the city were not available at press time.

The increase in population occurred city-wide. The biggest jump happened in Ward 3 which went up 428 people, from 13,964 to 14,392. Ward 2 had the smallest gain with 16 people, from 14,375 to 14,391.

Other increases, by ward, are: Ward 1, 186 (from 14,094 to 14,280); Ward 4, 324 (from 14,165 to 14,489); Ward 5, 165 (from 14,278 to 14,441); and Ward 6, 241 (from 14,109 to 14,350.)

Sheets In Quincy, Ill.: 'I Have Great Pride In The People Of Both Cities'

200,000 Pounds Of Food, Supplies Trucked To Illinois

By MICHAEL WHALEN

When the last truck pulls away from Quincy City Hall on either Friday or Saturday, an estimated 200,000 pounds of food and supplies and at least $9,000 in monetary contributions will have been collected for the flood-ravaged area of Quincy, Ill.

Donations for the Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort, will be accepted in front of City Hall through 5 p.m. today (Thursday), according to Quincy Police Patrolman Robert Hanna, one of the organizers of the effort.

Food, tolietries and all other kinds of supplies except clothing will be accepted, Hanna said.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday in a phone interview from Illinois that the response to the relief effort from Quincy and South Shore residents and businesses has been overwhelming.

"My reaction has been one of great pride--pride in the people of Quincy, Mass. for the outpouring of their love, and pride in the people of Quincy, Ill. for the courage they have shown throughout this ordeal," said Sheets.

Sheets, who along with Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano arrived in Illinois last Sunday evening, said the devastation wrought by the flooding in the area is "shocking." He noted that he had toured the area in a public vehicle Monday and planned Tuesday to fly over the surrounding communities by helicopter to get even more of a "real sense" of what has become of the area.

"It will take many, many months for these communities to recover from this," said Sheets. "Some will never come back to normal."

The mayor said the latest numbers he had received on the devastation wrought by the flooding were 31 people killed (although none in Quincy, Ill.) and $10 billion in damages to 22,000 homes spread out over 16,000 square miles.

Approximately 10,000 residents have been left homeless as a result of the flooding, according to Sheets.

Although Sheets said it would be "very difficult" to predict exactly how much of an impact the donations from Quincy, Mass. and the rest of the South Shore will have on Quincy, Ill., he added that the response from Illinois residents has been indication enough that any help at all is appreciated by the flood victims. Mosquito Spraying Continues

Morning application of the pesticide resmethrin for the control of adult mosquitoes will continue this week, according to the Quincy Health Department.

Spraying was scheduled for today (Thursday) from 2 to 7 a.m. in selected areas of Quincy east of Hancock St. and east of Washington St., which may include some of the following neighborhoods:

Squantum, eastern portions of Atlantic, Norfolk Downs, coastal Wollaston, Merrymount, Houghs Neck, Germantown, and coastal Quincy Point.

Other sprayings had been scheduled for last Tuesday in selected areas of Quincy west of Hancock and Washington Sts.

Not all areas as described above will be entirely sprayed on a given date. Attempts will be made to spray as large an area of western Quincy on Tuesdays and as large an area of eastern Quincy on Thursdays.

If inclement weather occurs or equipment fails, the application will be added to the next scheduled day, or rescheduled for the following day.

said that when he and Siciliano, along with a truck donated by Stop & Shop filled with food and supplies, pulled into Quincy, Ill. about 9:30 p.m. (Illinois time), Illinois residents had only had a couple of hours' notice about their impending arrival.

"I thought 10 or 15 people would be there," said Sheets. "There were at least 500 people, honking their horns, turning their car lights on, waving and cheering. It made me proud to be mayor of the City of Quincy. It was as if the two communities had touched one another."

Siciliano, who drove to Illinois with Sheets in a Mercury Villager donated by Fore River Motors, described the scene as "unbelievable."

"We're all men and we all like to use the word 'macho,' but I'll tell you, I had tears in my eyes," said Siciliano. "It was spectacular."

Among those present that evening were Quincy, Ill. Mayor Chuck Scholz and former Mayor Verne Hagstrom, Sheets said.

On Monday night, Sheets was given a key to the city and a proclamation at a meeting of the Quincy, Ill. City Council, and the day was proclaimed "Quincy, Mass. Day."

Sheets, who said he hopes to be back in Quincy, Mass. by Saturday, said Quincy, Ill. will be set up as a center through which food and other donations will be distributed by the local Red Cross. Siciliano said he will stay in Illinois a little longer to help oversee the distribution.

The mayor added that when he returns home, he will collect as many photographs of the flood-ravaged area as possible and put together a scrapbook for all South Shore residents to see.

"People should see what I have seen," said Sheets. "I would like to put together a photograph narrative and put it on display at the Thomas Crane Library."

He also said that if the need arises, Quincy, Mass. will not hesitate to again come to the aid of Quincy, Ill.

"I think the people of Quincy, Mass. would be willing to do whatever they could do (in the future)," said Sheets. "I'm sure we'll continue to respond."

The Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort began July 13 under the direction of Veteran Services Director Hank Bradley and Siciliano. After experiencing chest pains July 15, Bradley was briefly hospitalized and forced to take a few days off from work.

After Sheets and Siciliano left for Illinois last Saturday, Hanna assumed the responsibility of overseeing the local food collection in front of City Hall.

Hanna said a second truck donated by Stop & Stop and a third donated by Shaw's were scheduled to leave from City Hall Tuesday. The fourth and final truck, to be donated by either Ryder Truck Rental or New England Tractor Trailer, should leave on Friday or Saturday, he said.

Hanna added that in addition to the trucks they donated to the relief effort, Stop & Shop and Shaw's also contributed pallets of food to the cause. Other local businesses that donated food and supplies, he said, included Star Market, Wollaston Market, Harvard Community Health Plan, Procter & Gamble, Frito-Lay and "a lot of other smaller groups."

The relief effort has also received an abundance of coverage from Massachusetts, Illinois and even national media, including NBC-TV's "Today" show.

Both Sheets and Siciliano expressed gratitude to all of the residents, businesses, volunteers and media representatives who have made the relief effort, which spanned over 1,200 miles, such a success.

"It's been absolutely heart-rendering," said Sheets.

"There was a lot of love in this project," added Siciliano. "It's something I'll never forget as long as I live."

Over 400 Attend Swearing-In Ceremony

Judge Warren Powers: 'I'm Here To Serve You'

By PAUL HAROLD

Native Quincy son Warren Powers was sworn in as Associate Justice of Quincy District Court at a State House ceremony last week attended by more than 400 friends, relatives and associates.

The largest gathering in recent years of Quincy and Norfolk County law and political leaders filled the House of Representatives chamber where Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci administered the oath to Powers.

Cellucci said that he and Gov. William Weld who appointed Powers to the bench were confident his integrity and abilities will make him a good judge.

Powers, who grew up in Wollaston and served as Ward 5 City Councillor from 1974 to 1977 and in the Norfolk County District Attorney's office as an administrator and assistant for nearly a quarter century told the audience:

"The district court is extremely important because it is the first level the citizen has to address his or her grievances. We'll be in Quincy to serve you."

Judge Powers thanked his family and colleagues for their help in his career achievement with special words for his mother and wife.

Dist. Atty. William Delahunt presided at the ceremony from the Speakers' podium, sharing the platform with former Dist. Atty. George Burke, a long-time personal friend of the new judge and the Powers family, and former Atty. Gen. Francis Bellotti, all Wollaston residents.

Bellotti called Weld's selection of Powers "a truly wonderful appointment" . . . "our court (Quincy) is in good hands."

Noting Powers' long service in the district attorney's office, Bellotti added:

"That you could prosecute cases for 23 years and people still like you, speaks volumes to the respect you are held and of your judicial temperament."

Powers started his legal career in Burke's law office and in Burke's district attorney's office.

Looking on proudly were members of the Powers family:

His wife, the former Holly Grazioso of Quincy; his mother, Alice Powers not of St. Petersburg, Fla., his brother, William, sister, Leslie and his in-laws, Alfred and Helen Grazioso formerly of Wollaston now living in Rockland.

Also attending were former Quincy political colleagues Mayor James Sheets, former Mayor Arthur Tobin, now clerk-magistrate of Quincy District Court, former City Councillors Daniel Raymond, Dennis Harrington and Paul Harold and present Councillors Charles Phelan and Ted DeCristofaro.

Judge Charles Black, presiding justice of Quincy District Court with whom Judge Powers will work, attended as did Senator Michael Morrissey, Rep. Steve Tobin, Rep. Ron Mariano, Norfolk County Register of Probate Thomas Hughes, Quincy City Clerk Joseph Shea and Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland.

Judge Powers will succeed Judge Lewis Whitman who recently retired.

Former Rep. John Flood has been nominated to fill the other vacancy at Quincy District Court and is awaiting confirmation by the Governor's Council.

Kolson Wants K-9 Unit Back In Police Dept.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson wants to bring the K-9 unit back to the Quincy Police Department as a deterrent to crime.

Kolson said he has talked with Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen and they agree the return of the canine patrol would be effective in crime prevention.

Kolson, chairman of the City Council's Public Safety Committee, said the K-9 unit would be "a very effective tool in both crime prevention and in drug investigations."

"The canines have proven over and over again to be very useful in the prevention of criminal activity and in the apprehension process.

"In fact, depending on the number of arrests made this unit could be self-supporting. After arrests are made in the seizure of drugs, property is seized as well and later sold."

Kolson said members of the Police Department "are enthusiastic" about the possible return of the canine patrol.

"The use of dogs has proven in the pst to be economically effective," he said. "I am optimistic this unit will be back in service within the next few months."

Bradley Expected Back To Work This Week

Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley was expected to return to work this week after suffering chest discomfort last Friday which forced him to spend a night at Quincy Hospital.

Bradley, who is co-chairman of the Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort, was resting comfortably at home Monday after being released from the hospital last Saturday morning. He had experienced chest discomfort while helping to coordinate the food drive.

Bob LaFleur, Veterans Services Graves Registration Officer, said everyone at Veterans Services was relieved that Bradley was feeling better.

"He suffered some discomfort in his chest area, but doctors said it was just a lot of stress," said LaFleur. "He should be back to work in a couple of days."

The Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort is being co-chaired by Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano.

YET ANOTHER KICK FOR "THE HABIT"

It's been one bit of bad news after another for smokers during the past year, including a boot out the door by First Lady Hilary Clinton. (Smoking is no longer permitted anywhere inside the White House.) Now scientists are reporting that smoking can smother the effectiveness of radiation therapy for cancer patients. There has long been plentiful documentation of the link between cigarette smoking and certain cancers, including those of the head, neck and lungs. However, recent research has shown that patients who continue smoking during radiation treatments for cancers of the head and neck were much less likely to be alive more than two years after therapy than those who did not smoke during treatment.

P.S. Smoking is directly responsible for about one-fourth of heart attack deaths and 20 percent of all cancer deaths.

The new research being done on the link between smoking and slower cancer recovery provides yet another wonderful reason to kick the habit today. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. The Ward 5 Connection

The swearing-in ceremony for new Quincy District Court associate Justice Warren Powers stirred fond memories of the "Ward 5 Connection."

POWERS

BURKE

BELLOTTI

Especially for Norfolk County Dist. Atty. William Delahunt, former Atty. Gen. and Lt. Gov. Frank Bellotti and former Dist. Atty. George Burke, who like Powers himself, got their political start in Wollaston's Ward 5.

Delahunt presided over the ceremony last week in the filled House of Representatives chamber where Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci administered the oath to the new judge as family, friends and associates looked on.

Delahunt got things off on a light note that brought back the memories when he recalled that Bellotti once endorsed Powers over him.

That was 1971 when Delahunt and Powers ran for the Ward 5 City Council seat Walter Hannon vacated to make a successful bid for Mayor.

Delahunt defeated Powers for the seat.

"That's how much a Bellotti endorsement is worth," he kidded Bellotti, his since long-time friend.

Two years later when Delahunt gave up the seat after being elected state representative, Powers won it, defeating the late Michael Peatridge.

As Burke sat there watching a man he has known since boyhood become a judge, he found himself wandering back to the early 1940's. That's when the Powers and Burke families became across-the-street neighbors on Lincoln Ave. in Wollaston.

Burke, who is nine years older than Powers, became like an older brother to him.

Years later when George and Sandy Burke became parents of their only son, George, it was only natural that they asked Powers to be his Godfather.

When Burke decided to enter the political field in 1959 as a candidate for the Ward 5 seat, Powers was his campaign manager. Burke won and went on to become state representative and district attorney (1966) with Powers running the successful campaigns.

When Powers ran for the Ward 5 seat, Burke headed his campaign. And it was Burke who got Bellotti to endorse Powers over Delahunt which is always good for a little ribbing when the four get together.

Burke, as district attorney, appointed Powers an administrator in his office in 1969 and then assistant district attorney in 1971 after Powers graduated from law school and passed the bar.

When Delahunt became district attorney in 1975, he knew a good man when he saw one and retained Powers. Before his appointment as a judge, Powers was in charge of all district court jury trials in Norfolk County.

The last three Norfolk County district attorneys have come out of Wollaston and served as Ward 5 councillor: Myron Lane, Burke and Delahunt in that order.

Burke had hoped that Powers would be the fourth if Delahunt retired or went on to another office.

"Warren will be an outstanding judge," says Burke. "And he would have been an outstanding district attorney."

Powers and his wife, the former Holly Grazioso, of Quincy, who now live in Norfolk, were recently honored at a surprise party on their 25th wedding anniversary in Rockland where her parents, Alfred and Helen Grazioso now live.

Burke who was at the party, recalled the couple met when he was running for district attorney in 1966. Powers was the campaign manager and Holly became a volunteer.

"I started to notice that Warren was spending more time in the office after Holly joined us," Burke smiles.

Family and friends mean a lot to Powers.

His mother, Alice, now a Florida resident, brother Bill, and sister, Leslie and his inlaws were there at the ceremony. But three people dear to him who would have been there couldn't be.

And it was in their memory—his late father, John, brother, Ray, and close friend Atty. Richard Barry—Powers asked for a moment of silence in their honor. It was his first act as a judge.

With almost a quarter of a century of service in the district attorney's office as an administrator, assistant district attorney and head of the district court jury trials, Powers has the experience and background for his new job.

Add to that the compassion he has been noted for all his life and you've got the ingredients for an outstanding jurist.

Quincy District Court is going to like him.

Welcome home, Your Honor.

Presidents Place A Significant Plus For City

By FRANCIS X. McCAULEY
Former Mayor of Quincy

At a recent City Council meeting, the subject of the Presidents Place development project was the topic of discussion. One city councillor was quoted as saying that the city "lost big on the project."

Wrong, Joe.

On Jan. 3, 1984, during the latter part of my second inaugural address, I addressed the subject of downtown Quincy:

"While much has been done in the downtown area, much remains to be done. Some four and a half years after Sears Roebuck left Quincy to go to the Braintree Plaza, that store, despite our best efforts, remains empty. We also have an area in our downtown that is badly in need of upgrading. That's the area...bounded by the Bargain Center and the Saville Avenue and Faxon Roads. During my next administration I will be giving careful attention to both of these projects."

As for the Sears building, the city was able to attract a well-known South Shore developer, Frank Messina, to purchase refurbish and rent out the property. And while my 1984 inaugural address will not go down in history along with Lincoln's Gettysburg Address (1863) or Winston Churchill's "Blood, Toil, Tears and Sweat" speech (1940), those comments back in 1984 provided the impetus that led to the development of Presidents Place.

In late 1985 a joint venture between the Campanelli Construction Co. of Braintree, the Quincy-based Ricciardi Co. and the Boston Five Cents Savings Bank purchased the property along with the Bargain Center.

The development of Presidents Place in the late 1980s was a prime example of a cooperative effort between the public and private sectors. A citizens' task force, headed by former City Councillor Leo Kelly, worked with project architects to develop a suitable design for the project.

The city departments of Plannings and Communities and Development obtained a state grant of $780,000 for infrastructure improvements. and the city solicitor's office, working with the developers and the Norfolk County Commissioners, developed a plan that resulted in the construction of a modern educational facility for Quincy College.

In fiscal year 1989, total revenues derived from these parcels totalled $208,558, while in FY 1993, after the completion of the two commercial buildings, $904,403 was realized, an increase in revenue of $698,845 or 335 percent.

While Phases One and Two of the construction of the twin towers of eight and five stories have been completed, Phase Three--the construction of 209 condominiums--was never undertaken. The collapse of the condo market made this phase unfeasible.

Had the condo project been completed, the city would have received a one-time payment of $300,000. Yet to say the city "lost" $300,000 on the project is ridiculous. The city invested no money in that phase of the project and has suffered no losses. Some day, as the economy improves, this parcel will be developed and put on the tax rolls.

Today, Presidents Place is a showplace in downtown Quincy. Mayor Sheets, working with federal officials, has been successful in obtaining federal funds to open a Visitors Center for the tourists to obtain information about Quincy's many historic sites.

All in all, Presidents Place has been a significant plus for the City of Quincy.

Eastern Mass Replaces Trolleys With Modern Buses

July 22-28
46 Years Ago

John I. Donovan, chairman of the public trustees of the Eastern Mass Street Railway, said modern bus service will replace street cars in Quincy in a very short time.

The only stumbling block, said Donovan, is an old World War I agreement with the Navy that the company supply street car service to Quincy Point. The company was negotiating with the Navy to modify the agreement.

During World War I the Navy financed construction of the Quincy Point street car service to provide better transportation to the Fore River Shipyard. Eastern Mass agreed to repay the Navy on a per capita passenger basis.

"It has been our hope," said Donovan, "that all trolleys should be eliminated from our system and last year a start was made on the South Shore when buses were substituted for street cars on the Houghs Neck line.

"Our general counsel has been of the opinion that for us to remove trolley service without permission of the Navy would be a technical violation of the present contract we have with it.

NOISE ABATEMENT PLANNED

Mayor Charles A. Ross conferred with Capt. Otho O. Smoot, commanding officer of the Squantum Naval Air Station, and they announced a new plan to counteract the noise of planes taking off from the base.

Capt. Smoot said from now on planes will gain altitude over the Neponset River and make no turns until they reach 1,000 feet or more and then follow the water to skirt the city.

FORE RIVER SHIPS NEEDED

Admiral William H. P.Blandy, commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet, indicated that the Navy still had need for the unfinished ships at the Fore River Shipyard, the heavy cruisers Des Moines, Salem and Northampton.

"In any overseas campaign where we take the offensive we would need a fleet whether the other fellow has one or not," said Admiral Blandy on a visit to Boston.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

There are several evening shamanic-related events scheduled during the exhibition:

July 30: 7:30 p.m. Shamanic poetry reading.

Aug. 5: 7:30 p.m. Evolving your life's meaning using Mother Earth spirituality.

Aug. 10: 6 p.m. a dance/drama of shamanic healing and self empowerment.

Quincy Mental Health Center Scheduled To Close Sept. 1

The Quincy Mental Health Center is scheduled to close Sept. 1.

Since 1984, the center has provided services to uninsured mentally ill residents of the South Shore, including inpatient and day hospital, as well as case management.

The Department of Mental Health is facing major budget cuts. The Metro South Area of DMH is currently being asked to sustain $1 million of the $7 million cut to the entire department.

Clifford Robinson, the Area Director, has proposed a plan to the commissioner for her consideration and approval by July 20. The plan includes closure of the Quincy Mental Health Center Inpatient Unit and Day Hospital as of Sept. 1.

This would result in people in need of services being sent to Medfield State Hospital.

A health center statement said: "As taxpayers, we recognize the need for cost-cutting measures in these difficult economic times. However, •Care at QMHC is cost-effective because it is high quality care. Consumers do not require services for as long or as frequently because they get the right care right away.

•Budget cuts, if necessary, should be equitable. Why should the Metro South Area take approximately 14% of a state-wide $7 million proposed cut when it currently only represents approximately *% of the DMH's budget? There should be equality among all of the DMH areas.

CROWDS STROLL DOWN the middle of Hancock St. during the annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. Thousands attended the three-day event.

THAT LOOKS GOOD--Jessica Breen and Michelle Acciavatti check merchandise on sale at the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.

Sidewalk Festival Draws Crowds, Boosts Sales

By MICHAEL WHALEN
and
JENNIFER WEITZMAN

The 23rd annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival was one of the most successful ever, drawing record crowds and providing a healthy boost to participating businesses and merchants.

That was the general consensus of local merchants surveyed by The Quincy Sun. The event was sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

Typical comments:

Eileen Cohen, executive director of the QCBPA said: "It was a great success. The crowds were the biggest I can remember--thousands of people enjoying the music and many activities and strolling down Hancock St. shopping for buys.

"The up-and-down street comments I heard were that sales figures were up over last year even though last year's festival was a four-day event and this year's was three days."

Area merchants had the following comments:

Debbie Ackerman, Buck-A-Book: "It was very good for two reasons: first, we made some money, and second, about half the people I spoke to didn't even know we were here (at President's Place; the store first opened last August, after the 1992 Sidewalk Festival). The weather was great, and it went very, very well."

Bernie Reisberg, Bernie's Formal Shop: "It was one of the better years, if not the best year, that we've had. There were a lot of people out there, and the weather was with us. I was pleased with the results, and I commend the committee that worked on it."

Caryn Smith, Caryn's Corner: "Friday was the best day I've had in six and a half years of business, topping Christmas Eve of last year. It was also the first year we've done better on Friday than on Thursday. There was a constant flow of people, and a minimum of five people under the tent at all times."

Donald Russell, Woolworth's: "We did fair. It was about the same as the year before as far as business was concerned."

Kathy Missell, Infinity Books: "It was terrific, probably the best sidewalk sale I've ever had. Crowds were greater over the three days as opposed, traditionally, to just Thursday."

Paul Sturman, Frantic Framers: "I thought this was one of the better ones in the last four or five years. I got rid of a lot of stuff."

Charles Ryder, Ryder's of Quincy: "We did spectacularly. It was very good, better than it's been in the last five years, anyway. I'd like to thank the QCBPA Promotions Committee for the work they did in filling the streets with events. There were good crowds all three days because of the events they scheduled."

Dave Chapman, Parade of Shoes: "Sales were really good. I'd say they were better than last year's Sidewalk Festival."

Michael Hemeon, New England Comics: "We did pretty well for our first sidewalk sale (The store opened in Quincy Square 10 years ago). It fell right in line with our sales pitch for the summer -- blowing out our back issue stock.

Carol Nelson, Children's Orchard: "It was great. Our store did wonderful. I saw many of our regular customers and met some brand new ones that didn't even know I had a store."

"I brought out the summer clearance merchandise and hats and we had to keep replenishing the shelves. We did especially great with baby hats.

Chuck Hamilton, McDonald's manager: "All three days brought excellent weather and the turnout was especially good. The sidewalk sale brought us good publicity and that's why we did it."

Richard Carriger, Pilgrim Restaurant: "I thought it was a good sale. The street traffic was extra full with happy customers. People kept commenting on how they thought the sale was terrific. It makes a difference with our sales. They more we can keep them around, the more money they spend.

"It was a well put together day. The promotions committee did an especially nice job."

It Was Real Blues For Blues Band

One minor disappointment at last week's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival was the no-show of The Yardrockers, a blues band sponsored by Joe's Pub (a.k.a. The Yard Rock Cafe).

The band had been scheduled to play at the festival Thursday night.

Joe Hajjar Jr., son of pub owner Joe Hajjar Sr., said Monday that the band's bass player, Cole Grinnell, was injured in a car accident the previous Monday on the Fore River Bridge.

Hajjar said Grinnell initially refused medical treatment because he did not believe he was injured, but subsequently began to experience pain from the accident.

"He thought he was okay (at first)," said Hajjar, "but then he checked himself into the hospital a couple of days later. It was really last minute."

Hajjar added that because of these unforseen circumstances, there was no time for the band to find a substitute bass player or for the pub to hire a replacement band.

Joe Hajjar Sr. said Tuesday that doctors believed Grinnell had suffered a "hairline fracture" in one of his arms.

"He lost all feeling in his hand and arm," said Hajjar, who agreed there was no time to get anyone to take Grinnell's place. "It was very disappointing for all parties."

Hajjar said he was particularly disappointed about the no-show because he thought this year's festival was a tremendous success, and he commended the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association Promotions Committee for organizing the event.

"They did a great job," he said. "They deserve all the accolades in the world."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Recently we received a note from a reader suggesting that far too many Boards, Councils, Committees and even some individuals have an uncanny way of delaying indefinitely or avoiding completely making controversial decisions...Also enclosed was a clipping from an old publication which the reader felt was still appropriate today. I couldn't agree more...TO AVOID MAKING DECISIONS

1. Profess not to have THE answer. That lets you out of having any answer.
2. Say that we must not move too rapidly. This avoids the necessity of getting started.
3. For every proposal, set up any opposite and conclude that the middle ground (no motion whatsoever) represents the wisest course of action.
4. Say that the problem can't be separated from other problems. Therefore, it can't be solved until all other problems have been solved.
5. Ask what is meant by the question. By the time it is clarified it will be time to go home.
6. Appoint a committee.
7. Wait until an expert can be consulted.
8. State in conclusion that you have clarified your thinking. This completely obscures the fact that nothing has been done.
9. Point out how the deepest minds have struggled with the same problem. This implies that it gives you credit even to have thought of it.
10. In closing, thank the problem. It has stimulated the discussion, contributed to our growth, opened up new vistas, shown the way, challenged our inventiveness.

Why can't we make timely decisions on important matters? I don't profess to have THE answer...We may need to consult an expert!

Sawan, Crehan Gold Medal Win At Bay State Games

Two Quincy athletes captured gold medals in track and field action at last week's Bay State Games at MIT.

Liz Sawan, a Quincy High freshman, won the scholastic girls' mile and Eileen Crehan, former North Quincy High and Northeastern University star, took the open women's javelin.

Sawan used a blistering last lap kick to pull away from the 12-girl field to win in a personal best time of 5:33.6.

For Crehan it was a return from retirement after marriage and three children. Her toss of 126-10 was far below the 164-3 she threw back in 1984 to set the Mass. and New England all-time record while at North Quincy High, but this meet marks a return and Ms. Crehan, now a state trooper, has vowed a comeback. "I think with steady training I'll be back to 150 feet very soon," she said.

Other Quincy athletes placing in the top six included Tricia Hughes in the triple jump, Maureen Roche, third in the shot put; Kevin Ross, sixth in the scholastic boys' shot put, and Jennifer Pratt, fourth in the scholastic women's high jump.

Triple A

Hurley Championship Comeback Climax

The Hurley Insurance Padres had to rally late in the season to make the playoffs and they went on to win the Triple A Baseball League title with a nine-inning 11-10 victory over the Yellow Cab Athletics in the championship game.

In this game, which lasted 31/2 hours, the Athletics led, 8-2, after five innings. The Padres came back with six runs in the sixth to send the game into extra innings.

In the seventh the Padres went ahead by two but the Athletics came back with two to tie it again. The Padres won it with two runs in the ninth.

In the second game the Padres posted an 11-8 win over the White Sox and they then upset the American League champion Yankees, who had a 17-2 regular season records.

This game made the front pages of newspapers as the police chased a suspected drug dealer across the field and he was captured by the Padres' coaches.

"To name the stars of the final game would take my entire roster as well as the Athletics' roster," said Padres coach Tom

"They were all stars and they provided us with the single most exciting game I've ever seen. The only sad not was that somebody had to lose."

A COOL IDEA

Drivers who subject their vehicles to the strain of towing should consider the installation of a transmission cooler to protect their vehicles' transmissions. Towing trailers, boats, and campers causes both the engine and automatic transmission to run hotter than normal. When oil temperatures inside automatic transmissions exceed 200 degrees F. for prolonged periods, the oil breaks down. As a result, seals crack and leaks occur, leading to transmission failure. To help dissipate this heat, a transmission cooler acts much like an auxiliary radiator. Not only does it help preserve the health of the transmission, but cooler transmission fluid running through the cooling system helps prevent radiator boil-over. HINT: Half of all radiator boil-overs are caused by hot transmission fluid running through the cooling system.

$1,000 Donation To Go Toward Police Mountain Bikes

A $1,000 donation from a local businessman to the Quincy Police Department will be used to purchase "a couple of" mountain bikes, according to Police Chief Francis Mullen.

The chief said that the bikes will be utilized as part of the department's special operations unit.

"We're just trying to increase the number of different vehicles we have to expand our diversity," said Mullen. "It gives us another angle. Several other local departments have already begun using these bikes."

Mullen said the donation came from Paul V. Sullivan of Sullivan Supply Co. on Liberty St., whom he knows personally. The chief added that there was no particular reason for the gift other than Sullivan's personal desire to do something for the department.

"He's just happy to help us modify our program," said Mullen.

Personalized Fitness Evaluations At YMCA

This evaluation is helpful for beginning exercisers who would like assistance setting up a well-balanced exercise regimen, as well as advanced-level exercisers who wish to set new goals and establish progress levels.

For further details contact Brian Wessner, Associate Fitness Director at 479-8500, ext. 119.

9 Candidates, Two Seats Vacant

School Committee Preliminary Election

The stage was set for a School Committee preliminary election Sept. 14 when nine candidates filed nomination papers for three seats--two of them vacant--at Tuesday's filing deadline.

All together 19 candidates filed but not enough for preliminary runoff for three City Council at large and six ward council seats.

Mayor James Sheets will be unopposed for a third term, the first mayor in Quincy's history to twice run without opposition.

School Committeewoman Margaret (Peggy) King had nomination papers out but decided not to file them.

School Committeeman Frank Santoro did not take out papers.

This leaves two School Committee seats vacant with only one incumbent, Ron Mariano, in the race for the three seats. He filed Tuesday.

The other eight candidates for School Committee are: Sean Barry, JoAnn Bragg, Christine Cedrone, Gregory Hanley, Toni Kabilian, Ronald McCarthy, John McDuff and John Spada.

The top six qualifiers in the school committee preliminary election will advance to the city final election Tuesday, Nov.2.

The City Council candidates will square off in the Nov. 2 final election without a preliminary runoff.

Incumbents Tim Cahill, Michael Cheney and Joseph LaRaia will be challenged by Mary Collins, former School Committeewoman and Norfolk County Commissioner, and Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, making his first run for office.

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien will face Robert Boussy, a Boston school bus driver.

Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio is challenged by Michael D'Amico, an 18-year-old college student.

Ward councillors running unopposed are Peter Kolson (Ward 1), Ted DeCristofaro (Ward 2), Charles Phelan (Ward 5) and Bruce Ayers (Ward 6).

George Miller who as run for the city council and state representative in the past, had City Hall observers guessing when he took out nomination papers for both City Council at-large and Ward 2 on Friday. But he failed to file either Tuesday.

Proposed Supermarket Runs Into Opposition

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Another Shaw's Supermarket is not needed in Quincy, according to the majority of residents who attended a public hearing at City Hall Monday night.

Members of the City Council and Planning Board held the hearing to allow residents to voice their opinions on the supermarket's proposal to build a new store at the site of the old Boston Gear Works, 10 Hayward St. and 477-479 Hancock St. in Wollaston.

Twelve people spoke against the proposal at the hearing and 26 signed in opposition. One spoke in favor and 12 were recorded as being for the proposed supermarket.

The company, which already has a supermarket on Quincy Ave. just south of Quincy Center, requires a special granting permit from the City Council to build the store.

Atty. Robert Fleming said Shaw's plans to use 86,000 square feet at the site, including 56,000 for the new supermarket and 30,000 for "another user" such as a women's clothing store, drug store, or another kind of retail store. The 160,000 square foot Boston Gear facility will be demolished, he said.

Traffic signals in the area would be changed and updated, and additional improvements such as road and sidewalk repairs are also part of the plan, according to Fleming. In addition, the new store would result in 200 construction jobs, 250 full-time and part-time and positions at the supermarket, and an increase in the tax base, he said.

Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, spoke in favor the proposal.

"From a planning point of view, and from an economic development point of view, this is a good plan," said D'Aprix. "We (at Quincy 2000) have taken all into consideration, and we are four-square behind this project."

Most in attendance, however, were adamant in their opposition to the proposed supermarket, citing traffic and pollution as among their major concerns.

"I don't see how this street can handle that kind of traffic," said Bob Pacino, owner of nearby Bob's Speed and Auto Parts, who added that Shaw's proposed elimination of around 20 nearby parking spots could seriously jeopardize his own establishment.

"Without the parking, I wouldn't be able to operate," he said. "If this goes through I would be literally out of business."

Albion Rd. expressed fears that her street, and others in the area, might become inundated with motorists looking for a quick shortcut out of the Shaw's parking lot.

"One way in, and one way out--people will cut through the side streets," said Tenney.

The plan calls for the store to be accessible only on Hancock Street, according to Fleming and several Shaw's officials in attendance. Trucks would load at the rear of the store, they said.

Vincent Palmisano of 476 Hancock St. said he already has problems with fumes from existing traffic and a supermarket would just make matters worse.

"I live with carbon monoxide (already)," he said. "I don't want Shaw's across the street from me."

Marie McHugh of 6 Marlboro St. said she simply likes her neighborhood the way it is and a large supermarket is not welcome there.

"We want our neighborhood to stay the same," she said. "You are not shoving Shaw's or anything else in our throats."

McHugh, who noted that her feelings are nothing personal against Shaw's, added that she was upset that she had received nothing in the mail about the public hearing and had only heard about it earlier that day.

Council President Charles Phelan, whose ward (Ward 5) includes part of the site, said two community meetings had already been held on the subject and that notification of the hearing had been given to all of the city's media sources. He added that while area households had also been mailed notification, he would see to it in the future that more of the neighborhood's streets be included in the mailing process.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, whose ward also includes part of the site, agreed. Both Phelan and Ayers said more community meetings would be held in the future before the City Council takes any action on the project.

Deli Closing Hour Extension Denied

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A request from Montclair Deli, 218 West Squantum St. to extend its closing time one hour Monday through Saturday nights was denied Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said he could not vote for owner William Oliver's request for a 10 p.m. closing time because Oliver had violated the law by placing signage along the sidewalk and elsewhere near the establishment without the proper permits.

"If you don't have permits for the signage, you can't use it," said Mulvey. "I have no inclination to vote for a change of hours. I make a motion to keep the hours the same, and if the laws are not complied to, I will ask for a hearing for the possible suspension or revocation of your license."

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the establishment could probably survive financially with being open one extra hour a night.

"Nine o'clock (the current closing time) is a very fair hour," said Gorman.

King Will Not Seek Re-election To School Committee

Margaret "Peggy" King announced Tuesday that she will not seek re-election to the Quincy School Committee.

Instead, King, a former school teacher, said she will resume her retirement.

"My term has been a challenge and an exciting experience I would not have wanted to miss. I have enjoyed working with such hard-working colleagues on the committee who made things move even though the hours were late at times. No gridlock with us," King said.

"Having been involved for a long time in the Quincy Public Schools and having been through the sad days when schools were closed and when we lost so many fine teachers in the aftermath of (Proposition) 21/2, it has been wonderful to be part of a committee which is building a new school, an addition, and getting ready to bring back two closed schools and a new gym for Parker.

"Best of all, it has been a happy experience to be part of the rebuilding of our professional staff. A highlight was the hiring of Eugene Creedon as superintendent, one of my goals.

"Under many difficult circumstances at times, and now under the new Ed Reform Act, I support him wholeheartedly. His recent report on the schools is an excellent example of his leadership in a contentious area.

"I am proud to have been involved in the successful negotiations with our deserving and dedicated teachers and other school personnel, and to have approved a budget which, through the efforts of the mayor, contained a significant increase over the previous year.

The support of the mayor and the council on a bond issue containing money for recommended school maintenance improvements was a very significant movement toward restoring proper maintenance of our schools. My goal for more publicity about the great things going on in our schools is coming to fruition as witnessed by agenda items.

"My goal concerning the revitalization of the Vocational Education Program is yet to be fully realized. However, the Tech Prep programs already in the works, under the recently retired director Joseph Mazzarella and Emily Ostrower proved a big impetus. Under our new director, Dr. Avery, who has spent her career in the area of vocational education, I expect great forward movement.

"The elimination of the so-called "general education" track at the high school is a very good educational change. Now, students certainly by Grade 9 will have a definite goal for deciding on an educational program for their future, but which will allow movement if a change is desired. As the (Quincy) College, I believe we are on the way to remedying that situation.

"After 44 years of working and at age 75, I do think it's time to get back to the retired life. I left to take on the School Committee position. I want to resume travelling (Antarctica is first on my list), reading other than School Committee reports, playing golf and tennis regularly and enjoying my Florida home for at least four months of the year.

"I have kept my promise to give up many things in order to do my job well, to attend every regular meeting, negotiation session and subcommittee meeting. Until my term is up I will continue to work just as hard. I will look carefully at prospective candidates to judge whom I will support.

"Rest assured, that even after January, I will continue to be an advocate for education and will continue to write "Letters to the Editor" and lobby legislators. The Ed Reform Act is a beginning but changes need to be made," King said, adding she will miss her colleagues and thanks them for their support.

North Quincy Garage Shut Down By Board

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Coletta Bros., Inc., 270 Hancock St. was shut down Tuesday by the Quincy License Board.

The board ordered the establishment closed because of refusal to pay real estate taxes and operation without a valid license.

City Tax Collector Dana Childs said the company owes the city in excess of $30,000 in real estate taxes. Childs added that ownership had agreed in January to a payment plan through which the company could repay its debt but has not lived up to its end of the bargain.

"They agreed to make payments of about $4,800 a month," said Childs. "They made one payment of about $3,000, and that was it."

Board members also said it had come to their attention that that the establishment has not renewed its Gasoline/Repair License since 1989 and therefore has been operating illegally. In addition, Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey said there were several building code violations at the site.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman made a motion that the establishment be closed immediately and that the Law Department put in writing the reasons for the shutdown.

No one from Coletta Bros. was in attendance at the meeting.

Eddie's Diner Fire Under Investigation

By JENNIFER WEITZMAN

Officials are investigating the cause of a fire early Monday which severely damaged Eddie's Diner, the landmark all-night restaurant.

The two-alarm blaze forced the diner to close for at least three or four months, possibly forever.

After talking with adjusters on Monday, Fire Chief Thomas Gorman estimated the damage at about $325,000. This includes $225,000 to cover the cost to the building and $100,000 worth of equipment.

The state fire marshal's office is continuing its investigation to determine what caused the diner to go up in flames.

Lucille Ciani of Brockton, who owns the land that the diner sits on and Eddie's Motor Inn located next to the diner said the fire was devastating.

Gorman said Nick Katsoulis of Braintree, who has owned the diner with his wife Nellie for more than a decade, indicated he will not reopen the diner.

"Katsoulis and the landlord could not reach an agreement," Gorman said, adding that in order for it to reopen, it would cost too much money.

Gorman said Katsoulis would have to do extensive remodeling work to the diner to bring a new restaurant up to new codes, such as making it handicapped accessible.

Over the years, the diner's business has been slow. Quincy once had five or six diners--one in Wollaston, the Pilgrim Diner across from Shaw's, the Mayflower Diner on Southern Artery and another Mayflower Diner on Hancock Street in North Quincy. The only operating diner is the Wheelhouse Diner on Hancock Street in North Quincy, but it is not open all night.

Gorman says people's eating habits have changed. Since the fast food restaurant and drive-up window businesses picked up in the early 80s, people have stopped coming to diners.

"People are more run and go today," he said.

The fire chief noted Katsoulis has been looking to sell Eddie's.

Eddie's, at the corner of Quincy Avenue and Southern Artery, opened in 1942. It was a favorite spot for late-night pers, where customers would go after a movie, slid into their red upholstered booths to have a cup of coffee with some friends.

Gorman, who used to frequent the diner, said it was a very sociable place to go. "If you wanted to find someone, just go to Eddie's early in the morning. Everybody was there.

"A part of history is gone," Gorman said.

Bar Gets Warning On Closing Regulations

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday issued a written warning to Nally's, 35 Washington St. for violating rules and regulations regarding the establishment's closing guidelines.

Det. Sgt. Richard Laracy, the city's liquor inspector, said the guidelines require all drinks to be off the bar at 1:15 a.m., all customers to be off the premises at 1:30 a.m. and all employees to be off the premises at 2 a.m. unless they are cleaning.

Laracy said he has received a number of complaints from Officer Joseph O'Rielly that Nally's has violated these guidelines.

O'Rielly testified before the board that he has found Nally's employees inside the bar "four or five times" past the appointed time, including one occasion at almost 4 a.m. O'Rielly said he had given those in the bar a verbal warning prior to the most recent violation.

James Nally, the bar's manager, said he has "tried to comply" with all rules and regulations and added that he personally was never on the premises at the times of the violations.

Laracy agreed that Nally was not to blame for the situation.

"He (Nally) has been quite cooperative," said Laracy.

Because of Nally's agreement to ensure all rules and regulations will be followed in the future, Police Chief Francis Mullen ruled that only a written warning would be necessary.

THE UPS AND DOWNS OF TEMPERATURE

Don't believe everything you read, even on the trusted family thermometer. That little red "normal" line parked at 98.6 may or may not indicate your optimum healthy body temperature. In fact, a recent study of U.S. adults found that only eight percent of healthy temperatures registered at 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. In the study of 148 subjects, who were checked a total of more than 700 times, "normal" was anywhere from 96 to 99.9 degrees. The thing to remember through all the number-crunching and data-taking is that everyone has a normal temperature range which varies slightly due to personal and environmental factors. A thermometer reading of a degree or so above or below 98.6 should not be a cause for alarm. P.S. The traditional normal reading of 98.6 degrees was so designated in 1868 by a German doctor named Carl Wunderlich.

If your usual temperature is two degrees below normal, a reading of 98.6 would indicate that you are feverish. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. But What If...!

For City Building Inspector Matt Mulvey it was a classic case of damned-if-you-do and damned-if-you-don't.

MULVEY

Mulvey can be pretty tough when it comes to enforcing building department regulations. He doesn't look the other way when he finds a code violation.

But if he is tough, he is also fair. And he plays no favorites.

Even his own grandmother, would have a problem getting a permit or license if everything wasn't up to snuff.

So, it wasn't a surprise to those who really know Mulvey when he refused to let the show go on at Marina Bay last week.

He immediately became the villain of the week—maybe the year—in the eyes of some parents who had already bought tickets to take their children to the Great American Circus.

And in the eyes of some of the disappointed youngsters, Mulvey was a bigger meanie than Scrooge, the Grinch that stole Christmas and the Wicked Witch of the West all rolled into one.

Mulvey said he refused to let the performance go on because the circus "had substandard wiring and substandard seating."

He said the circus was using saw-horses to support some of the 2,500 seats and had left wiring exposed that created a fire hazard.

On top of that, he said, the circus did not have emergency lighting. So, if there had been a fire and the power was knocked out the crowd could have been left in the dark with panic and potential disaster in the making.

The disappointment to the parents and the youngsters is understandable.

But some of the comments were a bit hard to understand.

"Doesn't the building inspector have kids," one grandfather wanted to know.

I've got two kids and I love the circus," Mulvey responded.

"I'm disgusted," said a mother. "We looked forward to this all week. Look at all these kids, They're disappointed."

There must have been a lot of disappointment.

But what if...?

What if Mulvey had allowed the show to go on and the seats collapsed or there was a fire? It could have been a tragedy.

And if it had happened these disappointed parents and others would be after Mulvey's hide.

We can hear the cries now:

"Why did you let the show go on!..."You were derelict in your duties"..."You are responsible for this tragedy"..."How can you sleep nights!"...etc., etc.

The circus was allowed to play in Whitman the following night. But only after inspectors were satisfied the circus had made the needed changes—using sturdier bleachers and keeping electrical wiring from being exposed.

Instead of jeers, Mulvey would seem to deserve a few cheers for standing by his guns.

A tragedy didn't happen in Quincy or Whitman. But it could have.

KING

PEGGY KING'S DECISION not to seek re-election to the School Committee came as no big surprise.

When she took out nomination papers she said she was not sure that she would file them.

She is 75 and to run and win would be a four year commitment. (The term is four years.)

"I'm no Frank Anselmo," she mused.

Anselmo was 93 when he ran for the School Committee for the last time two years ago after beginning his political career at age 62 when most people are thinking of retiring.

King says she will continue to be an active advocate for good education.

MARTIN ERVIN, who dropped out of the mayor's race, is still pursuing one of his pet goals: creation of a youth center.

Ervin reports he met recently with Police Chief Francis Mullen and Tom Koch, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, to discuss the possibility and will meet Aug. 5 with a representative from Senator Edward Kennedy's office.

Financing and location seem to be the two biggest questions.

Ervin says if public funds—city, state or federal—are not available, he may seek private support and run the operation himself.

Ervin, who was living in Quincy Point and feuding with his landlord, is moving to Arthur St. in West Quincy where he formerly lived.

He says he definitely will be back on the political scene for the 1995 city election and will run for mayor again. And this time stay in the race.

"This year," he says,"was not the right time to run for mayor."

And there are bigger political names than his that will agree with him considering Sheets' popularity.

The Ward 2 Democratic Committee will hold a caucus Tuesday, Aug. 3 at 7 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy.

The caucus is open to all Democrats who reside in Ward 2 and have been a member of the Democratic Party since Jan. 1, 1993. Eleven delegates will be elected to the issues convention to be held in Worcester Oct. 16.

Sister Regina Harrington Leaving Our Lady On Year Sabbatical

Sister Regina Harrington, CSJ, will leave Our Lady of Good Counsel Church Sunday for a Sabbatical year.

Sister Regina, who has served 13 years at the Church, the last nine as Pastoral Associate, will spend the first part of the year in a retreat-study program at Mercy Center, Madison, Conn.

"We are really going to miss her," said Rev. James Curtin, pastor. "She has been like a right arm to me. She has been so helpful in so many ways."

Sister Regina in January will attend Weston School of Theology in Cambridge and take part in the Sabbatical Program to prepare for another assignment in the Archdiocese.

"I am really going to miss Fr. Curtin, the parishioners of Our Lady and Quincy," she said. "It has been 13 happy years for me."

Sister Regina came to Our Lady of Good Counsel as Director of Religious Education and served in that position for four years before becoming Pastoral Associate.

The role of the Pastoral Associate evolved from the parish becoming a "one priest parish", a role that has become quite common throughout the country.

As Pastoral Associate, she was involved in all phases of parish life including the Parish Pastoral Council, Confirmation program, Liturgy Committee, Baptismal preparation, Pastoral Care and liaison with the Merry Shore Senior Citizens.

She has taken numerous courses and attended seminars to keep updated on constantly changing parish activity.

"It has been extremely interesting and challenging to be part of the parish at this time."

An Appreciation Day for her was held recently at the church.

Mass was celebrated by Fr. Curtin with Rev. Peter Martocchio, former pastor, and Rev. Msgr. William Shea concelebrants.

A reception was held in the Parish Hall attended by parishioners and city and state officials.

Citations were presented to her by City Councillors Peter Kolson and Michael Cheney, Senator Michael Morrissey and Rep. Steve Tobin. Former Senator Paul Harold also attended.

Later the same day, members of the Parish Community surprised her with another reception and "roast.

The committee for that reception, chaired by Barbara Keddy, included Roseann Flavin, Doreen Burke, Debbie Nigro, Betty Mafera, Dolly Shea, Nancy Pitts, Ellen Savage, Eleanor Flibotte, Joan Perrow, Margaret Reilly, Maureen Rose and Jeanne Reardon.

SISTER REGINA HARRINGTON, pastoral associate, who is leaving Our Lady of Good Counsel Church Sunday on a sabbatical year after 13 years of service there, bids farewell to Rev. James Curtin, pastor.

Kids' Playground Fun Curtailed By WPA 'Vacations'

July 29-Aug. 4
1939
54 Years Ago

Ten experienced playground instructors were dismissed under a new Works Progress Administration (WPA) rule that required workers employed for more than 18 months to be given 30 days unpaid vacation before Sept. 1.

Franklin B. Mitchell, longtime supervisor of playground activities, said the city's summer play programs for thousands of children will be crippled unless someone comes up with a plan for immediate relief.

Mitchell said he may appeal to the City Council for a special emergency appropriation to pay the key instructors needed for the city's 21 playgrounds. The WPA workers supplemented the 24 girls who were paid by the city.

Peach Pie

After baking many people apple pies, a friend who has a fruit market gave me so many peaches, that I actually baked my first peach pie. It was so simple and came out almost perfect the first time, that I have been baking them more often than apple.

It is delicious served with freshly whipped cream or vanilla ice cream. It's also cuts better if made ahead of time and refrigerated, although around this house, that rarely happens. And these weeks, peaches are at an abundance and on sale in some markets.

Peach Pie
8 large peaches
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn starch
a smidgen of cinnamon and nutmeg

Peel and cut in slices. Place in large bowl and add the rest of the ingredients blending it well. I have to confess that I have been using the ready made pie crusts because I bake at least three pies a week plus the fact that they are pretty close to home made. So having said that, place the bottom crust on a nine inch pie plate. Put the peaches in that and then top it off with a top crust. I brush the top with an egg mixture, and also use an egg substitute. Bake in a preheated 450 degree oven for 15 minutes and then 350 for 35 minutes.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Michelle Catrambone Top Winner In Flag Day Essay Contest

Michelle Catrambone a Grade 5 student at Atherton Hough School was the top winner of the Houghs Neck Legion's annual Flag Day contest, "How to be True to the Red, White and Blue."

She received from the post auxiliary Unit 380 a check for $25, while a trophy to the school to be retained for a year, was presented by the Legion Post.

At Snug Harbor School, the winner was April Downey, who received a check for $25 from Squadron 380, Sons of the American Legion; and at Merrymount School, James Mateau received his $25 check from Post 380.

Alice Scribner and Mary Timcoe, essay cochairmen, presented the awards at Flag Day exercises at the schools.

Michelle's Winning Essay

My way of being true to our flag is by being patriotic, which means celebrating freedom of the United States of America on July 4th, and to stand proud when the "Star Spangled Banner" is played or sung.

Another way to be patriotic to our flag is by taking care of our flag. This means take our flag in during bad weather and fold it correctly. When our flag is ripped and old, the American Legion Post 380 has a flag burning ceremony. They take the ashes and bury them.

The true meaning of the 4th of July is the freedom of our country, not hot dogs, hamburgers, Pepsi and beer. On the 4th of July let the true Red, White and Blue always fly as free as our country!

Sun Editor Surveys Quincy, Ill.

The Great Flood Of 1993 Won't Soon Be Forgotten

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Quincy, Ill.--Of all the natural disasters I've witnessed, nothing compares to the expansive destruction of the Great Flood of 1993, particularly in the Quincy, Ill-West Quincy, Mo. area.

Thousands of acres of prime farm land and small residential areas swallowed up by the ever expanding Mississippi River. Mile after mile of sandbags piled 10 feet high and just as wide. Major highways reduced to mere riverways with water 18 feet deep.

And what's even more mind-boggling is the fact that the flood conditions in Quincy, Ill and neighboring West Quincy, Mo. are rampant up and down the mighty Mississippi. With more heavy rains forecasted, those conditions are expected to swell in the coming months.

The Great Flood of 1993 has been called a 100-year-flood. That's a flood so big that is has only one chance in a hundred of happening any given year.

Midwest residents along the Mississippi thought they had experienced the great flood of their lifetime in 1973. But 20 years later, they are struggling and coping with the greatest natural disaster ever to befall that area.

"It's the worse I've seen. I've been here 20 years," said Jeff Jansen, an administrator for the City of Quincy. "In the Flood of 1973, the levy broke but water rose only four or five feet and it didn't last.

"This flood water will take a lot of time to recede."

The destruction to Quincy, Ill. would have been much greater if the city of 49,000 were not situated on top of a 200-foot bluff. However, many lower-lying residential areas closer to the eastern side of the Mississippi have experienced flooding never before seen.

Last Tuesday while vacationing in the Midwest, I visited Quincy, Ill. to get a first-hand look at perhaps the greatest disaster in this country's history.

For two hours, I was guided through the flooded area by Tim Jarvis, assistant street superintendent for Quincy, Ill. Jarvis, a pleasant and personable man, helped interpret Mother Nature's havoc and devastation.

Our first stop was to an industrial complex about one mile south of the Bayview Bridge which links Quincy, Ill. to Quincy, Mo. The complex appeared like a fortress as thousands of sandbags, some piled 10 feet high, surrounded the area to keep water at bay.

Jarvis noted the water was a quarter of a mile from the eastern side of the Mississippi. In Quincy, Mass., that would be like businesses in Quincy Center sandbagging to keep out the Town River.

We next set out on a levee to see if there were any sandbagging operations going on. A National Guard truck stopped us at the entrance to the levee and Jarvis explained the reason for us being there.

"This man's from Quincy, Massachusetts and would like to take a few pictures of the levee. Is that all right?" Jarvis asked. The two guardsmen nodded and off we went.

A few minutes later, the levee road disappeared under water. We stopped and pondered our next move.

"Well, what should we do?" Jarvis asked me.

"I'm not sure. How deep is that water," I replied.

"Probably 12 inches."

"Let's give it a try and if it's deeper, we can always stop and turn back."

Jarvis stepped on the gas gingerly and the truck sputtered through the water. On either side of the levee was water for several hundred yards.

The water deepened and Jarvis stopped. "I'm not sure we can make it. The water looks like it gets deeper before it gets shallower. I'd rather be safe than sorry."

I agreed. We turned around. As we headed back, a smaller pickup truck approached us.

"You can make it out there. I've done it," said the old man behind the wheel. Jarvis and I looked at each other in amazement. We decided to give it another try.

"You can follow me," said the old man. Then he laughed, "You might have to rescue me if I get stuck."

We made it past where we had been and continued following the small truck. The water then got deeper and deeper. The bumper of the smaller truck disappeared as it inched forward.

"How deep do you think that water is," I asked.

"At least 30 inches," Jarvis answered, eyes fixed straight ahead.

Gradually, the water on the levee lessened and we reached dry ground. The trucks stopped at the old man's cottage located in the campground near the banks of the Mississippi. The home was flooded.

Jarvis said the levee ahead was probably worse and after I took a photo, we headed back.

"That's enough excitement for today," Jarvis said.

Back on a main street, we viewed some flooded residential areas. Homes, garages and cars under 8 and 10 feet of water. It appeared as if a helicopter had dropped them in a lake for there was water clear up to the horizon and beyond.

After 90 minutes, I thought I had seen everything. But the last scene punctuated the entire visit.

Jarvis headed toward Route 24 and the Bayview Bridge. We passed through a state police check point on the Illinois side and headed toward West Quincy, Mo.

We ascended the bridge and passed by a sign welcoming visitors to Missouri. As we descended, an awesome site awaited us.

Route 24 west toward Missouri, about 500 feet from the foot of the bridge, was under water. A state trooper at the scene said a levee break in Quincy, Ill. on July 23 flooded 14,000 acres, including farm land and a retail district for motorists and truckers.

Water six to 18 feet deep covered six miles of Route 24. That's like Quincy Ave. and Hancock St. flooded from Weymouth Landing to the Neponset River Bridge.

I snapped a photo, gazed out in each direction and then climbed back into the truck for the trip back. I said goodbye to Jarvis who had asked me if Quincy, Mass. has ever experienced flooding like her sister city in the Midwest.

"No. The only flooding we get is from the ocean and that's usually isolated."

Then I started thinking. I've lived through blizzards and hurricanes and even witnessed the Yellowstone Park forest fires in 1989.

But the Great Flood of 1993 is the single most devastating natural disaster I have ever seen. I'm sure thousands of people would agree.

A COMMON SCENE: Sandbags prevent a tributary of the Mississippi River from wiping out a main road in Quincy, Ill. Water did cascade over the sandbags onto the road but workers were able to pump the water back, allowing volunteers to resume sandbagging.

SMALL TRIBUTARY of the Mississippi River overflowed its banks, flooding this small residential area in Quincy, Ill. A camper and car practically disappear in the muddy water.

A PICKUP TRUCK manages to travel along a levee road 30 inches under water in Quincy, Ill. The driver of the truck risked stalling out and perhaps abandonment to get to his cottage in a campground along the Mississippi River. The deep water was not caused by a levee break but a backed up drainage ditch brought on by heavy rains. Quincy, Ill. received six inches of rain in one day earlier this summer.

12,000 TO 18,000 acres of prime farm land became a lake when a levee broke near the Graves Drainage District four miles east of the Mississippi. This was the first levy to break in Quincy, Ill.

LEVEES COLLAPSING in and around the Quincy, Ill. area have flooded thousands of acres, including this small residential area.

COUNTLESS SANDBAGS filled by weary but dedicated volunteers line the Mississippi River along the 52-mile Sny Island levee in Quincy, Ill. This picture was taken about a half mile from the east side of the river. Officials estimate that more than one million sandbags were placed along the levee, which gave way Sunday in Pike County, about 10 miles south of Quincy, Ill. The break covered 40,000 acres, including prime farm land.

THIS PHOTOGRAPH taken from a helicopter shows the widespread flooding in West Quincy, Mo. In the background is the Bayview Bridge which connects Quincy, Ill. to West Quincy, Mo.

A HOMEMADE WOODEN sign in Quincy, Ill. thanks the thousands of volunteers who filled and placed sandbags along levees. Tim Jarvis, assistant street superintendent for the City of Quincy, Ill. estimated as many as 500,000 volunteers helped fill at least one million sandbags to heighten and strengthen area levees. In one 20-minute interval, 20 tons of sand were bagged. (Quincy Sun photos by Robert Bosworth)

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

W. Somerset Maugham wrote: "For the average man a sufficient role of life is to follow his instincts controlled by the moral standard of the society in which he lives."

Have you ever been caught in a horrible storm while driving a car?...When your windshield wiper could hardly clear your window to give you a clear view of the road? Were not the yellow and white lines in the road helpful to you? Without them you probably would not have been able to continue driving. They protected you from going into the ditch.

Let's think about these questions in regard to our day-by-day living...Safety lines have been given to us. The lines are safety guides and common sense should tell us how important they are...Yet, some people continually ignore them...

The basic guides are in the Bible such as the Beatitudes, the Lord's Prayer and, of course, the all important Ten Commandments, is it not true that if we follow these white lines carefully, we would avoid the many 'ditches' of difficulty in our daily living?...

Morrisette Opens Defense Of State Championship

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion baseball team was scheduled to open defense of its state championship Tuesday night against Needham at Adams Field after winning its second straight outright Zone 6 title. Morrisette also shared the zone crown with Braintree in 1990 and 1991.

The second game of the Needham series was also scheduled for Adams last night (Wednesday), as the Needham field was unavailable, and the third game, if necessary, will also be at Adams tonight (Thursday) at 7:30.

Morrisette finished the regular season at 14-2-2, winning its last nine games in a row and finished with an unprecedented 13-0 record at Adams Field.

Braintree finished second in Zone 6 and faced Bridgewater in its state opener, while Randolph finished third and opened against Sandwich.

Morrisette won all three of its games last week, a 10-2 win over Milton, a 13-0 romp over Randolph and a nine-inning 2-1 victory over West Roxbury.

The finale with West Roxbury was the first test for Morrisette in its last nine games as both teams featured clutch pitching and outstanding defense.

Matt O'Toole of Morrisette and Mike Hauk of W. Roxbury hooked up in a fine pitchers' duel. Hauk, a crafty southpaw, had defeated Morrisette, 3-1, earlier, one of Morrisette's two losses.

Morrisette had 13 hits in eight innings but stranded 14 runners as Hauk got the big out when he needed it.

West Roxbury scored its lone run, unearned, in the third on a double and an error.

Morrisette tied it when O'Toole, Robbie Kane and Serge Belcastro singled.

It remained that way until the second extra inning when Pat Bryan relieved O'Toole, who has been lifted for a pinch runner.

W. Roxbury loaded the bases with no outs on a missed third strike, misjudged fly ball and an outfield error. But two outstanding throws from shortstop Tommy Malvesti on ground balls forced both runners at the plate and a strikeout ended the threat.

In the bottom of the inning Dave Reinhart tripled to deep right field and, after Jay Schnabel and Brian Hayes were walked intentionally, Malvesti hit a sacrifice fly to left center to drive in the winning run.

O'Toole (4-0) has allowed only three earned runs in 31 innings for an 0.70 ERA. Bryan picked up his first Legion victory. Morrisette had three more double plays for a record-setting 24 for the season.

Belcastro and O'Toole had three hits each, Pat Shea and Reinhart two and Kane Schnabel, Hayes and Malvesti one each.

In the romp over Randolph, Mike Patch pitched five strong innings, allowing five hits, striking out seven and walking only one. It improved his record to 4-1. Sean Dolbeare and Malvesti pitched the final two innings, Dolbeare striking out the side and Malvesti striking out two.

Morrisette had 13 hits and put the game out of reach with a seven-run second inning. Shea, Kane and Adam Calvert had three hits apiece, Danny Duncan a triple and Chris Cotter, Reinhart and Schnabel singles.

Sean Donovan improved his record to 3-1-1 in the game against Milton, allowing two earned runs, striking out two and walking two in six innings.. Bryan pitched the seventh, striking out two and walking one.

Morrisette again had 13 hits with Hayes having three, Schnabel two doubles, Belcaztro a double and single, Malvesti two hits and Kane, Reinhart, Shea and Donovan one each.

"We have been playing excellent ball and I hope we can keep it up in the playoffs," said coach Dave Perdios, who led Morrisette into the state playoffs for the fourth year in a row.

All-Stars Split Pair In Invitational Tourney

Quincy's 12-year-old all-stars split a pair of games over the past weekend in the Milford Little League invitational tournament.

In Quincy's first game Chris Bregoli pitched a one-hitter and struckout 13 in a 10-0 victory over Marlboro.

Quincy scored four runs in the fourth inning as Kevin Walsh led off with a single, Bregoli doubled him in and Mike Powers singled home Bregoli. Jose Diaz singled in Powers and Shawn Manning drove in Diaz.

Quincy added four in the fifth with Diaz, Manning and Billy Walker hitting back-to-back doubles.

Diaz had three hits, Walsh, Bregoli and Powers two each and Ryan Barrett had a double. Bregoli was named the game's MVP.

Quincy was held to five hits as it lost to Middleboro, 7-3.

Quincy took a 1-0 lead as Walsh walked and scored on Powers' double. Quincy took a 3-1 lead as Bregoli hit a two-run homer to right center in the third.

Quincy's Manning was cruising along with a two-hitter through three innings but Middleboro tied it with two runs in the fourth.

Middleboro then took the lead for good as Bruno Bower hit a three-run homer to center. Walker relieved Manning and gave up the seventh run.

Daley and Barrett had the other Quincy hits and again Bregoli was named the game's MVP.

Quincy Track Club Wins All-Star Meet

The Quincy Track Club used depth and balance to score a major victory in the first Needham All-Star Invitational track and field meet.

Quincy won with 619 points, followed by the Needham Track Club with 582, the Greater Lowell Road Runners with 318 and the Lexington Lightning with 217.

Although Quincy won only the 9-10 girls' division, it dominated the throws and kept close in every other event as well as taking four of eight relay races to clinch the victory.

"We spend a lot of time with throwing events," said Quincy director Geoff Hennessy. There are 14 different events in track and we try to find the right event for each kid. There were only three races all night in which we didn't have a score. Seventy-five kids represented the club and only the host Needham team had more athletes."

The format required that only one athlete per club could compete, although Quincy and Needham had a few extra in the field events and longer races.

"It was a great night for the kids and Needham put on a super meet," Hennessy said.

ALL IN ALIGN

When most people call to mind wheel alignments, they think of the conventional two-wheel alignment which concerns itself only with the front wheels. However, today's vehicles (especially those outfitted with independent rear suspensions) call for four-wheel alignments. Regardless of their position, wheels that are out of alignment will experience rapid or uneven tire wear and/or cause the car to pull to one side during steering. For proper handling, traction, and tire life, all four wheels should be perpendicular to the road and run parallel to one another. To this end, the three basic alignment angles of toe, camber, and caster may be adjusted. On selected cars, the caster and camber are not adjustable.

HINT: If necessary, make four-wheel alignment part of new tire purchase or rotation.

Call 843-1550, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for an appointment if your car is showing signs of any problem. Our technicians are trained to get you back on the road safely by efficiently and completely handling the problems that may occur. For the best service in town, we're here 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). Remember, we are much more than a typical "gas" station. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Adopt A City Park Or Playground

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Residents interested in helping to improve the city's 41 parks and playgrounds will now have their chance to do so.

The City Council Monday night passed a resolution calling for civic organizations such as Quincy Youth Soccer and Quincy Youth Baseball, as well as other community groups, to work with the council in aiding the city's Park Department in making the parks and playgrounds "the very best they can be."

As part of the resolution, each of these groups would be able to adopt a park or playground in a manner similar to the city's Adopt-An-Island program.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who introduced the resolution, said a recent front-page story in The Patriot Ledger criticizing many of the city's parks did not take into consideration all of the facts regarding the state of the parks. Cheney noted that Park Director Raymond Cattaneo only has eight workers at his disposal, as opposed to the Quincy Park Department of 20 years ago which employed 38 workers.

"I'd like to praise Ray Cattaneo for his gallant efforts without adequate resources," said Cheney.

Cheney added that the Ledger article failed to note that some of the city's parks are under the School Department's control, not the Park Department's.

Several councillors, including Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, noted that the Ledger article may have been a little unfair in its appraisal of the parks.

"What that paper did is unbelievable," said DeCristofaro. "Those guys who work at the (park) department do a tremendous job."

"We wouldn't have accomplished Collins-Rest-A-While without the Park Department employees," agreed Council President Charles Phelan, referring to the recently renovated playground on Southern Artery.

Councillors agreed, however, that the city's parks and playgrounds have not been a high priority in recent years.

"I'm taking it as a challenge," said Councillor Timothy Cahill. "We'll never have all 41 parks looking perfect; it would be impossible. But we have not done enough."

DeCristofaro added that the program also needs "public input," and called upon residents to pick up trash and other waste at the parks and playgrounds while visiting them.

Asks Sheets' Support

Chretien Proposes Electric, Natural Gas For City Cars

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien is appealing to Mayor James Sheets for his support and cooperation in the promotion of the use of alternatively fueled vehicles in Quincy.

"This would be a natural extension of your commitment towards making the city 'Cleaner and Greener,'" Chretien stated in a letter to Sheets last week.

Chretien, a leader in the city's recycling movement, said the new federal Clean Air Act has several provisions regarding the use of AFVs, particularly those powered by electricity and natural gas. "Although it may take some years before passenger cars run on alternative fuels, many public and private fleet operators are moving in this direction," the councillor said.

Chretien pointed out Quincy is the home of the only natural gas powered garbage truck in America, operated by BFI. "Working with the private sector, there is much more that can be done in this city to make it cleaner, greener and less dependent on foreign oil," he said.

Chretien said the city could start moving toward AFVs by purchasing new natural gas or electric vehicles for various city departments. "Existing vehicles could be converted on a case-by-case basis, depending on feasibility. On a parallel track, we would encourage other public and private fleet operators to do the same," Chretien wrote, noting the MBTA, taxis, Postal Service and trolley service as possible operators.

On Tuesday, Sheets said he will examine Chretien's suggestion. "We'll look at it. It depends on cost and efficiency. We'll take a look at his recommendation."

The mayor said a change to AFVs would have to be practical and cost-effective. "I need patrol cars that can accelerate quickly. We still have a budget and we must adhere to that," he said.

Chretien has suggested the city organize a working group to determine a plan of action. In the beginning, he said the group should include the state Division of Energy Resources, Boston Gas and Public Works Commissioner David Colton.

"As things develop, we can bring in other parties," Chretien said.

The councillor said the AFV technology exists and that other cities and towns

Sends Out Mailing Appeal

Sheets Seeking Home-grown Tourists

As part of the city's continuing effort to boost tourism, Mayor James Sheets is conducting a mass mailing to invite local residents and their guests to visit Quincy's historical landmarks.

Sheets said Quincy residents are an untapped resource in the city's tourim effort. He said he hopes the mailing will help spark an interest among those residents who have not visited their hometown's historic sites.

"This (Quincy) is a historical treasure. We know it's here but it's never been accentuated. It would be nice for people who have visitors outside of the city to have them visit the sites and go on the trolley," Sheets said.

The mayor's mailing consists of a letter from Sheets which informs residents of several new tourism ventures, including the National Park Service visitors' center in Quincy Center; the trolley transit service which links the Adams National Historic Sites (Adams Mansion, Birthplaces and United First Parish Church); and the "Walk of Names" brick plaza project planned for the entrance of the City Hall annex.

The mailing also included a flyer for the "Walk of Names" project and a brochure featuring

Police Urge Residents To Take Precautions After Two Seniors Attacked

Residents are being urged by the Quincy Police Department to take precautions while out alone at night following the beatings and robberies of two senior citizens last week.

Both men were beaten so badly with a chain that they have little memory of the attacks.

The first attack occurred last Friday about 12:45 a.m., according to Detective Lt. Neil MacDonald. John Coghlan, 72, was walking home from the Wollaston MBTA station after returning from a part-time job in Boston when he was jumped and beaten at the intersection of Clay and Chapman Sts.

A neighbor who heard the attack found Coghlan lying on a sidewalk, saw a man running from the scene to a waiting car, and gave a description of the man to police, according to MacDonald.

Edward Martin, 21, of Quincy was arrested and charged with the crime. MacDonald said Martin told police he once lived in South Boston and now stays with friends in Quincy.

Martin pleaded innocent Monday in Quincy District Court on charges of armed assault with intent to rob or murder, assault with intent to murder, armed robbery of a person over 65 years old, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, and assault and battery. He was held on $100,000 bail.

MacDonald said because of information from Boston Police, Quincy Police suspect two other men also participated in the attack.

Approximately 45 minutes after the assault on Coghlan, Boston Police stopped a car matching a description given by the neighbor who heard the attack. Police said three young men, including Martin, were in the car. The driver was charged with speeding, then allowed to go.

A second Quincy man was attacked the same morning at about 4:45 a.m., MacDonald said. The 70-year-old was jogging along Adams St. toward Newport Ave. when a dark-

TROLLEY IS ALIGHTED by Cong. Gerry Studds (white shirt) and Mayor James Sheets as they and Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt are greeted by U.S. Park Service rangers during their visit to the Adams National Historic Site. The visit followed a tour of Boston Harbor Islands which local officials hope will become part of the National Park Service. The trolley transports tourists to Quincy's various historic landmarks. The trolley is manned by the Park Service which operates a visitors' center in Presidents Place.

Tours Area With Interior Secretary Babbitt

Studds Wants Boston Harbor Islands Linked To Quincy Historic Sites

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt and Congressman Gerry Studds toured Quincy Saturday and discussed a study which will decide whether the Boston Harbor Islands should be linked with Quincy's historic sites.

If such a linkage is viable, Studds would like Quincy and the Boston Harbor Islands incorporated into a much broader National Coastal Maritime Heritage Trail. The congressman would like to group well-known historic, cultural and recreational sites along the Eastern seaboard from Maine to Florida into one trail.

Studds pitched his proposal to Babbitt during the secretary's visit to Quincy Saturday. The congressman's idea was also discussed by local officials, including Mayor James Sheets.

According to Studds, the Boston Harbor Islands study will cost $250,000 and has been approved by the federal government. The year-long study, which will begin next week, will determine whether the 30 harbor islands should be incorporated into a national park system.

If the study determines that the islands and Quincy's historic sites should be linked and thus fall under the auspices of the National Park Service, then officials would work to connect the islands and sites with rail and boat transit as well as by trolley, said Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets.

Mader said Quincy and the Boston Harbor islands are already linked in history. She noted John Adams courted his wife, Abigail, on Ransford Island in Boston Harbor. Adams also named Fort Independence on Castle Island while he was president.

If the islands become part of the park service, the next logical step officials say would be to establish Studds' proposed National Coastal Maritime Heritage Trail. Studds said the trail would include sites related to maritime history, industry, commerce, culture, and the natural coastal environment.

Potential sites would include lighthouses, maritime museums, fishing villages, national parks and wildlife refuges, and historic shipwrecks. States would participate voluntarily, but, if they chose to participate , they would be required to match the federal grant dollar for dollar with a dedicated source of non-federal monies, and establish a non-profit Trail Advisory Committee to administer the state's trail, the congressman said.

Babbitt said a decision on whether to make the Harbor Islands part of the park service would be made by 1996. He also said he supports the creation of a National Coastal and Maritime Heritage Trail.

After arriving at Marina Bay on the "Gracious Lady", Babbitt, Studds, and their guests boarded a trolley which travelled past Wollaston Beach and journeyed into Quincy Center encompassing the Wollaston Cemetery, and the United First Parish Church. The trolley stopped at the Adams Mansion where Babbitt and Studds were given a tour.

After their tour, Sheets, Babbitt, and Studds joined their visitors at the Carriage House for lunch served by Encore Catering of Quincy, courtesy of Sheets.

Studds, who introduced Babbitt, described the 1988 Democratic presidential candidate and former Arizona governor as a scholar because of his extensive knowledge of Western history and New England.

Babbitt commemorated the ancestors of the Adams family who were "never quite content with the status quo and were always kind of dreaming about what the future ought to look like." Specifically, he remembered how John Quincy Adams ran for Congress after becoming president and died on the floor of Congress during his fight to abolish slavery.

Babbitt, who was active during the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s, urged the guests to "dream a little bit", about "how we can put our history together, how we can integrate our culture, restore extraordinary maritime environment and lay it all into a large dream of what the future is about."

Congressman Studds described the Boston Harbor Islands as a "national treasure".

"It is abundantly clear to me that it has ever been that for all the reasons we all know, for reasons of history, natural beauty, proximity to three million people that is indeed the best kept secret," Studds said. "I don't know if it is entirely good news, but it isn't going to be secret much longer."

Studds applauded Sheets for his participation in Quincy's history. "I don't believe I have ever met anyone with a more passionate feel for, interest in, concern about, and dedication in preserving the best of historical heritage."

Sheets said steps must be taken to preserve and promote the city's history which played a prominent role in this nation's infancy.

"We have assembled here indeed a group of people who are dedicated and committed not only to writing its page in history, but to ensuring that all Americans, all of America, come to realize, to enjoy, and to benefit from America's historical roots which have taken ground in this most marvelous city",

The mayor informed the guests of a study recently completed which found Quincy Center to be an "excellent site" for a hotel.

Sheets attributed the success of the historic Quincy trail to a "partnership that is developing this city on an economic basis, a partnership between the National Park Service, the city of Quincy, and the United First Parish Church which has resulted in the opening of the United First Parish Church seven days a week, this summer."

"We have come together to promote our rich heritage, but there is another dimension of the partnership concept. It's a partnership between the local government, the city of Quincy, the National Park Service, and the United States Congress, including the House and the Senate", said Sheets.

"I'm sure that those who have gone before all the members of the Adams family, John Hancock and all those, are smiling down at us in recognition of what we have begun to do to ensure that they have their place in history and that people can come ,and visit, and enjoy," the mayor added.

Sheets presented Babbitt with a Sebastian miniature of the Adams Academy, a t-shirt from his recent visit to aid the flood victims in Quincy, Ill. which read, "The Great Flood, the Summer of 1993", and a bumper sticker which read, "I fought the River in the Great Flood of 1993." Sheets also presented Studds with a similar t-shirt and bumper sticker.

Quincy's historic sites.

"It's (the mailing) kind of an update to let the residents know what's happening," the mayor said.

Approximately 17,000 homes in Quincy will receive the mailing which started last Thursday, Sheets said. The mailing will cost $2,800, about half of which will be paid by Sheets and the other through private donations.

The mayor said no city money was used for the mailing.

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site, said the mailing will help promote Quincy's tourism. "He (Sheets) is acknowledging our resources and reminding our residents that he have new programs and many tourist sites in addition to the Adams family legacy.

"I think it's a wonderful opportunity for people to stop by."

Since the tourism season began in April, approximately 20,000 people have visited the Adams National Historic Site, Peak said. Compared to last year, Peak said tourism is up about 50 percent.

Of those visitors, Peak did not know how many were from Quincy. However, she said there is local interest in Quincy's history.

"On the first day of the trolley service, a mother from Quincy and her two daughters were the first to arrive," Peak said. "Quincy is interested. We are being promoted and there is very strong community interest."

Red Cross Offering Instructor's Course

The American Red Cross South Area office, 85 Quincy Ave., is offering an instructor's course entitled, "Community First Aid and Safety" beginning Monday, Sept. 13.

Other course dates are Wednesday, Sept. 15, Monday, Sept. 20, Wednesday, Sept. 20; Wednesday, Sept. 22 and Monday, Sept. 27. All classes are from 6 to 10 p.m.

The Red Cross urges all people will a background in CPR and First Aid to consider taking the course. "There is no more precious gift to give to your fellow man or woman than the art of saving lives and or administering lifesaving first aid techniques," said Helen Crowley of the Red Cross.

"Nor is anything more rewarding or satisfying on a personal level than joining the elite group of American Red Cross volunteer instructors. Learn to train good ordinary folk the ability to save a fellow human being's life.

"Accidents happen where we least expect them, whether it be on the job, in the classroom, at home with children or older loved ones and of course, there is an ever present chance someone will require a simple lifesaving technique when we are off somewhere spending leisure time," Crowley said.

Quincy Hospital To Aid Hospital In Quincy, Illinois

Quincy Hospital will be collecting cash donations to help its sister hospital in Quincy, Illinois.

Blessings Hospital is a not-for-profit community hospital, serving people living on both sides of the Mississippi River. It is a hospital very similar to Quincy Hospital, with about the same number of beds and providing a wide range of community health services.

Ellen Zane, CEO of Quincy Hospital, spoke with administrators at Blessings last week. They told her that everyone there is working to their maximum ability. Since the roads are underwater, and travel is virtually impossible, nurses are working shifts of three to four days at a time and then being transported home by a private helicopter service. Physicians, for the most part, are virtually living at the hospital.

Although there seem to be sufficient supplies on hand, hospital personnel are extremely concerned about the development of massive public health problems as the flood waters subside. They are especially concerned that the excessive rain and high water level will breed an unusually large number of mosquitos, creating a major health problem.

Rick Smith, vice president for customer relations at Blessings, said the best way Quincy Hospital could help would be to collect financial donations to be used to support the mosquito spraying program and help deal with other public health problems which develop as the water begins to recede.

Collection jars for cash donations have been placed in several locations around Quincy Hospital. In addition the Dunkin' Donuts in the hospital will be donating 5 percent of all coffee sales this week to the relief effort.

Checks, made out to the Adams County Medical Society can be sent to Rev. Ann Rearick, Director of Pastoral Care, Quincy Hospital, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, Massachusetts 02169 to be forwarded to Blessings Hospital.

Donations will be accepted through Friday, Aug. 5.

Chretien Proposes Electric, Natural Gas Cars For City

in Massachusetts are experimenting with it. He said he wants the city to be a leader in the movement.

"Within the next couple of years, this technology will be up and running. I'd rather be a bit ahead than a bit behind," he said.

He said vehicles fueled by natural gas and electricity make the most sense in this area because they are readily available in the eastern part of the United States. Turning to AFVs would also spur new infrastructure including new fuel stations. That in turn would generate more jobs locally, he said.

Chretien is confident AFVs are feasible in Quincy. "The technology is here. It's just a matter of time. If the city leads the way, there will be a snowball effect. It'll start small and just get bigger and bigger."

Mariano Wants Gambling Revenue Used To Relieve Water-Sewer Rates

State Rep. Ron Mariano has filed legislation to create the Commonwealth Sewer Rate Relief Trust Fund aimed at bringing fiscal relief to water and sewer ratepayers of Massachusetts.

Anticipating the potential legalization of excursion boat gambling, Mariano called for all revenues reaped by the Commonwealth to be directed to the trust fund.

"If legalized gambling prevails, then the revenues should be used to relieve the painful strain of the Harbor cleanup on the Massachusetts economy and the budgets of everyday people," said Mariano.

Governor Weld has proposed that all revenues from floating casino gambling be used to fund a megaplex facility in Boston.

Mariano cited the need to change this thinking.

"In view of the modest monies coming from the Federal and State governments for these mandates, it is incumbent on the Legislature to find innovative ways to bring relief to ratepayers. Using gambling money may be one of those ways. It is time that the Governor readjust his priorities, monies from floating casinos in the Harbor should go towards its cleanup."

Although excursion boat gambling has yet to be legalized, Mariano said he feels that proactive and aggressive steps like this legislation should be taken to insure the constructive use of such revenue.

Medically Speaking

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

GIVING VOICE TO AN ALTERNATIVE

One of the hardest parts of coping with larynx cancer can be the loss of the "voice box" and the ability to speak normally. However, a new treatment alternative is making it possible for some patients to keep their larynxes - and their voices. In extensive trials sponsored by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs, cases of larynx cancer were treated with two courses of chemotherapy. A laryngectomy was performed if the tumor didn't respond well, but if the chemo progress was good, the larynx was left intact and a third cycle of chemotherapy was ordered. Radiation therapy completed the treatment. Survival rates of patients treated in this way were similar to those whose larynxes had been removed.

P.S. The new procedure is not advisable for every patient, but it does offer one more option for some cancer patients.

Doctors hope that in the future fewer and fewer laryngectomies will be necessary. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

A No. 1 Baseball Fan

Sam Shellman, who was Quincy's first black political candidate 61 years ago apparently had another distinction:

Quincy's No. 1 baseball fan.

Our item here about Shellman running for the City Council at-large in 1932 and finishing 19th in a field of 20 candidates, brings a letter from reader J. Thomas Mullaney of Standish Ave., Wollaston.

"You might be interested to know," he writes, "that Sam Shellman was a great baseball fan. In fact, he was such a great fan that local teams would delay the start of their games so Sam would not miss any of the game.

"These games were played at Upper Merrymount Park, which was one of the primary baseball fields in Quincy at the time. It was not unusual for the crowd to be 2,000-5,000 people. The local teams, I believe, were City League clubs with neighborhood fans.

"The game could not start until Sam Shellman could get his Wollaston barbershop closed and hurry up to Merrymount Park. The crowd would cheer Sam as he hurried in from right field. Everyone knew that the game could now begin because Sam arrived.

"Sam always had a good seat reserved for him. While he was very popular with the baseball fans, there was another reason for the VIP treatment he received from the local teams.

"When they passed the hat to collect money to subsidize the teams, Sam was the most generous contributor.

"As I have lived all my life (58 years) on Standish Ave. across from Merrymount Park, I grew up hearing positive stories about Sam Shellman.

"I can remember my father and mother telling me stories of Sam and all the fine teams and games played in Merrymount Park.

"Sam was black and he was highly respected in Quincy.

"Not bad for a so-called racist city.

"P.S. I would love to see some company or organization sponsor a Sam Shellman team in the Little League or some other youth group to honor a fine gentleman who loved baseball."

Sounds like Sam was quite a guy. But where were all those baseball fans on election day?

FRIDAY IS LOTTERY day at City Hall.

The names of the nine candidates for School Committee will be drawn to determine their position on the preliminary election ballot Sept. 14.

SHEA

City Clerk Joseph Shea will preside over the drawing at 3 p.m.

The nine School Committee candidates are incumbent Ron Mariano. Sean Barry, JoAnn Bragg, Christine Cedrone, Gregory Hanley, Toni Kabilian, Ronald McCarthy, John McDuff and John Spada.

The preliminary election will determine which six of the nine candidates will make it to the Nov. 2 final election.

There were not enough candidates for councillor at-large and ward councillor to warrant a preliminary election for those seats. And, of course, Mayor James Sheets is unopposed.

In the final election, the candidates will be listed alphabetically with incumbents first and challengers after them.

Recycling Committee Announces New Tree Planting Initiative

The Recycling Committee is beginning a new tree planting program, announces committee chairman and Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien.

"Recycling committee volunteers are committed towards improving our existing recycling and composting programs. However, we have decided to broaden our environmental protection efforts into the area of tree planting," Chretien said.

"The city's forestry department does not have the resources it needs to plant as many trees as it we need or want. At the same time that the forestry budget is tight, in the normal course of a year, areas of the city become developed and many trees get cut down without being replaced.

"So by using volunteers," Chretien said, "we hope to supplement the operations of the forestry department."

The chairman said the recycling committee hopes to get more citizens actively involved in protecting the environment. "We intend on having a lot of fun with this program and we think that it will be a great way to involve school children."

Over the next few weeks, volunteers will be working out the program details. They will form a partnership with Mayor James Sheets and the forestry department.

Chretien said the program may begin modestly with a few plantings in the fall. "Hopefully, we will expand as time goes on, much in the same way that we began the recycling program.

"Eventually, we might even be able to establish a volunteer-based city tree nursery, but steps will be taken one at a time," he added.

Anyone interested in joining the initiative can call Chretien at 472-1400. He said a meeting will be held in the near future to discuss the program.

Union Head Applauds Sheets, Council Opposition To MBTA Privatization

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The president of the union representing workers of the Metropolitan Bay Transit Authority has called a resolution passed by the City Council last week opposing Gov. William Weld's proposed privatization of the MBTA a "major victory" for all who work for and support the authority.

Carmen's Union President Richard Murphy said that the MBTA Board of Directors has procrastinated in holding any public hearings regarding Weld's plan and other avenues must be explored in order to take a stand on the issue.

"This (City Council) vote is a major victory for the riders, taxpayers and workers involved with the MBTA," said "The Board of Directors has ignored calls for public hearings before any subcontracting is undertaken so it's up to the City Councils, mayors and other elected officials to take action.

"This is just first such 'Resolution Opposing Service Reductions'....The Carmen's Union will be joining with concerned T riders in all 79 cities and towns to oppose privatization of public transportation."

Mayor James Sheets said last week that he, also, is in full support of the resolution. The mayor said that privatization would have a detrimental impact on the quality of service that the MBTA provides its users.

"I'm opposed to privatization," said Sheets. "My major concern is that we may be looking at a back door way to cut out certain (bus) lines along the South Shore. We have to make sure we have adequate service and maintain the quality of service that we've always had."

Sheets added that while it may be true the city could save money from privatization, the reduced services that would likely result would not be worth it.

The City Council voted 7-1-1 to support the resolution, which was introduced by Council President Charles Phelan.

"We have a public agency (MBTA) that sometimes we may have disagreements with, but we have adequate input regarding its actions," said Phelan. "I wonder, if we add privatization, if we'll have the same voice."

Other councillors agreed.

"One of the basic mandates of government is to provide for the public good," said Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio.

"I don't think there's any great benefit (to privatization)," said Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson. "I stand firmly behind this resolution."

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro.wondered about "the number of jobs that would be lost" in the case of MBTA privatization and made a motion that the council vote in favor the resolution.

Jim Lydon, recording secretary of the Boston Carmen's Union, expressed his hopes that the council give the resolution its support.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, however, said that said that while privatization can sometimes be detrimental in some cases, it can also be beneficial in others.

"We've spent the last few months trying to save money, and I have to look at both sides," said Cahill. "I don't know how I can vote on this when I don't have all the facts. It doesn't mean that I support Weld's privatization plan, but I can't support this (resolution) as it is tonight."

Councillor Joseph LaRaia said that while "there have been abuses in privatization as well as public service," there is "more accountability" in public service and voiced support of the resolution.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who is employed by the MBTA, abstained from the vote.

A number of MBTA employees carrying signs saying "Privatization = A Weld Scam" outside the City Council Chamber, as well as others seated inside, applauded enthusiastically after the vote was taken.

The resolution, which calls for "the city's representatives on the MBTA Advisory Board to take all actions necessary to stop the ill-advised campaign of MBTA privatization," will be sent to Weld and the general advisor of the MBTA after it is signed by Sheets, according to Phelan.

Administrative Assistant Bernice Mader, the city's representative on the MBTA board, expressed sentiments similar to Sheets' and said she will urge the board to oppose the privatization.

The privatization plan has been proposed an attempt to cut MBTA costs. A recent consultant's report for the authority showed that the MBTA ranked second only to Seattle as having the second-highest bus transportation costs among 28 systems in the country.

The report, which was filed by Comsis Corp. of Silver Springs, Md., projects no layoffs but indicates that attrition would produce cost savings. It also stated that private contracting should be increased to include about 25 percent of all MBTA bus lines as unionized bus drivers and mechanics are lost through attrition.

Under the recommendations of the report, the first routes affected by the privatization would be in Lynn and Salem, followed by those at Alewife Station in Cambridge and Quincy Center.

Deer Island Bill To End Bay Pollution?

Aug. 5-11, 1951 42 Years Ago

A triumphant conclusion to a 25-year fight to end pollution in Quincy Bay appeared in sight as the House passed and sent to the State Senate a bill that would eliminate Moon Island as a sewage disposal plant and transfer its operations to Deer Island.

It was estimated that between 40 and 135 million gallons of raw sewage was dumped each day into Quincy Bay from the Moon Island Plant, which served the Boston sewer system.

The House bill calls for construction of a deep rock tunnel from Columbia Circle in Boston to Deer Island, where a complete sewage treatment plant similar to the one at Nut Island would be built. The $15 million Nut Island Plant was expected to be finished in October.

Rep. William W. Jenness of Quincy secured the inclusion in the bill a provision to connect Squantum to the Metropolitan sewer system since the elimination of the Moon Island Plant would have left the peninsula with no sewage outlet.

The bill also provided for the inclusion of Boston into the South Metropolitan Sewage District, a move that would reduce Quincy's proportional assessment in the district.

LONG ISLAND BRIDGE

Labor secretary Maurice J. Tobin officially dedicated the new 3.5 mile $2 million bridge and viaduct between Moon Island and Long Island, which replaced the ferry boat that had plied the strait between the islands for 65 years.

Tobin said he hoped that the bridge would be the forerunner of a series of bridges linking the harbor islands and taking some of the South Shore Traffic load off Quincy Streets.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Beechwood Board Elects Two New Members

The Board of Directors of Beechwood Community Life Center recently elected two new members.

They are Frank Miller, owner-operator of Wollaston Market, and Julie McCarthy, a community parent-activist. "Frank Miller is a well-known altruist and businessman, and Julie McCarthy is noted for her neighborhood, school and community work," said Executive Director Sharron Beals.

Beechwood is a city-wide, multi-purpose community center, guided and developed by a volunteer Board of Directors. Board is broadly representative of the community. It takes pride (as a non-profit service provider) in operating primarily on "earned revenues."

"The City has been very helpful, providing essential direct and technical assistance to the eleven year development and operation of Beechwood's programs and services. However, the Board of Directors is responsible for policy making and general oversight."

Stop & Shop To Begin Museum Promotion Sunday

Specially designed decals displaying the USS Salem will be available at the checkout counters of Super Stop & Shop Supermarkets in Quincy and Braintree beginning Sunday.

The decals will cost $1 and all proceeds will go to The U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum slated to open in 1994 in Quincy. Stop & Shop will match the donation of its shoppers dollar for dollar up to $25,000.

A kickoff for the promotion was held Tuesday at the Super Stop & Shop on Newport Ave. in Wollaston. Officials in attendance included Mayor James Sheets, U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum Executive Director William MacMullen and Robert Tobin, president and CEO of the Stop & Shop Supermarket Company.

Because a scheduled bonding will not be in place until the vessel is in Quincy, officials are hoping to raise at least $45,000 to help cover the cost of towing the USS Salem from Philadelphia to Quincy, as well the insurances involved and a letter of credit for environmental protection.

Officials are hoping to return the vessel to Quincy, where it was built, by the last week in August.

Chiropractic Update
by Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT IS CHIROPRACTIC

Chiropractic is that branch of healing arts that deals with the structure and function of the spine, and specializes in the evaluation and treatment of back and neck pain among other systems. Chiropractors feel that the cause of of many back and neck problems stem from the misalignment of one or more of the 33 spinal bones (called vertebrae), and the subsequent nerve pressure that may result.

A Doctor of Chiropractic may often use an x-ray and extensive diagnostic tests to determine if such a misaligned vertebrae and/or "pinched nerve" exists. These "pinched nerves" may often be the cause of back and neck pain, headaches or perhaps pain, tingling and/or numbness in arm or leg. It is the job of the chiropractor to determine if such a problem exists, and to correct it, naturally, without medication or surgery.

The Doctor of Chiropractic uses techniques learned through years of study whereby he/she applies pressure with his/her hands to areas of the spine that are misaligned, in order to restore joint mobility and function and relieve pressure on pain sensitive structures. A chiropractic adjustment provides a safe, painless drug free, method for reducing the pain and pressure caused by the pinched nerve or misaligned vertebrae.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment pease call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

John McDuff Candidate For School Committee

JOHN McDUFF

John H. McDuff, 216 South St., Quincy Point, announces his candidacy for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

McDuff, 59, is making his fourth bid for the seat. He is a graduate of Emerson College and retired managed at Brigham and Women's Hospital following 25 years of service.

He serves as Ward 2 Republican chairman, vice chairman of the Republican City Committee, is founder and president of the Quincy Animal League, a member of the Quincy Citizens Association, Quincy Sons of Italy, and Mass. Citizens for Life. In 1988, he was a Republican candidate for state representative.

In his announcement McDuff said, "There is a great need to teach young people traditional values by providing strong moral leadership. I oppose condom distribution at any grade level. I can accept sex education at the high school level as long as the emphasis is on abstinence.

"Advocating condom use when they have a failure rate of 15 to 20 percent is like urging youngsters to play Russian roulette. There are forces in our society today which promote contempt for both God and country, but in the struggle for the hearts and minds of our young people I stand for traditional family values, along with a sound basic education.

"I am gratified by the recent Supreme Court decision permitting 'student initiated' prayer at graduation, and will encourage it wholeheartedly."

McDuff said he supports plans to reopen schools in the north end of the city to alleviate overcrowding and add a gymnasium-cafeteria to the Parker School. "But," he continued, "the fiscal situation requires a careful watch on how much tax money is spent.

"The easy answer to educational problems is to throw money at them, but it is the wrong answer. All the money in the world won't replace strong moral leadership.

"We spend more on education in America today than ever before yet we turn out an inferior product. Since God was taken out of the classroom a few decades ago and replaced with sex education and humanism, teen pregnancy has skyrocketed and sexually transmitted diseases have increased from 7 to 28. Isn't is obvious we're on the wrong track?"

McDuff said he favors removal of Quincy College from School Committee control. "I urged that step in my 1989 campaign and urge it even more strongly now. It's time to support Dr. Johnson in his efforts to run a first-class college without constant interference from the political sidelines."

On the subject of Gov. Weld's School Choice Plan, McDuff said, "I oppose it if it is made mandatory, which is what Weld really wants. We don't need the crime and violence of the Boston schools forced on us. Quincy schools should be for Quincy children."

In closing, McDuff said, "I believe I possess the maturity and sound judgement to cope with the problems confronting our school system and make the tough decisions needed to move our children into the challenging world of the next century while preserving the best of our past."

Mary Collins Candidate For City Council At-Large

Mary P. Collins of 116 Lansdowne St., Squantum, former School Committeewoman and Norfolk County Commissioner, formally announces her candidacy for City Councillor at-Large.

Collins emphasized her experience in government at the city and county levels.

"I know first hand how important education is to our community from my 15 years on the school committee," she said. As a county commissioner from 1989 to 1992, she said she was actively involved in the operation of the County Hospital, County Agricultural School, the operation of the engineering department and the County Recreational Center and Golf Course, as well as budgetary oversight of the Registry of Deeds and the County Correctional System.

"My term as a county commissioner broadened my experience and gave me a better understanding for the need of long-range planning, budgeting and regional cooperation.

"We must continue to promote business in Quincy, particularly in the downtown area and the former shipyard at Fore River. Re-development of the shipyard site can provide job opportunities for local residents, expanded real estate taxes and further financial relief to MWRA ratepayers from the proceeds of the sale of the property to future development. However, future development must involve community planning and participation to insure that any future use is compatible with local residents' concerns.

"No where is the need for long-range planning more evident than in the need to upgrade and maintain our parks. I will propose and ask that a home-rule petition be filed to allow the city to set up a Parks Trust Fund. The city has its show places in Adams Field and Veterans' Stadium, but on the whole, the parks lack equipment and regular maintenance, except in places where local neighborhood groups have rebuilt and maintain their local playgrounds.

"The trust fund could be used for long-term capital improvements and assist with maintenance needs. The fund could be funded by a yearly city appropriation and supplemented by contributions from local citizens and businesses; and be used to pay personnel and buy both maintenance and playground equipment.

"For the past 10 years the city has been paying upward of $2.5 million to General Dynamics in settlement of the disputed property tax claim for the late 1970s. The city's debt to General Dynamics will be paid next year, and a small portion of this money could be deposited on a yearly basis to this trust fund."

Collins also pledged to continue to be an outspoken advocate for the citizens of Quincy. "As a county commissioner I proposed and lead the County Charter Reform movement in an effort to modernize and open up the County Governmental process," she said.

"I have never been afraid to make a difficult choice during my years in government. I'm not afraid to speak up and want to insure that the city's business is open and available for public scrutiny."

Collins is married to Thomas Collins and has four children and one grandchild. She is real estate broker in Quincy.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

While most people do not like to think about their own death or that of a close family member, funeral pre-planning and pre-financing can ease possible problems associated with death. There are many reasons that people pre-plan their own funerals.

One of the most important is that pre-planning permits free choice. It makes one's wishes known; it eases the burden placed upon the family at a time when clear decisions may be difficult to make.

Pre-planning does away with any possible disagreement among the bereaved as to what to do and how much to spend. Pre-planning gives one a piece of mind knowing arrangements have been made in advance.

If you have any questions concerning pre-planning, please feel free to contact us by phone or stop in for consultation. We will answer all questions honestly and frankly and in the strictest of confidence. At no obligation, of course...

Junior League

12 Year-Old All-Stars Advanced In Tourney

The Quincy Junior Baseball League's 12-year All-Stars advanced in the Milford Invitational Tournament, staging a dramatic comeback to edge Norwood, 7-6, and eliminating host Milford, 6-3.

Quincy was scheduled to play Tuesday in the double elimination tournament and, if it won, would play last night (Wednesday).

The all-stars also have entered the Norwood tournament and will open play Saturday at 11:30 a.m. against Braintree Americans. Quincy will also play Sunday at 11:30.

Quincy trailed Norwood, 6-0, entering the bottom half of the fourth inning, after wasting a Shawn Manning single and Bill Walker double in the second.

Mike Powers led off the fourth with a double and Jose Diaz reached on an error. Walker walked to load the bases and Chris Cummings blasted a grand slam homer to centerfield to cut the gap to 6-4.

Chris Bregoli relieved Walker on the mound in the fifth. Quincy had a chance to do some damage in the fifth but successive hits by Bregoli, Powers and Diaz were wasted as the next two batters struck out.

Quincy won the game in the bottom of the sixth. Ryan Barrett doubled and scored on Chad Fitzpatrick's double. Tom Daley singled and Kevin Walsh walked. Bregoli forced Fitzpatrick at the plate, but Powers hit a two-out double over the left fielder's head for the tying and winning runs.

Powers had three hits and was named the game's MVP. Bregoli pitched two hitless innings to pick up the win and he also had two hits.

Against Milford Quincy took a quick 2-1 lead when Daley singled, Walsh singled, Bregoli and Powers walked and Manning reached on a fielders choice.

Milford scored twice in the second without a hit on a walk and two throwing errors.

Quincy tied the score as Cummings doubled and was driven in by Daley.

Diaz homered to right center in the third and Quincy put the game out of reach in the fourth. Walker walked, Cummings singled and, after two strikeouts, Daley reached on an error and Walsh drove in Cummings with his third hit. He was named the game's MVP.

Bregoli pitched the last four innings, shutting Milford out and striking out nine to get his third win of the tournament. Daley had two hits and Cummings added two.

Quincy traveled to Cohasset for two practice games against the runnersup in the Little League district play.

Quincy lost both games as Cohasset's Greg Taylor held Quincy to a run and three hits and a struck out 15. Diaz, Fitzpatrick and Bregoli had the only Quincy hits.

Cohasset won the second game, 7-6. Daley, the first of five Quincy pitchers, excelled, leaving after three innings with a 5-2 lead.

Quincy took the lead after Bregoli homered after a Walsh hit. Powers hit a three-run homer over the fence after a single by Walsh and a walk to Bregoli.

Cohasset tied the game in the fifth, Quincy regained the lead in the seventh but Cohasset won it in the bottom in the inning.

11-Year-Old All-Stars Split Two Games

The Quincy Junior Baseball League's 11-year old All-Stars split two games last weekend in the West Roxbury Park League Tournament.

Quincy will continue play this Saturday against Dedham at 1 p.m.

Quincy lost an 8-7 decision to Westwood in its opening game. Pitcher Paul Markarian allowed only eight hits but three unearned runs in the sixth inning spelled defeat for Quincy.

Michael Carloni was voted the MVP and had three hits. Jody Bravo went 2-for-3, Kiva Tupe had a double and Adam Goodrich, Andrew Currie and Markarian had singles.

Braveo pitched Quincy to a 4-0 win over East Weymouth in the second game with a five-hitter. Braveo was named the game's MVP.

Goodrich, Bravo, Brian Nolan, Steve Rochon, Welch, Joe Tower, Markarian and Currie, sparked the offense while Brian Kalil played well.

By TOM SULLIVAN

The 56th edition of Quincy Bay Race Week got under way yesterday (Wednesday) and QBRWA President Charles Hoffman, past commodore of the Metropolitan Yacht Club, expects at least as many boats as a year ago.

"Interest in yachting continues to increase and I feel we may have more boats than last year," said Hoffman.

Last year ocean racing in Cruising Class Competition was held for the first time with much interest and these races will be held again this year.

Another new highlight last year, a two-hour clinic for juniors conducted by Jack Willy, proved popular and will be held again today (Thursday) at Wessagussett Y.C.

"Jack and his family have dominated junior racing and we feel this clinic will further enhance junior racing," Offman said.

Willy won again in the Laser Class last year with his daughter, Janese, second, and son, John, fourth.

Last year's Race Week was one of the most interesting in years, thanks to the winds.

"The winds were the most variable we have ever had during Race Week," said last year's QBRWA president Dan Falvey. "We had southwest winds blowing hard, southwest winds blowing easy, southeast winds blowing hard and stiff westerly winds. They made for a most interesting week."

The Quincy Bay Race Week Association was former in 1937 with the Quincy, Wollaston and Squantum yacht clubs the original members.

The first Race Week was held in 1938 with 20 classes of boats competing in the racing program.

The regatta was so successful that plans were immediately made for a bigger Race Week the following year.

Later, the Town River, Wessagussett, Braintree, South Shore and Metropolitan clubs joined and those eight clubs currently make up the QBRWA.

The regatta is open to all clubs and many other clubs around the state annually send boats to compete.

Marblehead Race Week had been the main attraction in interclub sailboat racing for years but Quincy Bay Race Week has grown steadily, until now it is challenging Marblehead as the most popular race week in the area.

Juniors are the backbone of Race Week. There were no junior sailing programs in the early years of Race Week. Now all clubs have outstanding junior programs.

All clubs in the association donate and participate in the racing. Any money raised during the year is spent in one year, mainly on trophies.

To keep Race Week in the forefront every year, the association enters a float in the annual Christmas parade and seven years ago the association won the Mayor's Trophy.

Handsome Trophies Await Race Week Winners

A number of handsome trophies were the prizes for hundreds of sailors--men, women, boys and girls--when the 56th edition of Quincy Bay Race Week got under way yesterday (Wednesday).

These trophies include:

Capt. James Berwick Finlay Memorial Trophy: Presented to the Quincy Yacht Club in 1948 by Albert W. Finlay, his father, for competition during Race Week. Presented in loving memory of a son who, during his lifetime, did much to advance the sport of yachting on Massachusetts Bay. The trophy is presented annually to the yachtsman considered to have made the most outstanding record or have performed some single act of sportsmanship during Race Week.

Fred Hunt Memorial Trophy: A perpetual trophy presented annually since 1946 by the Patriot Ledger in memory of the man who served the newspaper for more than three decades as yachting writer and editor.

A deep-water sailor and a racing enthusiast, Hunt played a prominent role in the success and growth of Quincy Bay Race Week and the sport itself.

The trophy is presented annually to a person who has demonstrated a high degree of sportsmanship and a willingness to help others in the yacht racing sport and who has contributed to the success of Race Week. The trophy is held until the succeeding Race Week by the home club of the winner, who is awarded a keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

President's Trophy: Presented by the Pepsi Cola Company to stimulate interest in overall competition.

1300 Trophy: Presented each year since 1960 to the QBRWA by radio station WJDA to demonstrate its interest in Race Week and to aid in the stimulation of racing interest among the junior class.

This trophy is awarded annually to the winning skipper in the Turnabout Class and becomes his permanent possession.

Commodore Isadore Bromfield Trophy: Presented in 1976 to the QBRWA by the Metropolitan Yacht Club. The trophy is awarded annually to the Race Week winner according to the deed of gift. The winner is presented an engraved keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

Commodore Charles Wing Memorial Trophy: Presented to the QBRWA in 1981 by his friends and family as a perpetual trophy to be awarded annually to the winner of the Red Fleet on Town River Yacht Club's day of Race Week.

City of Boston Bermuda Cup: This beautiful and historic punch bowl has been in the custody of the Quincy Yacht Club for over 50 years. It was presented by the City of Boston around 1905 for a race from Boston to Bermuda.

The race was never held and in 1911 the city again put the cup up for an ocean race to be held Labor Day of 1911 to become the permanent possession of the winner. The race was won by Hollis Burgess, Quincy Y.C. member, in his sloop "Marie I."

Burgess generously made the Q.Y.C. trustee of the cup which was to be placed in annual competition as a perpetual trophy. In 1968 the Q.Y.C. presented the trophy to the QBRWA for Race Week competition. This valuable trophy is to be presented to the annual winner and to be held until the succeeding Race Week.

The winner is presented a suitably engraved keeper trophy for his permanent possession.

A suitably engraved keeper trophy is to be awarded the winner for his permanent possession.

White Trophy: John J. White, QBRWA Past President 1983, continues to be one of the mainstays of QBRWA. Giving untold hours of support in every aspect of the association's activities. Jack White truly exemplifies the spirit of QBRWA. Given in honor of past president Jack White,the trophy was presented in 1990 by Jack and his family. It was not awarded in 1990 due to the cancellation of the Ocean Races where it will become one of the perpetual trophies awarded.

Frank Hendry Trophy: Fifty years separates Frank Hendry, QBRWA past president 1940, and his son Richard Hendry, QBRWA past president 1990. Many changes occurred within that time span, however, their mutual love for the sport of sailing never did.

Both father and son felt that yacht racing was the greatest pasttime one could become involved with. Going beyond participation in competition, they both have given unselfishly of their time and effort to promote sailing and the QBRWA.

The Hendry Trophy, given in honor of two generations of QBRWA presidents, was presented in 1990 by State Sen. Paul D. Harold, Quincy. It was not awarded in 1990 due to the cancellation of the Ocean Races where it will become one of the perpetual trophies awarded.

Legion Baseball

Morrisette Eliminated By New Bedford

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion baseball team's hopes of entering the state championship series at Milford were ended Monday night when New Bedford won the third and deciding game of the second round series, 9-6, eliminating defending state champion Morrisette.

Morrisette ended another successful season with a 17-4-3 record, after winning its fourth straight Zone 6 title with a 14-2-2 record.

Morrisette fell behind, 5-0, to New Bedford in the deciding game as starter Matt O'Toole lasted only two innings as New Bedford scored three runs in the second and two in the third. Pat Bryan pitched two innings and allowed two runs.

Morrisette scored four runs in the third to tie the score on two hit batters, a walk, Dave Reinhart's second double of the game and Jay Schnabel's sacrifice fly. Reinhart scored on a wild pitch.

New Bedford scored a run to take a 7-6 lead, and added two runs in the ninth for the victory.

Morrisette won the opening game of the series, 8-3, as Sean Donovan pitched five innings and picked up the win. He gave up six hits, struck out two and walked two. He finished the year with a 4-1-1 record.

Reinhart had a triple and single and three RBI, Robbie Kane had a triple and double and Serge Belcastro and Brian Hayes had singles.

The second game saw a well-pitched game by Mike Patch for naught as Morrisette, outhitting New Bedford, 11-6, left nine runners stranded. Patch finished the season with a 5-2 record. He allowed six hits, but two costly errors, a wild pitch and a passed ball hurt Morrisette.

Reinhart had a triple, double and single and three RBI, Kane two hits and Pat Shea, Schnabel, Hayes, Dan Duncan, Tom Malvesti and Patch singles.

In the opening series Morrisette, after the first game was called because of rain with the score 7-7, eliminated Needham, 5-0 and 3-0.

In the tie game Donovan, Duncan and Bryan pitched as errors and wild pitches accounted for most of the scoring. Trailing, 7-6, in the bottom of the ninth, Morrisette tied it on a dropped fly ball, a sacrifice and another error.

Malvesti had two hits and two RBI, Shea two hits and an RBI, Reinhart two hits including a triple and an RBI, Adam Calvert and Belcastro doubles and Hayes and Kane singles.

Morrisette received outstanding pitching in the next two games to eliminate Needham.

Patch pitched a two-hitter in the 5-0 win, striking out nine and walking only two.

Leading, 1-0, Morrisette scored four runs in the eighth inning as Belcastro and Reinhart singled, Schnabel sacrificed and Belcastro scored on Hayes' perfect squeeze bunt. Duncan singled and another run scored as Malvesti laid down another squeeze bunt.

Shea had two hits, Reinhart a double and single, Duncan two hits and Patch and Belcastro singles.

In the clincher O'Toole pitched five-hit for 8 1/3 innings to pick up its fifth win to go along with a save. He tired in the head and Bryan finished up to get a save.

Morrisette scored all three runs in the first on two walks, a fielders choice, Reinhart's double for two runs and the third run scored on Hayes' ground out.

"We had an outstanding year after losing our three power hitters from last year's state championship team," coach Dave Perdios said. "We made up for it with great defense, good pitching and speed. We will have a lot of players returning and should have another fine season next year."

Quincy Upsets Milton In Season Finale

The Quincy Legion baseball team recently ended its season with a 7-11 record by upsetting Milton, 6-5, which helped end Milton's hopes of making the state playoffs.

Terry Gaide pitched a complete game and left the tying run on third base by striking out the final batter. He also had two hits and drove in a run.

John Gladu drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a two-run double. Tom Nutley went 3-for-4 with an RBI and Chris McCulley went 2-for-2.

Gaide, Gladu, Nutley and McCulley have completed their Legion careers. Gaide is headed for Arizona State, Nutley for UMass/Dartmouth and Glaide for Worchester State.

"Things look bright for next year with almost everyone coming back," said coach Ed Spring. "Most of these kids have been starters for two years and should be ready. If we can fill a couple of spots, we should have a nice season."

Jennifer Starsiak On New England Soccer Team

Jennifer Starsiak, 13, of Quincy, was a member of the Massachusetts-Connecticut girls' under 14 soccer team which last week won the largest youth soccer tournament in the world, winning the Gothia Cup in Goteborg, Sweden.

Starsiak was one of seven Massachusetts girls on the squad, which emerged the champions from among a field of 38 teams.

The New England team edged USA Patriots of Colorado, 2-1, in the championship game at Gamia Ullevi Football Stadium.

"This was only the second time in the tournament's 19- year history that a U.S. team won a cup in the tournament," said coach Ed Gardiner. Nine years ago a boys' team won.

It was the first time two teams from the same country, besides Sweden, played in the final, which hosted about 20,000 athletes up to the age of 19.

The New England team had to win seven other games to make it to the final, including 1992 runnerup Hammarby of Stockholm. N.E. won that one, 2-1. It blanked the hometown team, Hebyaif, 4-0, in the semifinals.

The event will include a wine and cheese reception.

Police Urge Residents To Take Precautions After Two Seniors Attacked

colored car pull up.

Police said the jogger felt uncomfortable and turned to walk home when two young men got out of the car and approached him. One struck him across the forehead, knocking him to the ground. One of the men then went through his pockets while both punched and kicked him.

Police said the pair stole a set of house keys, the only item the man was carrying. He was not identified to protect him from retaliation.

Police are investigating whether Martin was involved in the second attack.

MacDonald said Coghlan was rushed to Quincy Hospital with a head injury and was released days later. He has no memory of the attack. MacDonald said the jogger was also taken to Quincy Hospital where he was treated and released.

Witnesses to both attacks have been instrumental in identifying suspects, according to MacDonald.

The two remaining suspects are both described as white, between 18 and 20 years old, about 5-foot-6 and 140 pounds.

MacDonald said police are investigating whether the beatings are connected with a similar crime April 4 near the Wollaston MBTA station. A 31-year-old Irish immigrant was severely beaten and robbed of $100 and his wallet by young men of similar descriptions.

SALVAGE OPERATION

The federal government has found it necessary to warn consumers away from so-called "salvaged" cars. These are vehicles that have been so damaged in accidents that insurance companies found the cost to repair them exceeded their value. After being labeled as "totalled," state laws ordinarily require that such automobiles be scrapped (although some may be retitled after being rebuilt and passing rigorous safety evaluations). In any case, seven states do not require totalled cars to be classified as salvage. They can be shipped to other states, rebuilt, retitled, and resold by unscrupulous dealers. These cars pose unsuspecting buyers with the likelihood of mechanical problems. Consumers are urged to enlist the aid of auto technicians in assessing a used car's condition before purchase.

HINT: A good auto technician can easily spot a car that has been crushed or rebuilt with parts from other cars.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO incited your inquiries about almost anything connected with the care of your car. Our highly skilled technicians never take any shortcuts and will do everything necessary to keep your car in safe, running condition. 3 Quincy Firms Bid For Lottery

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Less than a year after the city lost a bid to keep the state Department of Education in Quincy, three independent bidders are attempting to bring the Massachusetts State Lottery headquarters to sites within city limits.

The three, according to Roseanne Pawalec, a spokeswoman for the state Division of Capital Planning and Operations (DCPO), are as follows:

•James O'Hare, affiliated with the 1600 Crown Colony Drive Limited Partnership, who has proposed a 90,000 square foot site at 1600 Crown Colony Drive.

•Gregory Carey, affiliated with the Claremont Corporation at Batterymarch Park, who has proposed a 90,000 square foot site at Batterymarch Park, West Quincy.

•Neponset Landing Trust, 77 Federal Ave., which has proposed a 99,871 square foot bid at 2 Hancock St. in North Quincy near the Neponset River Bridge.

At press time it was unclear whether the proposals would require construction at any of the sites or if existing buildings would be utilized.

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday he was in complete support of any attempt to bring the Lottery to the city.

"It would bring people into the city," said Sheets. "It would hopefully create some construction jobs and would certainly help provide a better tax base. We will be sending a letter to the Lottery to make our case and will seriously recommend that the Lottery look at those bids."

Pawalec said that 12 communities have sent a total of 23 bids for the Lottery headquarters. Four bids have come from companies in Braintree, including two from The Flatley Company, owner of the current Lottery building, and bids have averaged from $9 to $13

Quincy 2000 To Ask 500 Residents:

What Kind Of Businesses Do You Want Downtown?

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The corporation charged with revitalizing Quincy Center will begin surveying approximately 500 Quincy homes this week to determine what types of retail businesses are popular with residents.

Charles D'Aprix, executive director of Quincy 2000, the city's public-private planning corporation, described the telephone poll as a "scientific sample" that will be done by "random digit-dialing" and will include residents throughout the city, not just those in or near Quincy Center.

"It's just one more component of an overall research package to determine what kinds of businesses we should be looking at," he said.

Quincy 2000's market retail analysis is being handled by Colman Levin Associates, a nationally-known retail analysis firm based in Washington, D.C., D'Aprix said. Quincy 2000, however, will conduct the actual telephone survey, he added.

D'Aprix said initial research done by examining responses to the 1993 Quincy city census in February showed that people would like to see greater variety among stores in Quincy Center, including a toy store, department store and more clothing and shoe stores.

Research also showed that there are qualities about Quincy Center that people like and others that people dislike, D'Aprix said. People are impressed by recent renovations to roads and lighting in the Center and also like the

Cedrone Gets Top Spot On School Committee Ballot

City Clerk Joseph Shea drew names in a lottery last Friday, setting up the ballot positions for candidates in the School Committee preliminary election Tuesday, Sept. 14.

Names of the nine candidates, as they will appear on the ballot, will be listed in this order:

Christine Cedrone, 99 South Walnut St.; Gregory Hanley, 32 Shed St.; JoAnn Bragg, 74 East Elm Ave.; John H. McDuff, Jr., 216 South St.; Toni Kabilian, 33 Hyde St.; John E. Spada, 88 Forbes Hill Rd.; Ronald Mariano, 57 Presidential Dr.; Ronald H. McCarthy, 72 Norton St.; and Sean L. Barry, 184 Marlboro St.

The preliminary election will pare the field from nine to six candidates. The top six qualifiers will seek one of three seats in the city's final election Tuesday, Nov. 2.

Mariano, the only incumbent in the race, will not be listed as a candidate for re-election on the preliminary ballot. "Past practice has been not to assign any notation concerning the candidates', just their addresses," said Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland.

Shea conducted the lottery in the Council Chambers of City Hall using an opaque plastic bottle and small numbered balls. Each candidate was assigned a number and the balls were placed in the plastic bottle.

After shaking the bottle, balls were removed one at a time. The first ball, and thus the candidate assigned to that number, received the top spot. The method continued until all the balls were removed from the bottle.

City Announces Flood-Prone Housing Retrofitting Program

During past major storms, several homes in Quincy had reported several feet of water as foundations, insulations, water pipes and flooring were damaged and heating systems, washers and driers, other appliances, rugs, and personal properties were destroyed.

Many residents lost many hours of productive time to do clean-up and undertake or arrange for home, mechanical system and appliance repairs. Some residents had to seek temporary shelters for weeks.

The City of Quincy is implementing several measures to moderate the impact of future coastal and riverine flooding. These measures include the construction or reconstruction in coastal areas of seawalls that are high enough and strong enough to withstand high storm tidal waves.

In addition, Mayor James Sheets announces the city is implementing, with funds from the Section 404 Hazard Mitigation Program and Quincy's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG), an assistance program to retrofit, floodproof or elevate residential properties that are prone to coastal and riverine/wetland flooding. The HMGP is jointly administered by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management (DEM), the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA), and the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

The City's Department of Planning and Community Development will provide overall program management services. The PCD's Office of Housing Rehabilitation will receive and process all applications and handle the design and construction phases. Quincy's Inspector of Buildings, the Plumbing Inspector, the Electrical Inspector and the Water/Sewer Department and the State's DEM will be involved in the project selection process.

The City expects to retrofit between 20 and 30 homes through this program.

Hazard mitigation is important because it "reduces or eliminates losses of life and property from natural disasters. After disasters, repairs and reconstruction are often completed in such a way as to simply restore damaged property to pre-disaster conditions. Such efforts expedite a return to normalcy.

However replication of pre-disaster conditions results in a cycle of damage, reconstruction, and repeated damage. Hazard mitigation is needed to ensure that such cycles are broken, that post-disaster repairs and reconstruction take place after damages are analyzed, and that sounder less vulnerable conditions are produced."

Eligible activities include: elevation or relocation of the heating system, electric panel, washers, driers, and hot water heaters; sealing of windows, doors and bulkheads in existing basements; replacing windows with a smaller vinyl clad model elevated above flood levels; construction of interior or exterior flood walls; construction of a new utility room outside the house; elevating residential structures; etc.

The City will receive $100,000 from the Hazard Mitigation Grant Program (HMGP). The HMGP will cover a maximum of 50% of the total project cost and will be a grant regardless of the income level of the applicant selected to be assisted. The maximum HMGP grant is $5,000 per unit or 50% of the total project cost.

The matching funds to the HMGP will either be homeowner's contributions or the City's Community Development Block Grant (CDBG). The City has reserved $60,000 of CDBG matching funds to help low and moderate income households.

•Low-income households will be eligible for a maximum CDBG grant of $5,000 or 50% of the total project cost, whichever is lower, and a deferred Zero per cent (0%) loan over $5,000.

•Households whose income exceeds the low-income limits but is within 5% of the low-income limits will be eligible for a 0% loan payable in 15 years or less.

•Moderate-income households will be eligible for CDBG funded 5% loan which will be payable within 15 years or less.

Over-income households selected for assistance will be required to put up 50% of the total project cost or more if the total project cost exceeds $10,000.

The minimum requirements for consideration under this program are: a) Residential property is in or adjacent to an A-Zone or V-zone (100 year flood plain) or near one of Quincy's rivers, brooks or wetland and have suffered repetitive losses in the last ten (10) years as a result of water and wind; for the over-income households, only properties with flood insurance and with

3 Local Firms Bid For Lottery

per square foot, she said.

Pawalec said that "within a couple of weeks," the list of bids will be shortened based on the criteria outlined in the original R.F.P. (request for proposals) from the Lottery. For instance, four of the bids came from communities outside of the Lottery's intended search area, which may disqualify them immediately, she said.

After the list is shortened, Lottery and DCPO officials will visit each of the remaining proposed sites. The site visits will take two or three months, Pawalec said, after which the Lottery and DCPO leasing office will each make recommendations to DCPO Commissioner Lark Jurev Palermo, who will make the final decision on the new headquarters site.

The Lottery announced last November that it had outgrown its 60,000 square foot Braintree headquarters on Rockdale St. Its lease on its offices there expires in January 1995.

Lottery officials have said the agency is happy with its current site but is willing to relocate if it can save money.

Sheets said that when he first heard the Lottery was considering relocation, he thought available space at Presidents Place in Quincy Center would be a good spot for the headquarters. He said he has since decided, however, that the site would be "better suited to a hotel."

Last year, Sheets spearheaded a drive to keep the Department of Education in Quincy Center. The department had been located at Quincy Center Plaza, and the mayor and other city officials proposed to relocate it a few blocks south on Hancock St.

However, the DPCO commissioner ruled in October that of nine bids submitted, one from the City of Malden provided the best combination of price and suitability to the agency's needs.

SWEATING IT OUT

Although an entire industry is built around the concept of keeping us cool and dry, sweat is literally a lifesaver, and dramatically so during the hottest months of the year. When water is released through the more than two million sweat glands that cover the human body, heat is released through evaporation as well. In warm weather, this process provides vital cooling, but it can also drain the body of as much as two or more quarts of liquid during an hour of strenuous exercise. lots of fluids, even more than you feel thirsty for, is an absolute must both before and after exercise. Not only does this replenish lost fluid, but it actually causes you to sweat more, thus cooling the body and preventing heat stroke.

P.S. "Sweating out a hangover" is based on myths. Alcohol is processed through the liver, not the sweat glands.

Drinking at least eight glasses of water each day flushes poisons from the body, helps clear the complexion, and in general contributes to a greater feeling of well-being. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Dr. Lisa Antonelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our new office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Sunbeams

By Henry Bosworth

Two Quincys And Brotherhood

(Mayor James Sheets was invited to be Sunbeams guest columnist this week and to personally tell of his experiences in flood ravaged Quincy, Ill. where he brought food and supplies from our Quincy.)

By JAMES SHEETS

Rain had begun to fall once again as I slowly turned the van onto 4th Avenue heading east away from Quincy, Illinois and back to Quincy, Massachusetts.

Over my left shoulder I could see the blinking orange danger lights with accompanying barricades preventing autos and pedestrians from venturing onto the Bayview Bridge connecting Quincy, Illinois with what once was West Quincy, Missouri.

My first view of the mighty flooding Mississippi had actually occurred just the day before when, with city escort, we had driven across this same bridge to the Missouri side where the roadway disappeared into 22 feet of swirling, muddy water.

Twenty-four hours later I would fly in an Illinois National Guard Gunship helicopter over West Quincy, Missouri. I could see it had actually become a massive lake, several miles wide by 17 miles long and 22 feet deep. Four thousand people had lost their homes and businesses.

Viewing that catastrophe I thought it would be much easier to measure the physical damage in dollars than to measure the human toll in heartache, misery, loss and suffering. Scars of the heart are always more difficult to heal than scars on the land.

Driving the van down Broadway off 4th Avenue, I quickly passed the little restaurant where, just three hours before, Tony Siciliano and I had lunch. I can't remember the name of the restaurant, nor do I remember what I ordered, but I will never forget the waitress telling us about a 78-year old woman recently served by her in the restaurant. The woman had confided to the waitress that her husband had died some years before and that she had continued living alone in their home. That is, until the flood.

Driven out by the raging waters, she had time only to take some clothing and her pocketbook. Her home, with all its furnishings and belongings, was gone. Tears had filled her eyes when she said, "at least she had good memories left and somehow she would make it." As I listened to her story I thought of how younger families have the strength and health to go on, but for this woman, facing the uncertainties of age, the burdens of life had just multiplied immensely. Yet, I knew from what she had said that the depth of water would never reach the height of her courage and spirit. Somehow she typified the attitude of the victims of the "Great Flood of 93."

Driving east out of Quincy, Illinois, I saw Broadway, the main thoroughfare, and I quickly reached Quincy's largest shopping mall. I smiled as I looked at the big sign, J.C. Penney. Yesterday, Monday, was the only full day I would spend in Quincy, Illinois and it was then that I had learned that the City Council wanted me to attend their meeting that evening. My decision to go to Illinois had been made at the last minute, and, in packing, I had taken only the clothing I needed to fight the river — my boots, my old dirty sneakers, two pairs of dungarees and several sport shirts. Fully aware I was representing the people back home in Quincy Mass. and that the Council meeting would be covered by the media, I decided to take several hours to prepare my remarks and go to the local mall to buy proper clothing.

However, most summer clothing had been picked over and the fall clothing was already out on the racks. Besides, they didn't have my size. I ended up with a nice new pair of white sneakers from J.C. Penney and that was it! I would address the City Council, with the major national media coverage, dressed in dungarees, sport shirt and nice new sneakers. However, much earlier in the day, I had concluded that what I would say was far more important that what I would wear.

The last landmark I viewed while driving out of Quincy, Illinois was the large Country Store Supermarket. This major chain of stores is owned by Richard Niemann, and it was here, only 40 hours earlier, Tony and I had arrived with our first trailer-load of food. Mr. Neimann had agreed to off-load the trucks and distribute the food from his warehouse.

In my mind's eye, I could still see 500 people - men, women and children - some crying, some cheering, all waving, all full of thanks-giving, all saying from their hearts "Thank you, Quincy, Massachusetts." I was told there were tears in Tony Siciliano's eyes. This scene will be with me all my life.

The rain continued to fall as I drove out of Quincy into the vast rich farmlands of Illinois. Shortly, I would cross the Sangamon River where Abraham Lincoln had grown to manhood and I would begin to think about America and the meaning of all I had experienced in the last week.

My mind went back to Quincy, Massachusetts, one week earlier, when Hank Bradley walked into my office at 7:15 in the morning and said he thought ewe should do something for the people of Quincy, Illinois. Without hesitation I said that if he and Tony Siciliano would lead the effort it would start immediately.

(Several days later Hank was rushed to the hospital with a possible heart attack. Good news reached us in Quincy, Illinois that Hank did not have a heart attack and that in a few days he would be back to work. I will always be sorry he did not have the opportunity to go to Quincy, Illinois. I will always appreciate the job done by Bob Hanna, who stepped in to take his place.)

As I continued to drive in the rain, through the corn fields of Illinois and Indiana, I knew that the history of the last few days would not be written by the flood itself, but by the people's response to it. There were the thousands of people who contributed bags of groceries and money. No one will ever know the sense of pride I felt as I stood at my office window and watched, as day after day and hour after hour, people dropped off bags of groceries and volunteers loaded those groceries into trucks.

No one will ever know the sense of pride I felt as we were greeted by 500 men, women and children in Quincy, Illinois. They blew car horns, flashed their

What You Buy Is What You Eat

Most grocery shopping is a habit - a familiar supermarket, down the usual aisles, recognizing labels.

These habits translate into eating patterns. According to Quincy Hospital's summer health letter, A Healthy Outlook, a change in shopping patterns can make it much easier to eat well.

Supermarkets themselves are doing a pretty good job. They have low-fat food which you can track down in a few steps:

Shop the edges. Supermarkets are safer around the edges than they are in the middle. You will find a more balanced, varied and high fiber diet if you stay with produce, dairy, meats and based goods usually found on the outside aisles. In the middle are the packages foods, many with added fats, low fiber and too much salt. Tread carefully in these aisles; keep you eyes on your list.

Avoid certain aisles. The junk food aisle is dangerous. Don't let these products into the house! If you must buy high-fat desserts, pay a little more per pound and buy them in tiny, prepackages servings. Better yet, pass up fatty desserts and reserve them for treats when you eat out.

Swivel slightly for lower fat alternatives. Grocers know that customers are looking for alternatives. All you have to do is reach for something else. When you reach for milk, reach for the two percent - then one, then nonfat.

Try garden variety. If you already eat a variety of fruits and vegetables (5-9 servings a day), you are doing very well for yourself. Good nutrition is rooted in variety and you'll improve your nutritional mix - and your interest in eating perhaps - with a broad range of produce on the table.

Choose bulky food. Eating heavy foods - pasty, beans, winter squash, potatoes and whole grains - can be satisfying to chew. They may not necessarily be low-calorie foods; but eat them slowly and you'll eat few calories overall.

About fat. Read the fine print. See the total calories in a serving. See the total fat (in grams) in a serving. Multiply that number by 10. Is that second number about a quarter of the first? If so, that' a food with an acceptable level of fat. If it's higher than a quarter, eat small portions or find a substitute.

Two basics. Eat before you go and your purchases will be driven less by craving and more by thought. Take a list and stick to it.

Follow a good plan at the store and you'll gain control over your eating, your looks and maybe your health.

Two Quincys: True Brotherhood

lights, cried, waved and simply shouted "Thank You." In both Quincys the actions were spontaneous and from the heart. In Quincy, Massachusetts the food and monetary contributions just kept coming. In Quincy, Illinois people had only 90 minute notification of our arrival. Yet, at 9:30 on Sunday evening over 500 would be there to greet us. Their thankfulness was as spontaneous as our giving.

What was it that bound together the people of two cities separated by 1,200 miles? What was I doing this rainy Tuesday afternoon driving through the rich, wet heartland of America. The media had often asked, "Why are the people of Quincy, Massachusetts doing this?" I had tried to answer this question in my few brief comments to the Quincy, Illinois City Council. At first the answer seemed simple. Two cities sharing the same name could share this difficult hour together.

However, that answer did not capture the true meaning of the hour and I went on to tell the Council that there was a spiritual essence in this nation which binds us together regardless of our differences.

Perhaps the linch-pin was Washington, Jefferson and our common history. Perhaps it was Valley Forge, Gettysburg, Belleau Woods, Iwo Jima or the rice paddies of Vietnam — a common price paid by all.

I had told the Council that perhaps it was simply that eternal knowledge deep inside each of us, best described by Katherine Lee Bates, 100 years ago, this past July, when she wrote that marvelous song, "America, the Beautiful." She wrote, "God shed His grace on thee and crown thy good with brotherhood." The essence which binds us together is brotherhood. We need not know each other to care about each other., We need not touch each other to feel each others pain. Our paths in life need not cross again to know we walk the same way.

In these difficult days for Quincy, Illinois, our two cities both had been blessed to crown America with our brotherhood for all people to see. There is no other answer to why I was there.

Deep in thought about the appropriateness of my words, I had failed to realize that the rain had stopped and the sun was breaking though the clouds.

Defense Workers' Trailer Camp Is Opposed

Aug. 12-18, 1941 52 Years Ago

Kenneth J. Kelley, secretary of the Quincy Labor Union, moved to block a proposed auto trailer camp on Quincy Ave., East Braintree, about a half mile from the Fore River Shipyard.

The concept of the camp was designed to accommodate defense workers and their families but Kelley denounced the idea as a "menace to public health and civic pride."

The labor leader suggested that a better idea would be the establishment of "a housing authority in this city as the first step toward securing a low cost defense housing project for Quincy."

Any housing constructed by such an authority, he said, would also be "suitable for post-war occupancy."

BETTER TRANSPORT SOUGHT

The Quincy Defense Council adopted a resolution asking for better local bus, trolley and rail service for defense workers in an effort to cut gasoline usage and possibly head off gas rationing.

The Council recommended that a survey be taken of public transportation "with a view to rearranging their schedules for the better accommodation of industrial employees who now drive to and from their plants and offices."

MORE MONEY FOR DUMP

Public Works Commissioner Ezekiel C. Sargent told the City Council that rubbish disposal through the current dump system is less costly than an incinerator and he asked for additional funds to perfect it.

Sargent said it would cost the city some $25,000 a year while he was getting only $6,500 a year to maintain the city dumps. He figured $15,000 a year would do the job much better.

Chocolate 'Whacky' Cake

While my husband and I are on an exercise kick and are walking about 10 miles a week, we sometimes meet our favorite cousins, Betty and Dan. We discuss everything from how to bake a good lasagne that won't fall apart, to a new recipe we tried over the weekend.

And so it was last week when they were raving over a new chocolate cake recipe that had no eggs and milk. Needless to say when I heard that I became twice as interested. They brought several pieces of this cake for us to taste and the next day they brought me the recipe. It's called Whacky Cake, but believe me, there's nothing whacky about this dessert. It is so moist that it's hard to believe there are no dairy products in it.

Betty and Dan's Whacky Cake
3 cups flour
6 tablespoons dark cocoa
1 teaspoon of salt
2 cups water
2 teaspoons baking soda
2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons white vinegar
3/4 cup vegetable oil
2 teaspoons vanilla

Combine all ingredients and mix until well blended. Pour into ungreased bundt pan and bake for 50 minutes at a 350 degree oven.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Cahill Candidate For 4th Council Term

Councillor-at-Large Timothy Cahill announces his candidacy for re-election to the Quincy City Council.

Cahill, who was first elected to the council in 1987, is seeking his fourth consecutive term. He has twice topped the ballot among at-large candidates, both in 1989 and in 1991.

He serves as chairman of the council's Finance and Transportation Committees and has also served on the Downtown Development and Tourism Committees.

"One of my main concerns is that the city keeps its fiscal responsibility to the residents," said Cahill. "The council just cut over $300,000 from the (FY94 municipal) budget (submitted by Mayor James Sheets), and I think we've done that.

TIM CAHILL

"I want to make sure that we continue to watch expenditures. The tendency today is to spend it all now without saving anything for a rainy day."

Cahill added that he will continue to fight for consolidation in the School Department and other city departments "so that we can allocate resources better than we're doing now." He also said he wants the City Council to continue to work on the local level to bring awareness to the state government of the plight of MWRA water and sewer rate payers.

Cahill and his wife, Tina, reside at 51 Grenwold Rd. with their four daughters: Makena, 9; Nicole, 6; Devin, 4 and Kendra, 1.

Carol Rizzo Chairman Of Benefit Walk

Quincy resident Carol Rizzo has been appointed to chair local efforts to recruit walkers for Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, a five-mile fundraising walk in Boston to benefit the American Cancer Society on Sunday, Sept. 26.

More than 5,000 walkers are expected to raise a half million dollars to fund breast cancer research and early detection. The walk begins at 11 a.m. at the Hatch Shell on the Charles River Esplanade; registration starts at 10 a.m.

As co-chairperson of Making Strides Against Breast Cancer for the American Cancer Society's South Shore Unit, Rizzo will work with Janice Weitbrechat of Weymouth to put together a team of walkers from the community. Funds will support programs of breast cancer research and education, outreach programs to bring free mammograms to low-income and uninsured women, patient advocacy, and the Society's toll-free telephone information service.

To obtain walking papers for Making Strides Against Breast Cancer, call the American Cancer Society toll-free at 1-800-952-7430.

Twenty-one projects representing the supervised playgrounds will be on display and are eligible to be voted on by the public. The city champion is the top vote getter in the two days of voting. Local merchants have donated awards for the winning entries.

LaRaia Candidate For Councillor-At-Large

JOSEPH LaRAIA

Councillor-at-Large Joseph J. LaRaia recently announced his candidacy for re-election at a fundraiser at G.J. Coddington's in Quincy Center among supporters, committee members and invited public officials.

LaRaia has been involved in Quincy politics in the capacity of Ward 2 councillor, councillor-at-large, council president, chairman of the School Committee and mayor.

LaRaia also presides over the Quincy-South Shore Cultural Commission which produces the Summerfest Concert Program. The concerts, which are in their 11th year, are held weekly in the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre, admission free.

The open air theatre was begun during LaRaia's administration to promote the arts in the city and finally completed in 1984 with the support of many volunteers under his leadership. The theatre now hosts outdoor conferences, plays, cultural displays and recreational programs.

Under his administration as mayor, an aggressive design for Quincy Center was introduced to revitalize the shopping area. Several of those ideas are currently being pursued by the Sheets administration and Quincy 2000 Corporation. They include the development of the municipal parking area across from the Quincy District Court House and the Crosstown artery linking Burgin Parkway with the Center. A planning study was implemented to enhance the appearance of the Norfolk Downs Business District.

LaRaia presided as mayor over several major public construction projects in the city and several community action programs throughout the city. He authorized construction of the North Quincy High School addition, Merrymount School addition and the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre. His administration secured the federal funds to build the New City Hall addition and funding for the planning of the Manet Health Center in Houghs Neck. The Atlantic Community Center was opened during his first year in office.

In addressing the issues facing Quincy taxpayers, he cited the water-sewer fees as the biggest threat to the quality of life of its citizens.

"We must continue to monitor the daily actions of the MWRA if we are able to maintain accountability with that Authority," said LaRaia, who credited the recent cutbacks in harbor cleanup projects to widespread public indignation over the soaring rates.

The recent proposals to build supermarkets in the north end of the city and Home Quarters in West Quincy face rigid tests of traffic and density limitations, LaRaia noted.

"I will be guided by public response to these proposals," he said.

Parks and recreational areas continue to require additional employees now in order to maintain them at satisfactory levels of safety and aesthetic appeal, LaRaia said, adding that he plans to support all efforts aggressively to achieve this goal.

Quincy Hospital remains a public facility and represents a large investment of tax dollars, he said. Although the hospital is a great asset to the city and one that evolved into a state-of-the-art health care facility, LaRaia said, a new national program will impact all health care facilities and will require focused attention to prevent serious financial problems.

LaRaia said the best prospects for increasing financial resources is the retail district and the vast area of the Fore River Shipyard. This area must be utilized to the city's advantage and additional tax revenue realized, he said.

In private life, LaRaia owns and operates his own real estate business in the city and resides at 38 Russell Park with his wife Louise, a registered nurse employed as a nurse manager at the Rice Eventide Home in Quincy. They are parents of two daughters, Lisa and Robyn, and son Joe.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A person has to know what he should remember and what he should forget. We need to remember the wise lessons life has taught us...We also need to retain memories of experiences and great joys that have inspired us. But we also have to learn to forget the hurts and resentments, and forget the sting of failure, the bitterness of disappointment. Couldn't it be said that if you don't learn to forget, life may forget you?

We like what Norman Vincent Peale says about forgetting: "First there must be an act of will. Realize that some memories are not good for you. Start by telling yourself, "I will forget these things." It may be that after making a positive decision of this kind you will find yourself involuntarily thinking the same negative thought again. In that case simply continue to affirm your determination to forget and in time the memory will fade or at least lose its potency ... The second element in purposeful forgetting is to fill the mind with more positive matters. If the mind is not occupied with something constructive the banished negative thoughts are bound to come traipsing back. To forget the past busy yourself with the present and future."

To live a happy and successful life practice the art of forgetting...

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

$1,500 Raised For MDA

Police, News Media Win Koch Doubleheader

By BRYAN CONNOLLY

Nearly two hundred spectators were on hand last Thursday night to watch the sixth annual Dick Koch Memorial MDA Softball Doubleheader at Adams Field which featured teams representing the Quincy Police Department, the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department, the Quincy News Media and Quincy City Officials.

The charitable event, founded in 1977 by the late Richard Koch Sr., raised $1,500 for MDA, bringing the 17-year total to $24,700.

In the opener, the Quincy Police Department rallied from an early six run deficit to defeat the Norfolk County Sheriff's Department 15-10. In the nightcap, the Media downed the City Officials, 20-13, for their second straight series victory.

In the first game, the Sheriff's team built an 8-2 victory after two innings. However, the Police refused to quit and chipped away at the margin, eventually pulling out on top in their last at bat.

Down 8-2, the Police began their comeback with two runs in the top of the fifth. Bruce Tobin doubled and Gerard O'Rourke knocked him in with a deep fly down the right field line for a triple. O'Rourke scored on a sacrifice fly by Paul Preziosi to cut the lead to 8-4.

The Sheriff's scored an apparent insurance run in the bottom half of the fifth when David Britt came home on a Kevin Campbell sacrifice fly for a 9-4 advantage.

The Police managed to chip another run off the Sheriff's lead in the sixth but still faced a four-run deficit in the seventh and final inning.

With one out and the bases loaded, Patrolman Brian Tobin laced a ground ball up the middle, scoring two runs. Bill Shea loaded the bases again with a single and Bill Brabazon followed with a line drive single to knock in two runs and tie the game 9-9. Shea came around to score on a Jim Buhl grounder to first and Barry DeFranco singled to center to send home Brabazon with the game-winning run.

The rallying Police squad added four more runs before closing out their ten-run inning with a 15-9 lead. The shocked Sheriff's team could only muster one run in the bottom of the inning, falling to the QPD team 15-10.

In the nightcap, the News Media All-Stars walloped the Quincy City Officials 20-13 under the bright lights of majestic Adams Field. With their second consecutive victory in the event, the Media hold a 9-8 advantage in the over-all series.

The News Media were represented by Ed Fiddler, Mike Robinson, Steve Farquhar and Darren Herlihy of Quincy Continental Cablevision; Craig Peterson of WJDA; Jay Weaver, Dennis Tatz, and Nat Newell of The Patriot Ledger; and Mike Whalen, Mark Crosby, and Bob Bosworth of The Quincy Sun.

The City Officials were represented by Mayor James Sheets, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch, City Councillors Tim Cahill, Mike Cheney, Larry Chretien, Ted DeCristofaro, Tom Fabrizio, Peter Kolson, Joe LaRaia, and Chuck Phelan, State Representatives Michael Bellotti and Ron Mariano, aide to representative Bellotti Chris Bell, Park Director Ray Cattaneo, Sealer of Weights and Measures Mike Shaheen, City Solicitor Jim Timmons, Council on Aging member Patricia Leary, Shellfish Constable Andy Ayer, Veteran's Agent Bob LaFleur, Housing Authority member Bill Cochrane, City Treasurer Dana Childs, and Planning Director Richard Meade.

In the first inning, the Media emerged with a 5-2 lead. The city officials pecked away in the second, plating six men for an 8-5 lead. Driving in runs were Timmons (2-run triple), Phelan (2-run single) and Chretien and Kolson (1-run singles).

Keeping the Officials scoreless, the Media pushed across one run in the third and another four in the fourth to take a 10-8

SUN SPORTS

Ideal Weather, Close Competition QBRW Highlights

Carleton, Willy, Lammers Standouts

By TOM SULLIVAN

The 56th edition of Quincy Bay Race Week was blessed with fine weather all week with close competition in most races.

"It was a wonderful week and the weatherman cooperated fully," said Race Week president Charles Hoffman, past commodore of the Metropolitan Y.C. "We had some great races with outstanding competition and the kids had a really great time. We didn't have to cancel a single race.

"I was happy to see a boat from my club, Metropolitan, have the best decorated boat in the Marine Parade."

Tinker Toy, captained by Terry McHale and Ellen Ginsburg, was voted the best decorated boat.

As usual Harry Carleton of Squantum in Hustler Class and Jack Willy of Wessagussett in the Laser Class dominated in their respective races.

Carleton, 72, competed in the first Race Week in 1938 as a seven-year-old and last week added another trophy to his long list.

"I've had my share of wins and losses and I still enjoy it," he said. "I just love to sail and there are so many things to contend with--winds, tides and people. It's a great sport and we have a lot of fun out there."

Willy and his family have dominated the Laser Class for some time and this year Jack was again the winner with his daughter Janene third, son John fifth, and sister Jean eighth.

Willy held his second annual clinic for juniors and it was well-attended.

Willy, Bill Brangiforte of Hingham, who finished second to Willy, and Willy's daughter Janene will compete in the Sunfish World Championships in the Virgin Islands next month.

Brendan Lammers, 16, of Wessagussett, who swept the five Novice Laser races, singled out the work of Willy. "He took time out to work with us and he's the biggest reason for my success."

Lammers was chased by Scott Boussey of Weymouth all week as Boussey finished second overall.

Lammers also said he owes a lot to his sailing instructors, Dan Hall, Betsie Doyle, Stacy Pierce and Joe Hanrahan.

The annual Marine Parade was held Sunday with many decorated boats again taking part.

The annual Gala-Rendezvous Night was held Saturday at Town River with dancing, prizes and hot and cold buffet.

The Awards Night was held at Squantum following the last races of the week.

Trophies were presented to the winners of all inside line, outside line and ocean races.

DiMattia, Grieco, McGilvary Ocean Winners

The ocean racing last Saturday and Sunday went off without a hitch with perfect weather.

In the A fleet, competing for the Boston-Bermuda Cup, Ralph DiMattia won aboard Shamrock, followed by Bob Benson on Fire Drill, and Billy Hicks on Lightning.

In the B fleet Mario Grieco won the White Cup aboard Scheherazade with Bill Collins' Escapade second and Ken Pilczak, aboard Slapstick, third.

The non-spinnaker winner was Don McGilvray of Quincy aboard Silverfox, followed by Bill McLearn of Hull second aboard High V and Hull's Vin Formisano third aboard Julie Ann.

11-year-old All-Stars Advance In Tournament

Quincy's Junior League 11-year-old all-stars advanced in the West Roxbury Park League tournament by defeating Brockton East, 4-3, in eight innings and Dedham, 12-8.

The team will play again Saturday night.

The Brockton East game was tied, 3-3, going into the eighth with Mike Welch, Adam Goodrich and Frank Curreri having scored for Quincy.

Curreri led off the eighth with a walk, stole second and went to third on an overthrow. Joe Tower dropped a single into left field to drive in the winning run.

Mike Carloni, Andrew Currie and Jody Bravo pitched well for Quincy. Paul Markarian, Welch and Carloni led the offense.

Kiva Tupe had Quincy's big hit against Dedham with a three-run homer in the fourth inning. Carloni started the inning with a single, Curreri singled, Currie doubled and Steve Rochon walked to set up Kiva's blast.

Also hitting for Quincy were Welch, who went 2-for-4; Carloni, 3-for-4, Curreri, 3-for-3, Brian Nolan, Tower, Rochon, and Bravo, all with singles.

Goodrich and Carloni combined for the victory and Markarian and Brian Kalil played strong defense. Tupe was voted the game's MVP.

12-Year-Old Quincy All-Stars Fourth In Milford Tourney

Quincy's Junior Baseball League 12-year-old all-stars placed fourth in the 20-team Milford Invitational Tournament, finishing with a 4-2 record.

Quincy was eliminated in the Norwood Tournament, losing both of its games.

The team has entered the Kingston tournament and will play its first game Saturday at 9 a.m.

In the Milford Tournament Quincy blanked Norwood Americans, 2-0, with Chris Bregoli pitching a two-hitter and striking out 10.

Norwood's Joe Thornton was equally impressive, holding Quincy hitless through four innings. However, in the fifth, with two outs, Shawn Manning singled and Billy Walker tripled to right. He scored on an overthrow. Bregoli had the only other Quincy hit. Walker was named the game's MVP.

Quincy then was eliminated as it lost to Middleboro for the second time, 5-3.

Middleboro took a 5-0 lead as pitcher Randy Feetham had early inning jitters.

Feetham had the only Quincy hit through the first three innings.

Bregoli got Quincy on the board by hitting his second home run of the tournament. Mike Powers then singled and Brian Doyle's fly ball to left hit a wire and fell for a triple. Jose Diaz brought Doyle in with a sacrifice fly. Feetham was named the MVP as he had seven strikeouts and pitched no-hit ball over the final three innings.

Bregoli was named to the all-tournament team. He pitched two shutouts and was credited with four wins. In 18 innings he gave up no runs, allowed only four hits and struck out 36.

In the Norwood tournament Quincy lost twice to Braintree Americans and was eliminated.

Quincy managed only a fifth inning single by Diaz in bowing, 14-0, in the first game. Manning pitched well for Quincy, holding Braintree to three hits and no runs in three innings.

Quincy fell behind, 5-0, in the second game, losing, 6-5. It threatened in the second as Diaz doubled and Walker walked. But the next three batters went down.

In the third Feetham walked and Tom Daley singled. Kevin Walsh doubled in two runs.

After Braintree added a run in the fourth, Quincy scored three in the fifth. Daley reached on an error, Walsh walked and Doyle singled in a run. Powers drove in two with another single. Diaz walked and Matt Kisiel singled. However, Quincy left the bases loaded.

Powers and Daley pitched well in relief. Walsh was named Quincy's MVP of the series.

lead. Newell had the key hit in the fourth, a two-run double off the extended glove of Phelan at shortstop to tie the game. Fiddler doubled and Whalen singled to drive in the other runs.

Although the next four innings featured no scoring, they did display a few defensive gems, most notably the outstanding diving catch by Cahill of Bosworth's rocket to left field. Ironically, Cahill was wearing Bosworth's glove.

The game was locked at 10-8 until the eighth inning when the Media broke it open with a barrage of hits in a seven run attack.

Weaver and Robinson each hit RBI singles and Bosworth followed with a fielder's choice.. Farquhar was then walked intentionally to load the bases for Newell, who smacked a base-clearing triple to right field. Fiddler knocked in Newell for the Media's sixteenth run and Whalen concluded the offensive surge with an RBI single that squeezed between the first and second baseman to set the lead at 17-8.

Cahill batted in the ninth run for the City Officials in bottom of the eighth with a bloop single that landed on the left field line and sent home Bell.

The Media added three insurance runs in the top of the ninth to take a 20-9 lead. Robinson doubled home Peterson with a double down the left field line. Bosworth followed Robinson with a home run to deep right field that ended the Media scoring.

The Quincy City Officials tried to mount a last chance come back in the bottom of the ninth. Sheets reached first base with a ground ball single that snuck past the third baseman and into left field. After Kolson's fly out to left center, Shaheen singled to put men on first and second. Mariano, who was pinch-running for Sheets, came around to score on Cochrane's double to right. Phelan cut the lead to 20-12 with a two run single and Bell wrapped up the scoring with an RBI single to center scoring Phelan and leaving the score at 20-13.

Fiddler, who pitched seven strong innings in relief, got the win for the Media.

City clerk Joseph Shea, who managed the Quincy City Officials, characterized the loss as "disappointing."

"It's always a good event," he said, "and we'll beat'em next year."

"It's a fun event," said Koch, who co-chairs the charity games with the editor of The Quincy Sun, Bob Bosworth. "It's healthy for the news media and the elected officials to get together in an informal way."

Bosworth added, "The bottom line is not the score but the money we raise for MDA. Everyone who is a part of the event enjoys it because it's a lot of fun."

GENTLEMEN, RESTART YOUR ENGINES

Car engines that either will not start or require excess cranking to get them started are among the most prevalent of all car problems. Another particularly perplexing starting problem is the hot-start problem. This occurs when the engine starts promptly when first cold, but refuses to restart after being driven for a while and then parked for an hour or less. In most cases, the culprit is heat, which may either adversely effect the fuel delivery or the ignition system. The first course of action for fuel injected cars that balk at restarting when warm is to try a different brand of gasoline. If that does not correct the problem, the auto technician can begin to solve it by conducting a fuel system pressure test.

HINT: Vaporized fuel in the fuel lines on hot days may also prevent an engine from restarting.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. When you simply want us to check your engine or to analyze your brakes with our Hunter computerized brake analyzer, our professional technicians have the ability and necessary skills to handle it. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) we do not charge for this analysis. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Bragg Helps Paint Quincy High Gym

School Committee candidate JoAnn Bragg took an evening off from her campaign schedule to help the Quincy High School Coaches Association and Friend For A Better Quincy High paint the school gymnasium.

The painting needed to be done before the gym floor gets refinished. The project will be completed in time for the opening of school in September.

The painting by the Coaches Association and Friends for a Better Quincy High is the first project of the Quincy Public School Adopt a Project Program. This program allow volunteer groups to identify school improvement/beautificatio n projects. The School Department then provides the necessary funds for materials, while the volunteer groups provide the elbow grease.

"I was pleased to demonstrate my support for their efforts by helping with the painting," Bragg said. The Adopt A Project Program is a tremendous opportunity for both the school system and our neighborhoods. Projects like this help the schools with physical plant improvement that could not otherwise be totally funded under the current fiscal climate. These projects also help neighborhoods have a direct impact on the schools and further foster school/community relations. The projects saves tax payers money while improving schools."

Joseph Sheffer, Program Coordinator, John Franceschini, Coaches Association President, Mike Draicchio, President of Friends for a Better Quincy High and Chris Barrett, Vice President of the PTO, helped organize the volunteers.

The volunteers worked with Jim Wilson, Director of Plant Facilities, to secure the necessary school approvals. Mr. Wilson also helped to ensure quality of supplies and to schedule the work. The Adopt A Project Program has the full backing of the School Committee, the School Department and the School Maintenance Staff.

Bragg urges other volunteers groups to come forward with project proposals.

"This is such a beneficial program that we need a real promotional effort to get more groups involved which will help to solidify school-community relations," she said. "As a school committee member it would be a priority of mine to promote the Adopt A Project Program and other similar efforts such as the DPW Beautification Program. I would encourage other volunteer groups to participate."

The coalition of elders and community leaders in Quincy includes Buckley, M. b) Applicants should have submitted a complete application package by the final submission date (August 16, 1993).

c) The applicant must have no unpaid property taxes.

The selection of projects will be based on the budget indicated above, our goal of assisting as many eligible applicants as possible and the relative costs and benefits of retrofitting their residential properties. Since funds are limited, very expensive actions will not be given priority.

The practicability and relative risk (or expected life or chances of survival from another storm or flooding) of any proposed action will be considered. There will be no allocation by neighborhood and applications will be evaluated on their own merits.

Applications will be received by the City until Aug. 16 at 4 p.m. Notification of awards will be made in early September. Construction of most projects is expected to be completed by November, 1993.

QCBPA President Speaks At Beechwood

George White, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA), addressed about 30 elders at Beechwood Community Life Center's recent monthly Current Events Breakfast.

Rep. Michael Bellotti, who attended the breakfast, announced that he will visit Beechwood on the first Wednesday of each month from 8 to 10 a.m. to listen to constituents' concerns and answer questions.

Quincy 2000 To Survey Residents About Downtown Businesses

area's "infrastructure and convenience," he said. D'Aprix added that "too many parking meters" (which have since been removed) as well as "lack of retail mix" are the two most common complaints.

D'Aprix said that Quincy 2000 plans to send mailings to existing retail businesses in the Center "to find out what we're doing right for them and what we're doing wrong," as well as mail surveys for employees of other merchants to determine what kinds of businesses they would like to see brought to the city.

He added that he hopes all survey and polling data, including that are obtained by reaching out to other communities, can be coordinated by mid-September.

"We're fast-tracking this because of the immediacy of the need," said D'Aprix.

Mayor James Sheets said the "extensive" survey will "give us an idea of what people need, what people want and what direction to go in terms of retail."

In addition, the mayor said the survey will supply marketing data to potential retailers. That data should show retailers if a market exists for their business in Quincy. In addition, it will allow Quincy 2000 to ignore businesses that residents apparently do not want.

"We don't want to spend time getting a retailer who won't fit the mix," Sheets said. "We will go armed with details that they marketing people want.

"It you have what they need, they (the shoppers) will come, particularly if you create a clean environment."

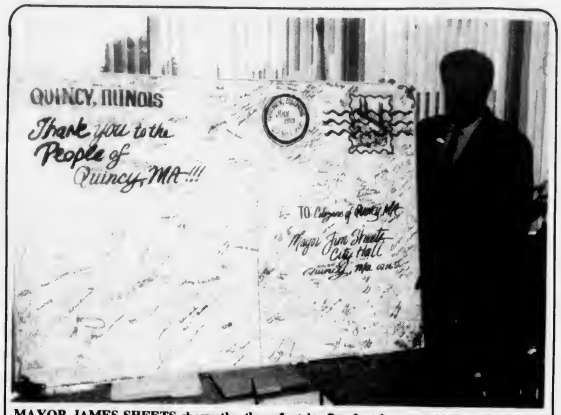
VOL. 25 No. 48 Thursday, August 19, 1993 30¢



MAYOR JAMES SHEETS shows the three-foot by five-foot homemade postcard mailed from the citizens of Quincy, Ill. to citizens in Quincy, Mass. The card, signed by approximately 500 to 600 Quincy, Ill. residents, expresses that city's tremendous thanks to those who contributed to the "Quincy to Quincy" flood relief assistance drive. The postcard is on display at the Thomas Crane Public Library for two weeks.

500-600 Citizens Sign Postcard

A Big Thank You From Quincy, Ill.

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The large cardboard box arrived at the mayor's office Friday without a letter or follow-up phone call.

Only the return address "Residents of Quincy, Ill." written in the upper left hand corner gave any indication of its origination.

Once opened, however, the package mailed to "Mayor James Sheets and the residents of Quincy, Mass." didn't need further explanation. The message of "Thank You to the People of Quincy, MA" resounded sincerely and clearly.

Inside the box was an oversized homemade postcard measuring three-feet by five-feet mailed by some of the many Quincy, Ill. residents who were touched and relieved by the generosity expressed by the residents of Quincy, Mass. during last month's "Quincy to Quincy" flood assistance drive. Some 500 to 600 residents signed the card, including Mayor Chuck Scholz, former Mayor Verne Hagstrone and Richard Niemann Sr., owner of the Country Markets store chain in Quincy, Ill. and West Quincy, Mo.

Scholz, who presented Sheets and the citizens of Quincy the key to Quincy, Ill. during the mayor's relief trip last month, wrote, "Thanks for your help in the Great Flood of '93. We'll never forget it."

Hagstrone, who Sheets had me t while he was in office during a U.S. Conference of Mayors several years ago, added, "Thanks a lot" followed by three exclamation marks.

Most simply signed their names, others offered brief words of thanks. One resident, realizing the "sister cities" have different pronunciations, wrote, "Thanks Quinzee from Quincee."

The card also contains a few personal thank yous to Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano, who accompanied Sheets on the truck trip which delivered more than 200,000 pounds of food, water and other essentials to the residents of Quincy, Ill. in July. While Sheets returned after a few days to tend to business at home, Siciliano stayed in Quincy, Ill. for a week, helping in whatever capacity he could.

A letter did not accompany the card, leaving local officials to wonder who was responsible for arranging and mailing the card. Sheets said the card was probably placed in one of Niemann's Country Market stores in Quincy, Ill. His store in West Quincy, Mo. was wiped out by the swollen Mississippi.

The white card was signed with a black pen. In the upper right hand corner is a beautiful hand-drawn postage stamp featuring the Bay Bridge which connected Quincy, Ill. to West Quincy, Mo. until the flood destroyed Highway 24 in West Quincy and rendered the suspension bridge practically useless until the water recedes.

In the stamp's lower left hand corner is a picture of a dogwood flower, the Illinois state flower.

Sheets said he was moved by the gesture. Through all the hardship and relief effort the mayor believes the bond between Quincy, Ill. and Quincy, Mass. will grow closer and stronger.

"I think it's a marvelous gesture on their part. My judgement is that out of this will come some sort of working relationship between Quincy, Mass. and Quincy, Illinois.

"I don't know what form it will take but my guess is something will come out of it. I see an expanded relationship from this point on."

Sheets said officials from Quincy, Ill., including Scholz and some city councillors, have indicated they will attend the opening of the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy Point next spring.

The mayor said the "working relationship" may also include a high school exchange program as well as a basketball

Navy Clears Way For Museum To Receive USS Salem

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The effort to bring the U.S.S. Salem home and make the Quincy-built heavy cruiser the centerpiece of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy Point has received a major boost from the U.S. Navy.

Representatives from Navy Sea Systems Command reinforced the Navy's support of the museum's effort to bring the Salem home perhaps as early as next month after visiting the proposed location of the USNSM at the Fore River shipyard Friday.

The site inspection Aug. 13 was one of the requirements established by the Navy Sea Systems Command before consideration can be given for the release of the Salem to the museum.

"We were informed in early August that the Navy was interested in expediting the removal of the ship from the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard because of a shortage of pier space at that facility," said William MacMullen, the museum's executive director.

"The inspection of the site, including a general tour of the shipyard and a review of the building and waterside improvements, is a key element to show the Navy that the USNSM has a site that will be appropriate and very visible for public display," MacMullen said.

Visiting the site were Captain David Thomas, director of Congressional and Public Affairs, and Bill Scott, director of Congressional Affairs at the Naval Sea Systems Command. Captain Thomas and Scott oversee the ship donation program for the Navy.

MacMullen and a group of museum benefactors brought the Navy officials from Logan Airport to the proposed museum location by boat. "It's a lot different perspective from the water than it is driving to the museum," MacMullen said.

Once at the site, MacMullen led Thomas and Scott on a tour of the shipyard area, including where the Salem will by docked. They also surveyed the surrounding area from the roof of the museum's main building.

Both Thomas and Scott said they were impressed with the extent of the planning of the USNSM volunteers in preparation for the arrival of the Salem.

"We were pleased with the location of the Quincy shipyard and believe it will offer the general public an ideal site once the museum and waterside improvements are completed," Scott said. "This is a very visible and impressive museum site, especially with its proximity to Route 3A."

A meeting to address pending environmental concerns is planned for the end of August between the

Council Indicates Quincy College Plan Approval

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A final decision on the future governance of Quincy College will have to wait at least another month.

Despite an informal vote supporting the issue of establishing a board of trustees as the new governing body of the college, the matter was put back in committee at Monday night's meeting of the City Council Education Committee.

Education Committee Chairman Thomas Fabrizio said he hoped to receive a positive recommendation from the council committee to send to the School Committee for discussion at its meeting last night (Wednesday). The City Council as a whole, he said, would then discuss the matter at its Sept. 6 meeting after the School Committee voiced its opinions on the issue.

The plan to establish such a board as the college's new governing body requires City Council approval and the signature of Mayor James Sheets before it is submitted to the state legislature in the form of a home rule petition.

School Committee member Linda Stice, however, told the Education Committee that she planned to recommend that the School Committee hold a special meeting regarding the college governance Sept. 15, a date which falls between the School Committee's two regular September meetings.

Stice said that although the matter was on the agenda for last night's School Committee meeting, she wanted a special meeting held so that the committee could spend devote more time to the issue. She added that she felt Sheets, who serves as chairman of the School Committee, should be present when the issue is discussed.

Sheets is out of town this week and was unable to attend last night's School Committee meeting or make any comment for this story.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, after listening to Stice, suggested that the matter be tabled. The Education Committee voted 6-3 to do so, as Fabrizio, Councillor Timothy Cahill, and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson felt that a positive recommendation could be made despite the delay from the School Committee.

"The School Committee has no vote on this, legally," said Cahill. "This is a home rule petition. They (School Committee) sat on the (proposed governance) report, which is no slight to them, because they have a school system to run."

Tourism Assn.-Quincy 2000 Merger Meeting Tonight

The Quincy Tourism Association will meet tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. in the second floor conference room at Quincy City Hall.

The meeting is being called to vote on a proposal to merge the Quincy Tourism Association with Quincy 2000. Representatives of Quincy 2000 will be present to address the board.

Quincy Tourism has successfully been getting local people involved with Quincy's heritage for 10 years. Its goal has been to promote the tourism industry in Quincy by calling attention to the city's wealth of historic attractions.

Quincy 2000 is a public-private partnership formed by local business people. Such partnerships have been successful in other small cities throughout Massachusetts, such as Lowell and Salem.

Quincy 2000's goal is to promote every aspect of the City of Quincy. Part of this goal is the promotion of historic attraction and tourism. In order to avoid duplication of effort and public confusion and to coordinate actions promoting the same goal, Quincy 2000 has offered to merge with Quincy Tourism. A merger would allow Quincy 2000 to build on all of Quincy Tourism's accomplishments in promoting the city.

In recent months, Quincy Tourism has not been the dynamic organization Quincy needs to promote itself, the association noted. Members have there own concerns and cannot continue to perform full time duties on a volunteer basis.

If the proposal is approved, Quincy Tourism will remain a separate organization that will come under the umbrella of Quincy 2000. It will still be in charge of promoting tourism in Quincy. Quincy Tourism Association and the Board of Directors will remain the same. Quincy 2000 will add some new members to the board. The name will be changed. The organization will be eligible for government grants and aid.

THOMAS CRANE PUBLIC Library Director Ann McLaughlin accepts a book on behalf of the library from members of the Massachusetts Grange Committee: Herbert Kendall, left, master of Granite City and Charles Sylvester, secretary of Mass. The notice is intended for residents of Bicknell St., St. Germain St., Prescott Ter., Bayview Ave. and Edwards Ln. Because of the project, all traffic will be unable to enter or leave the area by way of Bicknell St. which is the only road into this section of Germantown.

The construction crew will assure ambulance or fire apparatus of passage when needed.

Council Approves Plan For Handicapped Evacuation

The City Council recently passed a resolution introduced by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers regarding emergency evacuation of physically challenged residents living in a facility of more than six units.

Ayers, who collaborated with Fire Chief Thomas Gorman in authoring the resolution, said it will soon be implemented into law by the City Council. He added that the law will assist the fire department's evacuation of the residents in the following ways:

•The building management, or owner, will be responsible to provide a building diagram noting the units of physically challenged residents for the fire department.

•The information will be stored in a computer accessible to the fire department in an emergency and will be kept confidential to the fire department.

•The law will apply to all new construction as well as the remodeling of buildings with more than six units. The time frame will be taken under discussion.

•The units where the blind, deaf or wheelchair-bound reside will be noted on the fire department diagrams by the Handicap Symbol.

"This new law will give the physically challenged residents in large buildings a measure of safety and will aid the fire department in the case of an emergency, at little cost to the owner of the property," said Ayers.

Ayers also praised Quincy Commission on Disability Chairman Bill Murphy and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath for their assistance in the matter.

"After reviewing the city records, I realized that no such city ordinance was on file," said Ayers. "In emergency situations, timing is crucial. By having this information on file on their computers, it will help assist the fire department and enable them to work more efficiently."

COLON-SAVING SURGICAL TECHNIQUE

Surgery to remove cancerous growths from the colon has often called for large abdominal incisions, lengthy patient recovery time, and the possibility of permanently damaged bowel function. A relatively new technique known as transanal edoscopic microsurgery (TEM) is changing that daunting picture. Using an innovative tool called a rectoscope, surgeons can excise polyps and certain cancers of the colon and rectum by working through the anus, with no incision necessary. Conventional surgical tools inserted through the anus are able to reach only the lowermost sections of the bowel. A patient undergoing TEM can look forward to a hospital stay of as short as four days and perfectly normal bowel function.

P.S. TEM has been most successful in cases of removing small, slow-growing cancers that haven't penetrated the rectum wall.

TEM has proved a boon to patients suffering from colon cancer. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our new office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. The Other Adamses

When we think of the illustrious Adams Family we usually think of John, Abigail and John Quincy Adams—all giant figures in American history.

HAROLD

But, informs former Senator Paul Harold, there were at least two other members of the family who were well known to many in their day, but, you might say were not quite of the stature of the two Presidents.

On a recent visit to Martha's Vineyard, Harold stopped by the Duke's County Museum to research a friend's family tree. While there he noticed a volume on the Adams Family on the Vineyard.

He discovered that the Vineyard branch of the family is directly descended from the Adams of Quincy (Old Braintree).

Sarah and Lucy Adams were midgets who were with P. Barnum's Circus and General Tom Thumb.

They retired to the Vineyard where they ran a popular tea room on South Rd. in Chilmark, Harold says.

With Thanks To Our Residents And Friends

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It started as a simple thought. Quincy, Ill. was being flooded and we were, after all, of the same name: Quincy, Mass. Mary Timcoe and I sat and talked about the help we could give to this "other Quincy" because of the flooding and we talked of checking for an American Legion Post out there (we are both past commanders in the American Legion).

It was the weekend. I thought more and more about it, and then called the mayor of Quincy, Ill., Chuck Scholtz, and asked how we in Quincy could help as a "sister city" back east. The question was: do you need money, clothing or food? Mayor Scholtz requested food, since as of that time, his city was trying its best to feed 10,000 displaced flood persons and the food supply was in danger of running low.

I spoke to Mayor Sheets on Tuesday at 7:15 a.m. about the Quincy to Quincy concept, we discussed it in length and it was a go. Rather than have it just American Legion, we opted for community-based activity. The media was at a meeting with the mayor that morning and the idea of helping a "sister city" caught on. The rest is history. The local newspapers, TV, radio and the word of mouth concept did this city proud.

To Bob Hanna of the Quincy Police Department who stepped in when I was sick, to Tony Siciliano and Ed Roberts of the Civil Defense Service and the many persons who volunteered to stay 24 hours a day to accept the food donations at City Hall, to Mayor Sheets and the staff in the mayor's office (Grace, Helen and Mary), to Pat and Bob of Veterans Services and to you, the citizens of Quincy who did what Quincy is known for doing, extended a hand to those in need, I thank you for your generosity. A total of seven 48-foot trailers of food was sent to Quincy, Ill. in the name of our citizens, and you should take pride in your accomplishments.

We in Quincy took that first step when something had to be done. We did not talk, we acted, and that is what makes this a great city to live in.

Henry P. Bradley, Director
Quincy Veterans Services

Navy Clears Way For Museum To Receive USS Salem

USNSM and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The Navy expects to participate in this meeting and Scott indicated they will provide all possible assistance to the USNSM in their efforts to bring the Salem to Quincy.

"The Navy has expressed its desire to assist us in bringing this project to fruition," MacMullen said. "They understand the time constraints that we are operating under and would like to see us fulfill our arrival schedule."

If all goes as planned, MacMullen said, the Salem should arrive before the end of September.

"We're working to get the Salem as soon as possible. We're hoping to get a date for next month. There are a lot of technical issues we have to work out. This is not an easy task but certainly everyone is working toward the same end," he said.

Once the Salem arrives, MacMullen said the Navy has encouraged the museum to open the ship and make her arrival for tours as soon as possible.

"They want to see us open up the vessel as soon as possible because they would like to see us generating revenue," MacMullen said.

The entire museum, including the Massachusetts Military Archives, is expected to open next spring.

MacMullen said the Navy's interest in the museum and help in bringing the Salem home to Quincy is a major step toward opening the museum. He said the museum is working with the Navy to meet its requirements.

"We intend to meet every one of the Navy's requirements to help make this museum a success because it's in their (the Navy's) best interest and our best interest to cross all the t's and dot all the i's. It's good to see the Navy helping us expedite this long process.

"We're interested in expediting whatever's necessary to make sure this happens as soon as possible. We're still operating on the schedule to open the entire museum in the spring.

"The fact that the Navy's two senior people came to Quincy tells us the Navy is as serious as we are in making this museum a reality."

Besides the Salem, MacMullen is working on bringing other ships to the museum, including the Charles Francis Adams, a World War II destroyer leader which has been decommissioned and is now in storage at the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard.

MacMullen said the Adams would be an appropriate ship for the museum. He pointed out the ship was named after former Navy Secretary Charles Francis Adams III, a descendent of John Adams.

Another descendant, Charles Francis Adams IV, founded Raytheon Corp., served as a destroyer escort captain in World War II and now sits on the USNSM Board of Directors.

MacMullen said the Navy has agreed not to strip the Adams and will allow the museum to apply for the ship. He said he hopes to bring the Adams to Quincy in approximately one year.

Germantown Construction Project Begins Today

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson announces that work will begin today (Thursday) on the resurfacing of Bicknell St. in Germantown and the restoration of the water-supply project that was part of a recent bond issue approved by the City Council

Construction will be held daily from 8 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. and will take approximately two weeks, according to Kolson. He added that residents' patience during the construction period will be appreciated.

"All necessary arrangements are being made to keep the inconvenience to the area residents to a minimum," he said.

Worst Rain Floods Cellars, Submerges Cars

Aug. 19-25, 1955 — 38 Years Ago

The worst rainstorm in Quincy's history, the after effects of Hurricane Diane, dropped about a foot of rain on the city in two days, flooding 700 cellars, submerging hundreds of cars in streets and parking areas and forcing the evacuation of scored of families.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Boston recorded an official level of 11.91 inches of rain in 40 hours, with 8.24 inches coming down in 24 hours to break the one-day record of 6.04 set on July 11, 1921. The Blue Hills Observatory reported 11.95 inches in 46 hours.

"That means a three-month average rainfall in 36 hours," said Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert. "Our drainage system was not designed to handle it. We will keep on pumping as fast as we can." Quincy drains reach capacity when four inches falls in 24 hours, he said.

Town, Furnace and Sachem Brooks all overflowed their banks and 80 per cent of the families living on Brook Road, South Quincy, had to be evacuated from their homes. A fleet of small private boats were pressed into service to take residents of Furnace., West Quincy, to safety.

City manager Donald H. Blatt warned parents not to allow their children to wade in the flooded streets for fear of health hazards and he asked sight seers to stay out of flooded areas. He also authorized food and building supply stores to stay open on Sunday in the emergency.

More than 150 cars were submerged to their rooftops in the South St. parking area; a landslide dropped a granite wall into the home of Sarah Dalabon, 131 School St.; and a power line fell across a chain link fence at the Atherton Hough School, Houghs Neck, charging it.

SCHOOL DELAY STUDIED

The School Committee asked Dr. Charles Djerf, a committee member; Dr. Brooks Ryder, the health commissioner; and Dr. James Cameron, a city pediatrician, to study the advisability of delaying the September school opening due to the prevalence of polio in the area.

Rita's Spinach Pie

Here is a recipe for a spinach pie that our daughter Rita brought over our home for us to taste. It calls for a homemade crust, but if you don't want to bother with that, you may use a ready made one.

Rita's Spinach Pie

Crust

1 cup flour

1/3 cup butter or margarine

3 tablespoons water

Mix together to form a soft dough and place on the bottom of a nine inch pie plate.

Spinach Pie

1/2 pound fresh spinach

salt and pepper and a half teaspoon fresh basil

1 small onion (saute these ingredients in a little oil and butter)

Place in a bowl with:

1 pound cottage cheese

1/2 cup feta or grated sharp cheese

3 eggs (beaten)

2 tablespoons flour and a dash of nutmeg.

Place in a crust spread and top it of with about a cup of sour cream and top with paprika.

Bake is a 375 degree oven for about an hour. This spinach pie is also good the next day, just heated in a microwave.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Mariano Candidate For Re-election To School Committee

Quincy School Committeeman Ronald Mariano announces he will seek re-election to a second term.

Mariano, a former Quincy public school teacher, has served on the committee for the past four years.

"There are many issues that I have worked on that are still unresolved," said Mariano. "The most important of these issues facing our public education system today is the implementation of the State Education Reform Package. I am very concerned that this reform is not well thought-out and may create problems for our administrators. I intend to deal with these problems on both the state level and the local level."

A strong supporter of school safety, Mariano voted successfully to challenge the State Department of Education and expel a student who brought a gun to school.

"We must do everything possible to insure a safe environment for the students of Quincy," he said. "The School Committee's action sent a strong message throughout the state that Quincy is committed to protecting students that want to learn."

Mariano also worked to revise the high school attendance policy.

"A new attendance policy at all levels of education was one of my goals, and we have finished the first step," said Mariano. "The new policy has been a tremendous success in reducing absenteeism and tardiness, which in turn has a positive effect on academic progress."

RON MARIANO

Mariano is one of the founders of the Quincy Schools Athletic Contribution Committee which raises private money to supplement the capital budget of the school's athletic department. The group recently sponsored a concert by B.J. Thomas with proceeds going to reseed Veterans' Memorial Stadium. The QSACC has also donated for the new seating in the stadium, as well as to the refurbishing of the infield at Adams Field.

"We have donated equipment to the elementary gym programs and purchased collapsible basketball rims at both high schools," said Mariano, "and we will continue to supplement the tight athletic budget."

For the past eight years, Mariano has served as coordinator and coach in the President's Youth Basketball program which has given about 300 middle school students the opportunity to compete against the best athletes on the South Shore. The program was implemented the year after budget constraints eliminated middle school sports.

"As someone who has spent his whole life involved in education and with kids, I feel that I have the maturity, experience and commitment needed to help keep the Quincy Public Schools progressing through these difficult times," he said. "It is my goal to continue the positive direction that our schools are taking, with the addition to the Bernazzani School and the building of the Early Childhood Center, by working to put an addition on the Parker School.

"I intend to develop and implement new middle school and elementary school attendance policies while continuing to provide leadership that results in a safe and creative learning environment. I feel that I represent the beliefs of the parents and citizens of Quincy, and I look forward to serving them over the course of the next four years."

VIRGINIA'S DAY NURSERY, Quincy, recently donated a tree to the City of Quincy in honor of Earth Day 1993. The tree planting took place at Pageant Field next to the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater. The "snow drift crab tree" was from O'Connell Landscape of Quincy. O'Connell's staff assisted in the planting. Among those participating in the planting were Mayor James Sheets, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch, 42 students and eight staff of Virginia's Day Nursery. The children will make regular trips to Pageant Field to weed and water the tree.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Sympathy is two hearts tugging at one load."-Charles H. Parkhurst

A farmer was out plowing his field one spring morning. The spring thaw had just occurred and there were many muddy valleys in the field. Through one particularly wet place, his tractor became stuck in the mud. The harder he tried, the deeper he became stuck. Finally, he walked over to his neighbor's to ask for help. The neighbor came over and looked at the situation. He shook his head, and then said, "It doesn't look good, but I tell you what. I'll give it a try pulling you out. But if we can't get it out, I'll come sit in the mud with you."

Although we may not all be farmers, we do experience getting "stuck in the mud" from time to time. And chances are we probably know someone who is stuck right now. Have you tried "mud sitting with a friend?...It may be the best thing you can do...

Golf Tournament Raises $5,000 For Fr. Bill's Place

Babe Ruth

Tirrell Wins Crown

The Tirrell Services baseball team ended a successful season by winning the Quincy Babe Ruth League championship.

The team won four of five games in the playoffs to capture the crown.

In the opener Tirrell defeated Morrisette, 9-1, behind the two-hit pitching of Michael Kenney. He struck out 11 and helped his own cause with a bases-loaded triple in the fifth inning.

John Paul DeAngelis had two triples and a single and six RBI. Paul Marnikovic had two doubles and a triple, Ryan Herlihy and Chris Malone two hits apiece and J.J. Farrell, Chad Feetham and Chris Erler one each.

Joe Biagini and Dave Keddy had the Morrisette hits.

Tirrell's offense was shut down in the next game as Eric Wirtz of Local 1139 threw a four-hitter in a 4-1 victory.

The big hit for Local was a two-run double by Mike Sheffer in the fifth.

Kenney provided the only offense for Tirrell with a triple and single.

Faced with elimination in the double elimination tournament, Tirrell bounced back to defeat Houghs Neck, the playoffs top seed, 6-1.

DeAngelis started on the mound and pitched into the sixth inning, allowing five singles and one unearned run. Marnikovic came on in the sixth with men on second and third and one out and worked out of the jam with a strikeout and a flyout. He pitched a scoreless seventh for the save.

The 1-2-3 hitters for Tirrell, Marnikovic, Feetham and Kenney, sparked the offense as they reached base nine times. Each had two hits and a walk, and Kenney had three RBI. Farrell doubled to start a fifth inning rally and also walked twice. Feetham had a strong game at shortstop, handling 11 chances, many of them difficult, flawlessly.

TIRRELL SERVICES won the Babe Ruth League championship, winning four of five playoff games. First row, left to right, Joey Miller, Bob McDonough, bat boy Steve Malone and John Greene. Middle row, Dan Hughes, Billy Armstrong, J.J. Farrell, Chris Malone and John-Paul DeAngelis. Tirrell avenged its earlier loss to Local 1139 with an 8-0 victory, as Kenney pitched a four-hitter and again struck out 11. Kenney finished the year with a 6-2 record, striking out 87 in 52 innings. He also had his third triple in four games.

Feetham had three hits, three stolen bases and three runs scored. Danny Hughes had two hits, Farrell and Herlihy each had a hit and two RBI and Marnikovic added a double and caught a fine game.

For Local 1139 Brian Rose pitched well in relief and catcher Mike Russo singled and played well behind the plate.

In the championship game Tirrell defeated Quincy Police, 7-1, after the Police had won three straight games, outscoring the oppositions, 35-4, after losing its first game.

Tirrell clinched the win with two runs in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the sixth. Kenney hit his fourth triple of the playoffs and Markinovic had a two-run double.

Farrell earned his seventh pitching win and Markinovic pitched well in relief.

Quincy Youth Baseball Festival On Saturday

The first annual Quincy Youth Baseball Festival, hosted by Dr. Mark Jaehnig of the Joehnig Chiropractic Office, will be held Saturday, Aug. 21 and Sunday, Aug. 22, at the McCoy-Mitchell Fields across from Veterans Memorial Stadium and behind the Collins Rest-A-While.

The festival is being held to try to keep baseball alive into late August for children ages 8-10 from Quincy and some surrounding communities.

The goal is to provide a fun, low-keyed, non-competitive baseball environment with the emphasis not on winning or losing, but on hitting, running the bases and fielding.

There will be adult pitchers, no strikeouts and rotation of players in the field.

Each team will play three or four games with plans for each team to play at least one night game under the lights.

Other special events planned are a pitching accuracy contest, a running speed contest and a homerun derby which will be modeled after the major league home run hitting contest.

The team fee is $50 and an individual fee of $5.

The directors are looking for a limited number of teams and/or individuals ages 8-9-10.

Further information can be obtained by calling Dr. Mark Jaehnig at 472-3311 or Bob Croke at 773-6573.

DON'T KNOCK IT

The ears of most experienced drivers perk up when they detect ping sounds (knocking) coming from their cars' engines. This phenomenon, known as detonation, results from a collision between two separate areas of combustion within the combustion chamber. Under certain conditions, harmless "trace detonation" normally manifests itself in some engines as a temporary faint ticking sound. Trace detonation may arise when the throttle is opened or closed rapidly, the engine is cold, the car is climbing a steep hill, or when the brake pedal is pressed. More harmful detonation occurs when the knocking sound is constant and/or severe as the car cruises, accelerates, or coasts down. Prolonged harmful detonation can lead to severe damage to the pistons, connecting rods, and cylinder heads.

HINT: Trace detonation may be eliminated by using a fuel with a higher octane rating, which is an index of gasoline's antiknock properties.

The technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in checking out every unusual sound you hear. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

Council Indicates Quincy College Plan Approval

Cahill added that if need be, the council could vote on the matter without hearing the School Committee's opinion. Sheets, however, has stated in the past that he will not sign any plan until it is approved by the School Committee.

Still, the matter put into committee despite council members' generally favorable comments about the proposal and informal vote to support it. Fabrizio said the issue will now be brought out of committee at the council's Sept. 20 meeting, after the School Committee's special session.

In addition, the council agreed to send a letter to the School Committee urging a timely review of the governance proposal.

A Quincy College Governance Committee was established by Sheets in January to determine the future relationship between the city and the college, and to decide how a new governing board of trustees at the college would be selected.

The Governance Committee, which was chaired by Stice, determined that a 13-member board, which would include one city councillor and one School Committee member and would have the power to hire and fire the college president, would be the best possible authority for the college. Stice said Tuesday the Governance Committee, which has since been disbanded, met 18 times (including full committee and subcommittee meetings) between January and mid-April before sending its proposal to Sheets April 26.

After reviewing the plan, Sheets sent copies of the proposal to the City Council and School Committee June 1, Stice said. She added that the School Committee has been unable to discuss the matter because its regular agenda has not afforded committee members the time to do so.

"We've had a lot of work to do," she said.

Stice added that she "really admires" the way the City Council has handled the issue by discussing it in a "timely fashion," and said she hopes the School Committee will be able to agree at its special Sept. 15 meeting on what recommendation to make to the council.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath discussed the Governance Committee's proposal in depth Monday night and answered questions raised by council members and Quincy College President Dr. O. Clayton Johnson.

One of the chief concerns of Johnson, Councillor Michael Cheney and other councillors was the future status of 21 custodial and clerical workers employed by the college. Some feared that since the college would no longer be governed by the School Committee if a Board of Trustees were installed, the workers would lose the some of the benefits guaranteed them as employees of Quincy Public Schools.

McGrath, however, said it is the intention of all concerned to see that no Quincy College employees are adversely affected by the governance change.

"Our intention, from the start, is that no one at the college ends up getting hurt," he said.

Cahill suggested that a "grandfather clause" be added to the Governance Committee's proposal so that those who have been employed under the current governance would not lose any of their present rights under the board of trustees. McGrath said he would have to check to see if that would be legally possible.

Cahill also brought up the possibility of not including any elected officials on the board of trustees. Although Cahill said he favored "keeping politics out" of the board if possible, he decided to drop the discussion after several councillors voiced the opinion that elected officials should be included.

Amendments made to the Governance Committee's original proposal Monday night included:

•The addition of another another city councillor and another member of the current college board of trustees to the initial Trustee Appointing Council for the board. The original proposal called for two representatives apiece from those bodies, and the amendment calls for three apiece.

•Specific dates regarding Quincy College payments for services rendered at the college by city departments. In addition to the the original proposal, which called for the mayor and college president to negotiate the amounts of such payments, the amendment states that "such payment shall be made by the college to the city by May 1, for the previous fiscal year beginning the previous July 1," with any such amounts being subject to the approval of the City Council. Currently, the college does not fully pay for such services.

•An amendment stating that no college employee be suspended without pay or discharged without "just cause," as opposed to the original "good cause." McGrath said the amendment offers more protection to the employees, including the right to arbitration.

Woolworth Clock Ticking After 30 Years On Fritz

Time Right Again For Downtown Shoppers

By MICHAEL WHALEN

You might say the time is right again in the downtown Quincy shopping district.

The familiar 45-year-old clock over the front doorway at the Woolworth's store located at 1543 Hancock St. has been repaired and is ticking again after being out of service for over 30 years.

Now shoppers can once again quickly glance at the clock for the correct time which had become a habit before it went on the fritz.

Don Russell, manager of the store, said the clock was installed when the store first opened in 1948 but "it hasn't worked in over 30 years." He added that an employee who has worked at the store since he was in high school--"and he graduated about 1962"--said he has never known the clock to be in working order.

The clock was boarded up about five years ago, according to Russell, because birds had started nesting in the broken paneling that surrounded it.

Why has it taken so long for the clock to be repaired?

"Because no one knew how to fix it," Russell said with a smile. "They've haven't made clocks like that in years--it's porcelain on steel--and it took a lot of detective work on the part of an electrician and the wiring people to figure it out."

Russell said he decided to have the clock repaired after a snowstorm last April caused damage to three sections of the store's front sign. The work was done by a local affiliate of a company known as Midtown Neon, which is based in New York City. Although he hasn't received the bill yet, Russell said the repairs to the front of the store will total around $10,000.

CLOCK ABOVE WOOLWORTH'S in Quincy Center now shows the correct time of day after being out of service for over 30 years.

He added that he had the work done mainly for aesthetic reasons.

"I wanted it to be done in such a way that the clock would show," said Russell. "Nobody likes to shop in a store that looks like it's going out of business, and I was tired of people asking me if we were going out of business."

The rumors of Woolworth's death were so greatly exaggerated, Russell said, that there were actually two offers to buy the clock. One came from Restoration Resources in Newton and another from an antique collector "who walked in off the street," but no monetary figures were discussed since the clock was never actually for sale.

In fact, business at Woolworth's has been on the upswing, particularly in the last two years, according to Russell.

"Business is great, it's super," he said. "The old Woolworth's stores are unique, they're real 'Mom and apple pie.' There's nobody in the variety business anymore except us."

Police Dept. Beefing Up With Innovative Crime Deterrents

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The scope of law enforcement in the city is changing, signaling a new era for crime prevention in Quincy, according to police and city officials.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said Tuesday that he hopes that the two mountain bikes the police department has had in operation for the last two weeks, as well as mounted police, a K-9 Patrol and other planned additions to the department in terms of equipment in manpower will help to increase its effectiveness and diversity.

"Quincy's always had an innovative police force, and we've always been an aggressive police force," said Mullen. "I think these things will be very helpful."

Mayor James Sheets said he will do everything within his power to help increase the strength of the police department.

"I strongly support these innovations, and I've been urging these innovations for the last year," he said.

"We're going to put a major effort into putting out a police strike force to combat any kinds of criminal activities. We're going to make it extremely uncomfortable for anyone who comes into the city, or lives in the city, who tries to commit any kind of crime.

"Security of a person's property is the number one priority of this administration and should be of any administration. We're going to be as tough as the law is going to allow us to be on crime, I can tell you that."

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson, chairman of the City Council Public Safety Committee, also expressed optimism about the city's future ability to fight crime.

"We have an excellent police department, but we need as many tools as possible to deliver (police) services to the citizens and help protect them in the best way possible," said Kolson. "Once we get those tools, I think it's going to be an absolutely crackerjack unit."

The police department recently purchased two mountain bicycles with money Mullen said was donated by Paul V. Sullivan, owner of Sullivan Plumbing Supply Co. on Liberty Street. Mullen said officers from the department's special operations unit have been assigned to use the bicycles.

Mullen said the bikes provide "more mobility" for the officers and also contain an edge of surprise by allowing police to move silently.

Ordinance Change Allows Residents To Purchased Standardized Sheds

The City Council recently passed an ordinance that will allow for standardized sheds to be placed in residential areas.

The old law required the size of the shed to be limited to eight feet long by eight feet wide by six feet tall. Under the new law, the former height restriction of six feet will be increased to eight feet and will allow for the shed to be placed three feet from the property line.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who introduced the amendment to the ordinance, said he had been contacted by residents who complained that they could not purchase a prefabricated shed due to the height restrictions of the former ordinance.

Cheney added that he introduced the amendment so as to accommodate homeowners and enable them to purchase an "off the shelf" shed for storage of their lawn mowers and garden tools.

First Case Ever Here

Raccoon Killed By Dog Had Rabies, Tests Show

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A raccoon killed by a dog last week in the Wollaston section of the city tested positive for rabies, according to Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

The commissioner said Tuesday that she was unaware of the breed of the dog, which belongs to a resident of Cedar Street. She added that she could not release the name of the owner.

It was the first reported case of the disease in the city's history, Gallahue noted. She said that recently as many as 110 communities from Boston to Ashby have had at least one reported case.

Gallahue said chances of the Wollaston dog contracting the disease from the raccoon are "remote" because its owner had made sure the animal was recently vaccinated and also had a veterinarian administer a booster shot after the incident with the raccoon.

"The dog has a very conscientious owner," she said, adding that the owner took both the dead raccoon and the dog to be tested for the disease.

Pets that have been vaccinated and have bitten or been bitten by a confirmed or suspected rabid animal still have to be kept under strict confinement for three months as a safety precaution, Gallahue said. The Wollaston dog is currently under confinement, which means it cannot go outdoors and its exposure to people is limited, the commissioner added.

Gallahue said pets that have not been vaccinated, and have been exposed to a confirmed or suspected rabid animal, are either euthanized or kept in isolation for three months. Isolation means no direct contact at all with humans or other animals, she said. Gallahue added that after the three months of isolation, an additional three months of strict confinement is necessary for such animals.

Gallahue said rabies can be easily avoided if people are careful in protecting both their own safety and that of their pets.

"We don't want to alarm anybody," she said.

Several simply precautions can greatly prevent the spread of the disease, Gallahue said. Residents should avoid feeding, picking up or even touching any wild or stray animals. Entrances to homes such as chimneys should be tightly capped so wild animals have no way of getting inside. Pets should be vaccinated regularly and be given an additional booster shot after coming into contact with an animal that is a known or suspected rabies carrier.

Common carriers of the disease, she said, are skunks, raccoons, foxes and bats.

People bitten by an animal that is either suspected or confirmed rabid should wash any wounds with soapy water and see a doctor immediately.

"There are some very good measures for post-exposure treatment," Gallahue said.

Those who handle pets that have bitten or been bitten by a confirmed or suspected rabies carrier should wear gloves and use extreme caution, she added, and should wash their hands after doing so. Such pets should be taken immediately to a veterinarian for the proper treatment, Gallahue said.

BODY FAT AND RISK OF BREAST CANCER

Breast cancer can be frightening, not just because it strikes so many women, but because no one has been able to conclusively identify the risk factors that determine an individual's likelihood of developing it. However, several studies do point to excess body fat as one signal for caution. A recent study of more than 300 women undergoing breast biopsies found that obesity was a definite link among those who developed cancer. Doctors have also speculated that a woman's body shape (either apple- or pear- shaped) might be a key. Given the data on diet and body fat that continues to come in, most doctors recommend a lean, healthy lifestyle to reduce health risks and increase quality of life.

P.S. Studies have shown that excessive fat carried around the stomach increases several health risks, including heart disease.

We can all benefit from exercising regularly, cutting back on saturated fats, and increasing our consumption of fruits and vegetables—all steps that will help keep us lean and fit. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment, and our new, more comfortable office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St,. Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Tim Cahill, Author

Quincy's newest author, Timothy Patrick Cahill, is putting the finishing touches to his first book.

You know him better as Tim Cahill, City Councillor.

CAHILL

Timothy Patrick Cahill has a more distinctive literary ring to it for an author.

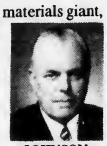
Besides, the book is not about politics. It's about another subject Cahill knows pretty well: the tough up-and-down, do-or-die, world of business.

It's entitled "Profiles In The American Dream" with sub-title: "The Real Life Stories Of The Struggle Of American Entrepreneurs."

The former owner of Handshakes Restaurant in Quincy Sq. selected four Horatio Alger-like figures in Quincy's business history to profile:

L. GROSSMAN

• Louis Grossman, the patriarch of the Grossman family who as a door-to-door peddler blazed the trail for the home building materials giant, L.Grossman & Sons.



JOHNSON

• Howard Johnson, a not too successful cigar salesman who found success with an ice cream recipe, parlaying it into a nation-wide restaurant-motel empire.

ROSENBERG

• William Rosenberg, who designed a canteen truck and bought coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches to local factory workers which was the humble beginning of the now famed national-international Dunkin Donuts chain.

O'CONNELL

• Peter O'Connell, who sold newspapers in front of City Hall and at the Quincy Shipyard, and with that money earned, bought a piece of land which was the start of one of New England's largest development firms.

Cahill has put three years of research, interviews and writing into the book which he expects to finish shortly. It will run around 200 pages and will include photos.

Cahill, who is now seeking a publisher says: "The book should be of interest to anyone who wants to start a business."

Actually it should be of interest to anyone who likes success stories sprinkled with a generous serving of little known or forgotten facts and anecdotes about the subjects.

For example, did you know that the Grossman company might never have been founded in Quincy if Louis Grossman hadn't got lost one day?

Grossman, who was 26 when he came to America from Russia in 1888 (the year Quincy became a city) started to peddle soon after his arrival in Boston. But on his first day, with a sack on his back containing writing paper, seat covers and other items, he got on the wrong train and found himself in Quincy. But that didn't deter him. He knocked on doors here and sold out everything.

Just to be sure he could find his way back to Boston, he walked back following the railroad tracks.

Grossman lived on a nickel a day for six months to save enough money to bring his wife and three children from Russia. He then came back to Quincy to settle with them on Bunker Hill Lane.

A son, Joseph, was born here in 1892—the first Jewish baby born in Quincy, according to Cahill. He grew up to be active in politics and in the community and was elected Governor's Councillor.

By the end of the century, the L. Grossman & Sons company came into being as junk dealers and went on to great success in the field of building materials.

Howard Johnson, an eighth grade dropout, was 27 and trying to sell cigars to stores in 1925. He wasn't doing so well so he decided to buy a drugstore on Beale St. that wasn't doing so well either.

But, with an ice cream recipe his mother gave him and a secret one he bought, he went on to 28 flavors, fame and fortune. But not overnight.

He opened his first roadside stand—a little shack—in 1928 at Wollaston Beach. Then he opened a restaurant in the lower level of the Granite Trust Bank (now South Shore Bank). He actually learned how to run a restaurant there and got his first big break.

That was 1929 when Eugene O'Neill's controversial play "Strange Interlude" was banned in Boston but won permission to open here.

It played at the old Quincy Theater on Hancock St. for a long run. It had an hour and half dinner intermission. Hungry theater goers wandered down the street and found Johnson's restaurant. They liked the food and service. His name got around and he seemed to be on his way.

But a bumpy road lie ahead. First came the 1929 big stock market crash and then the depression which took him five years to recover from.

By the end of the 1930's, however, he had over 100 roadside stands, most of them franchises, a business venture he pioneered.

But then came World War II and gasoline rationing which left those roadside stands virtually deserted and Johnson on the brink of bankruptcy.

But he came bouncing back, landing contracts to provide food for war production plants and military bases.

William Rosenberg, another eighth grade dropout, was 29 when he drove his first canteen truck to Boston Gear with coffee, doughnuts and sandwiches in 1946. Within three years he had a fleet of 140 trucks.

In 1948 he started a coffee and doughnut shop on Southern Artery called the Open Kettle. Two years later, an architect, Bernare Healy, remodeled it for him and came up with a new name: Dunkin Donuts.

He had six shops within three years and then became a national-international franchiser. He is now retired and his son, Robert, is the president of Dunkin Donuts and Baskin Robbins, both now subsidiaries of Allied

(Cont'd from Page 1)

The chief added that while initial feedback from residents about the bicycles has been good, the department will take more time to determine the effectiveness of the bikes before deciding on whether to purchase more.

Other planned additions to the department include:

•A K-9 unit, which Mullen, Sheets and Kolson all agree would be essential to future crime prevention in the city, particularly in cases involving drugs. Mullen said the dogs are extremely effective in locating drugs with their keen sense of smell. The chief also noted that dogs can also help protect officers by entering a building occupied by a suspect ahead of police.

Mullen noted that the city once had a K-9 unit, but it was eventually disbanded because officials at the time felt it was not needed.

Sheets said the estimated cost of obtaining dogs, cages and other equipment for the unit would be $15,000 to $20,000, and funding for the unit would likely come from the city's free cash account.

The mayor added that he hopes to provide any funding necessary for additions to the police department.

"I'm going to make money available as I have it in the regular city budget," he said.

•Mounted police, which Mullen said "creates visibility" and would be a further deterrent against crime, particularly around Quincy Center and some of the wooded areas in the city.

Sheets said funding for the mounted unit would also probably come from free cash.

•Five new motorcycles which are part of a bond issue that recently received approval from the City Council.

•New police cruisers to replace older models. Mullen said although 11 older cruisers were recently replaced, there are a couple still being used.

The mayor said any other replacement cruisers will be paid for out of free cash.

Mullen said he plans to file for state grant money for community policing in West Quincy. The chief, who said he wants to add "two walking men" in the Brewer's Corner neighborhood, said he plans to file for the funding as soon as possible as the deadline for doing so is Sept. 1.

Sheets said in addition to funding from the city budget and state grants, the Clinton Crime Bill could also help bolster the strength of the police department. The bill, if passed by the U.S. Congress, would add 50,000 police officers throughout the country, Sheets said, adding that "hopefully we'll get our fair share."

Manpower is something that Mullen, Sheets and Kolson all agree is one area where the department could use a needed boost. Mullen said that 17 recruits currently training at the Foxboro Police Academy are scheduled to graduate Sept. 3, and could possibly on be on the streets "by the latter part of September."

The chief also said neighborhood watches are also always essential in helping the police department fight crime, and advised all residents to organize neighborhood meetings to that end. Mullen added that after a neighborhood meeting is held, the police should be contacted to help residents design a formal neighborhood watch.

"We're encouraging the public to be a part of us," he said.

Ski-Conditioning Program At YMCA

The South Shore YMCA will offer a ski-conditioning program beginning Sept. 21.

The class will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7 to 8 p.m. with an optional workout on Saturdays. Registration begins Sept. 1.

Lyons.

Peter O'Connell was 11 and selling newspapers at City Hall and the Quincy Shipyard in 1954. He saved the money he earned and in 1958 at age 15 used $450 of it to purchase a parcel of land on Parker St., the same street he had grown up on.

Ten years later, he and his brother, Bill, put up a six-unit apartment building on that lot and the O'Connell Brothers development company was born.

Then followed a 16-unit apartment building across from Veterans Memorial Stadium. In 1969, they bought land on Presidents Lane from Louis Grossman's grandson, Nissie, and put up another apartment building.

After that came Hancock House across from St. John's, Sagamore Towers, Granite Place, State Street South office buildings, World Trade Center in Boston, the Monarch project in Springfield, Marina Bay, development in Colorado and a shopping mall in Ireland

Cahill notes a link between the O'Connell's and Howard Johnson. Their father, William, worked at Johnson's Wollaston Beach roadstand as a young man in the 1930's where he met his future wife, Phelma. She was a pretty young student at Eastern Nazarene College and used to stop by for an ice cream cone.

Young O'Connell did everything to impress her, even giving her an extra scoop of ice cream. Love blossomed.

Cahill says his four Quincy subjects reflect the business scene in the country over the past century.

"I wanted to write," he says, "what it is like to start a business and the struggle it is to keep it going...about the risks a businessman has to take to grow and to overcome setbacks...to stay alive in bad times."

And he adds:

"I think my four subjects not only did it all but came through it all with their souls intact."

Investigators Find Politics Overrules Civil Service List

Aug. 19-25, 1955
38 Years Ago

An investigating committed named by newly elected Mayor Thomas S, Burgin reported that many former city employees have been kept off the Civil Service list for political reasons.

The committee found that the list was "not prepared with due regard to the seniority rights of all city employees" and the war veterans on the city payroll were not given proper consideration.

"There are many cases where faithful employees have lost valuable pension rights by the manipulation of the list submitted to the Civil Service commission," said the report.

The committee was made up of ex-Mayor Joseph L. Whiton, Frank D, Coffman and Joseph W. Fouth. Mayor Burgin promised to take steps to eliminate the wrongs that his committee found.

Meanwhile, Bernard J. Tobin, recently deposed foreman at the city stables, appealed to Public Works Commissioner Ezekiel C. Sargent for a public hearing into his transfer into gang foreman's job.

Tobin, who was named to the post at the stables, two years ago by former Mayor Charles A. Ross, was removed by Sargent two weeks ago and the job returned to John J. Whelan.

NORTH QUINCY BATTLE

The fight for political advantage in the north end of the city reached a crescendo when the North Quincy Civic Association headed by Robert J. Maxwell, applied to the State Secretary for a corporate charter.

If the charter is Gilkerson, would not be able to use the name North Quincy Civic Association.

Observers noted that the officers and incorporators of the Maxwell group all were prominently associated with the campaign committee of former Mayor Charles A. Ross while Gilkerson was a Ross adversary.

Maxwell and Gilkerson were expected to oppose each other for the new City Council seat from Ward 7 in the Fall.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Seven High School Students Win USNSM Shipbuilding Competition

The United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum announces seven local high school students won first place in the North Quincy and Quincy High School Tech Prep Summer Session shipbuilding competition.

They are:

Vay Chenh, first place, PT boat category; John Kay, first place, destroyer category; Philip Woo, Ken Wu and Tony Wu, all first place, heavy cruiser category; and Thuy Quach and Trinh Quah, first place, aircraft carrier category.

The high school students learned about ship waterproofing, buoyancy and weighting. They started with clay models and worked on the various kinds of ships right through to seaworthiness.

They were water trials that finally decided the winners of the competition. The judging was based on the stability and buoyancy of the ships in water.

Museum Executive Director Bill MacMullen extended congratulations to all of the participants in the program and competition. At a recent ceremony at the museum office, MacMullen presented tee shirts depicting the U.S.S. to the winners. The Salem, built at the Quincy Fore River shipyard, will become the centerpiece of the museum after it arrives this fall.

Anyone interested in learning more about the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum or the Massachusetts Military Research Center can call 479-7900 to speak with a volunteer museum staff member.

New Dictionary Geared To Young Adults

(NU)—Where's Myanmar? What's a T-cell? What does NC-17 mean?

Anyone with a young reader in the house is accustomed to such questions. Now the answer to all of them can be, "Go look it up."

A new dictionary designed for children 11 to 14, Webster's New World Dictionary for Young Adults, has just been issued (Prentice Hall, $18).

The total number of entries is greater than 47,000 and more than 2,700 entries are new (such as Myanmar, NC-17 and T-cell). Lexicographers also made an effort to use definitions easily grasped by today's young adults.

The editors reviewed a computerized vocabulary database drawn from 16,000 compositions written by children in grades one through eight. The database yielded nearly 27,000 different words. The editors also reviewed well-known examples of children's literature, with emphasis on more recent works. Consulting scholars and specialists in middle and junior high school education helped to define the best approach to presenting the information.

The new dictionary, which took four years and $1.2 million to develop, also relies heavily on the Third College Edition of Webster's New World Dictionary and on the publisher's citation file, which numbers over 1 million references.

The dictionary is available in bookstores nationwide.

Guide Details USA-Made School Clothing, Supplies

School children will learn an important lesson this fall before the first class bell rings, if their parents purchase made-in-the-USA school clothes and supplies.

"Parents spend an average of $250 when they send their children back to school each year," noted Made in the USA Foundation Chairman Joel Joseph. "Unfortunately, few use this opportunity to instill in their children the ethic of buying American."

The non-profit Made in the USA Foundation has released the All-American "Back to School" Guide for Parents, the first comprehensive listing of made-in-the-USA school clothing and supplies. The guide includes ideas on cutting "back to school" bills by 20 percent this year and tips on spotting imported children's clothing "dressed up" as American-made products.

The guide is available for $4.50 (postage and handling) to parents who call 1-800-566-MUSA and use a Visa or Mastercard. Or write: Made in the USA Foundation, 560 Herndon Parkway, Suite 110, Herndon VA 22070.

Emergency Management Agency Seeks Volunteers For Power Unit

Quincy's Emergency Management Agency is planning to form a volunteer lighting and power unit which would respond to emergency situations in Quincy or surrounding communities.

The agency is seeking 50 trained volunteer personnel who would work under the direction of the chief of lighting and power unit. Needed are citizens with a background in public safety and light duty rescue lighting and power who would set up and train personnel.

The unit is intended to help the city respond during emergencies. Deputy directors of Quincy Emergency Management Agency agree that hurricanes, severe northeast coastal storms, electrical power outages such as the recent power outage in Squantum and the 2.9 earthquake on July 22 which occurred on the South Shore are areas of concerns for coastal communities.

Directors will be in touch with school officials this fall in reference to President Clinton's national service plan which offers students help with college tuition in return for national service. The plan allows funds for students who do two years of community service towards tuition and living expenses along with other benefits.

In the past, two videotapes were sent to former President Bush on what local citizens and students are doing in community service. "We are now in the process of forwarding to President Clinton and Eli Segal, director, office of National Service, the latest videos on Americans helping Americans, Quincy, Mass. to Quincy, Illinois flood relief efforts," said Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management Agency.

Siciliano said the agency urges all citizens to support the city's emergency management programs to help local students who in turn help the community and citizens.

Those interested can contact the Quincy Emergency Management Agency by calling 376-1234.

Brian Barrett Wins $16,000 Shaw's Scholarship

Brian S. Barrett of Quincy is $16,000 richer because his mother shops at the local Shaw's Supermarket.

Alfreda Barrett entered her son Brian in Shaw's Third Annual "Cash for College" Sweepstakes and he won the grand prize of a $16,000 scholarship.

"I'm very happy," said Brian at the award ceremony held at the Quincy Shaw's on Quincy Ave. "I want to thank Shaw's for this generous gift and my Mom for entering me in the contest." Also on hand was Phil Francis, president and chief operating officer of Shaw's Supermarkets, and Store Manager Steve Ford, who handed Brian his scholarship check.

Shaw's "Cash for College" scholarship giveaway awarded 80 college-bound New Englanders with $1,000 scholarships last month. Each local store winner was then eligible for the grand prize $15,000 scholarship, drawn randomly at Shaw's corporate offices. Over $86,000 in scholarships were awarded by "Cash for College" this year, raising the total scholarship dollars awarded over the three years of the giveaway to over $270,000.

"I am a junior majoring in criminal justice at the University of Tampa," said Barrett, "and this scholarship will go a long way to help pay my tuition this year."

He graduated from Quincy North High School in 1989.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

This is a true story...A bereaved family was asked by friends how they could arrange a living memorial. Their answer - "In memory of Mother, visit a shut-in on a regular schedule. Share yourself and your time with someone on whom time hangs heavily."

They did it. Their own lives were enriched when they saw the sunshine their visits brought into the drab existence of those who were unable to go out into the world. Another family varied the suggestion by inviting a lonely, elderly widower in their neighborhood to dinner. He was re-invited again and again. Their children adore him and now call him Grampa.

We relate this story here because we think loneliness can be a dreadful storm in the sea of life. Isn't it nice to see God's hands working with human hands on the helm?

Quincy, North Report For Full Practice Aug. 30

By TOM SULLIVAN

The schoolboy football season is just around the corner, and the Quincy and North Quincy teams will report for the first full-scale day of practice next Monday morning, Aug. 30, for double sessions.

Actually the teams report today (Thursday) for three days of conditioning without pads.

The Presidents and Raiders will be preparing for their fourth season in the Old Colony League.

Last season North had its best season in history, an 11-0 record, the OCL championship and a Super Bowl win. The Raiders finished the regular season with a 20-0 win over Quincy and defeated Arlington in the Super Bowl.

Ken McPhee is starting his 12th year as North coach and has had only three losing seasons. Two years ago North went 8-2, McPhee's best season until last fall.

Quincy, under Jack Raymer, starting his 10th season as coach, hopes to rebound from a disappointing 3-6-1 season.

Three years ago, the Presidents finished a close second in the league with an 8-1-1 record, their best season since the undefeated team of 1970. Two years ago the Presidents went 6-4.

North Quincy will report Monday morning at 8:15 and work out at Cavanagh Stadium until 11:30. After lunch break the squad will meet from 12:30 to 1 p.m. and return for an afternoon session from 1:15 to 3:45.

North was hard hit by graduation and it will be pretty much of a rebuilding year. "We have a lot of players back who have played under pressure and we should do all right," said McPhee.

McPhee will have the same assistants as a year ago with Peter Chrisom, Tom Carter, Earl Metzler, Pete Zoia and freshman coach Dick Myer.

Quincy will report Monday morning at 8:30, will work out at Faxon Field until 11:15, and return for an afternoon session from 12:30 to 2:30.

"We will be young this year, but we will be competitive," said Raymer.

There will be two coaching changes. Mark Giordani, a former assistant who was a volunteer aide last year, replaces Bill Shaughnessy as an official assistant.

Quincy will have a father-son coaching combine as Chris Noble, one of the President's better quarterbacks of recent years, succeeds Jack Green who has left for Milton, as freshman coach. His father, Bob, is back as an assistant as is Bob Keuther.

North Quincy will renew an old rivalry with Stoughton in its first game Saturday night, Sept. 18, at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Raiders will open their OCL season against Falmouth on Friday night, Sept. 24, at the stadium.

North's only other non-league game will be against Don Bosco on Friday, Oct. 22, at 7 o'clock at the stadium.

Quincy is scheduled to open against Marshfield Friday night, Sept. 17, at the stadium and will play its first league game at Bridgewater-Raynham Saturday afternoon, Sept. 25, at 1:30.

The Presidents' only other non-league game is with newcomer Matignon on Saturday, Oct. 16, at 1:30 at the stadium.

Matignon replaces Medford on the schedule.

PRESSURE SITUATIONS

By simply keeping automobile's tires properly inflated, a car owner can go a very long way to insuring tire performance, economy, and longevity. Anyone who doubts this need only consider the fact that tires which are under-inflated by as little as 4 psi can experience a ten percent loss in tread wear. Other tire facts to keep in mind: Tires which are connected to the same axle should be maintained at identical pressures. Tire pressure should always be checked when the tires are cool. Not only does tire pressure increase from the heat of highway driving, but every ten-degree fluctuation in seasonal (outdoor) temperature increases or decreases tire temperature by 1 psi. Lastly, tire pressure should be checked every two weeks.

HINT: A tire should never be inflated beyond the maximum pressure rating on a tire's sidewall.

For most of your cars maintenance needs including complete tire service, rely on our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Chelsea Is Alive, But There's 'A Way To Go'

[On July 8, The Quincy Sun ran a story about Chelsea, a Doberman Pinscher dying from cirrhosis of the liver. The following is an open letter from Chelsea's owner, North Quincy native Ann Sava]:

Dear Quincy Sun readers:

Chelsea and I would like to publicly thank all of the readers of The Quincy Sun who responded with beautiful cards and donations to Chelsea's Medical Fund, when they learned of her diagnosis of liver disease, which is terminal.

But, thanks to you, Chelsea is alive and we are spending quality time together. All because of you and the South Shore Humane Society for setting up a fund for you to donate to for her care. What that care has done is given Chelsea additional weeks, months and maybe even longer. We are being positive and hope to celebrate her eighth birthday May 23, 1994 and with your help, we may just do it. And you can be sure that balloons will be flying from our front stair banisters on that day!

Dr. Allen Sisson at Angell Memorial Hospital in Boston has been treating Chelsea and, because he is moving, Dr. Jean Duddy will now take over Chelsea's care. Chelsea visits Angell Memorial every two weeks for blood work and a complete checkup. With each visit, a new medication has been added to her daily care and I think we have surprised the doctors because so far, thank God, she has tolerated them and as long as she does, we will continue to share quality time.

But her treatment is expensive and we have a long way to go. Her medication costs approximately $300 a month and the blood work another $200. In September, she will need another biopsy of her liver done and that will cost between $300 and $600 just for that one day! She obviously is worth it; you have showed us that by caring. Donations have come from children, dogs, adults and groups. We love and thank all of you.

Her fund is still open and every dollar is important. So if you know someone who has been away for the summer or on vacation and is just learning about Chelsea's illness, please let them know there is still time to help.

We have been given a very special gift, a precious gift: quality time. Chelsea is alert, happy, loves to ride in the car or go for a walk. Yes, she tires easily, but the time we share is precious and all because of you. We are eternally grateful. Please keep her in your prayers.

18th Army Band Final Summerfest Concert Sept. 1

The 18th Army Band from Fort Devens will appear at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheatre Wednesday Sept. 1 at 7 p.m.

This will be the final appearance as Fort Devens will be deactivated in 1995.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia who heads up the Summerfest program said that in the event of inclement weather the concert will be moved indoors to the Quincy Vo-Tech Gym.

This concert marks the ninth and last concert of the year and will be sponsored by the Mayor's office in tribute to the farewell concert of the 18th Army Band.

The Amphitheatre where the concert will be held is adjacent to Adams Field and the Richard Koch recreation complex off Southern Artery. The open air theatre seats 1000 and accommodates others who bring lawn chairs. Access is also provided for the disabled. The concerts are aired live by local cable.

Local High School Students Complete Peer Leadership Training

A group of teenagers from Quincy High School and North Quincy High School recenty graduated from a statewide campaign to prevent underage drinking and driving.

The final training session and graduation, held yesterday, marks the completion of a five-week series of training. The trainings, which uses a specially developed manual called ROADRAP: Peer Leadership Preventing Underage Drinking and Driving, are the first in a statewide series of prevention education and public awareness activities.

The campaign, called Krooz Controlled, is a joint effort of Arbella Mutual Insurance Compnay of Quincy and The Medical Foundation of Boston.

Unlike most programs targeting drinking and driving, the Krooz Controlled campaign uses a peer leadership approach to prevention. Using the ROADRAP manual, prevention educators throughout the state will train young people to become peer leaders-role models from all walks of life who will help their peers develop behaviors and attitudes that will prevent them from drinking and driving.

City To Hire 18-20 Firefighters

WINIFRED TIRRELL, 64, is rushed to an awaiting ambulance by Norfolk-Bristol Ambulance EMTs after suffering respiratory distress after fleeing burning home at 63 Edgewater Dr. Mrs. Tirrell and her daughter, Winifred Morris, 37, were treated and released from Quincy Hospital, the latter suffering smoke inhalation. Two firefighters, Lt. Joseph Verlicco and Firefighter Chester Aniolowski suffered minor burns.

QUINCY FIREFIGHTERS stretch lines to burning home at 63 Edgewater Dr., Houghs Neck, at 10:40 p.m. last Thursday. The two-alarm blaze, which started on the second floor, caused $125,000 damage. The occupants of the home, Winifred Tirrell, her daughter, Winifred Morris, and two children are staying with friends.

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The strength of the city's fire department could be boosted by as many as 18 to 20 additional firefighters by early November, according to fire and city officials.

The new recruits will replace retirees who have left the department over the past two years, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday. He added that because the recruits would be filling already vacant positions as opposed to new ones, the municipal budget will not impacted by their presence on the city payroll.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the fire department is currently doing police background checks on 47 applicants interested in becoming Quincy firefighters.

The department is currently manned by 138 people and is budgeted for 156, the chief noted. In addition to the 18 available vacancies, Gorman said that two other positions will soon open up because a pair of veterans recently filed retirement papers.

Sheets said that instead of replacing the 18 retirees, the city used funds that would have gone toward new salaries on overtime pay for those still with the department.

"By using the money for overtime, we were actually able to offer better fire protection across the city," said Sheets. "We had two choices (because of the poor economy the past two years): close down one of the stations, or keep the stations open and not fill the vacancies, and we chose the latter."

Quincy firefighters currently make $24,322 for their first year on the department, Sheets said, and $30,823 annually after that unless subsequently promoted. The mayor noted that in addition to money saved from retirees not replaced, the city also annually saves $10,000 per firefighter in benefits for every vacancy on the department that is not filled.

Sheets said the city will now fill as many of the vacancies as possible because the fire department is beginning to feel the wear and tear of being undermanned. He stressed that because the funds being subtracted from the city budget were already available and being used for overtime, the budget will not be impacted if the vacancies are filled.

"These are not new jobs," Sheets said.

Of the 47 applicants, 13 are veterans and 34 tied with a mark of 100 percent on the state firefighter civil service test, according to Carol Keene of the Quincy Personnel Department. She added that the city initially received a list of 66 potential candidates, but 19 subsequently failed to contact the personnel department because of apparent lack of interest.

Gorman said those who pass the police background check will then take a strength test and physical and psychological examinations. The final candidates, who will be chosen by Sheets, will go through a seven-week training course run by the Quincy Fire Department.

Gorman added that the new firefighters could join the department by "late October or Nov. 1."

Both Gorman and Sheets said they were uncertain how many firefighters would be hired, although each said he would ideally like to see all of the vacancies filled. Sheets did not specify what criteria he would use in choosing the firefighters, saying only that he wanted "the best people possible" working for the department.

"Our goal would be to fill all the positions," said Sheets. "Over time, an undermanned department begins to wear down and its people get tired."

"It puts an impact on the whole department," added Gorman. "Everything seems to hurt. But we're (Quincy) not the only ones--everyone's in the same boat. In fact, we're actually one of the few cities in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts that hasn't closed a fire house."

The mayor agreed.

"We're better off than most," he said.

Police Officer On Mountain Bike Catches Two Suspects

A Quincy police officer arrested two suspects last weekend following a wild high-speed chase on Sea St.

Not bad for a man riding a bicycle.

According to Police Chief Francis Mullen, Officer Richard Praetsch was riding one of the two mountain bikes recently purchased by the police department last Saturday afternoon when he reached the lights at the corner of Southern Artery and Sea St. Noticing that the vehicle in front of him had an expired license plate, Praetsch pulled alongside the car and asked the driver to pull over.

Mullen said the driver, a young woman from Boston, ignored Praetsch and tried to escape by accelerating east on Sea St. Mullen said the suspect swerved from lane to lane, cutting off other motorists, while Praetsch followed on his mountain bike.

At 55 Sea St., Mullen said, the woman struck a curb on blew out one of her tires. Although the driver and her companion, another young woman from Boston, fleed the scene on foot, Officer Praetsch found them hiding in the kitchen of a nearby restaurant. The pair was

Washington St. Sidewalk Project Being Completed

Sidewalks are being completed on both sides of Washington St. from Southern Artery to Chubbuck St. in Quincy Point, announces Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro.

DeCristofaro said it was his intention to have trees planted along this stretch of Washington St., but it was discovered that power lines buried on both sides of the street are not deep enough to allow trees to be planted.

Because of this, trees will be available to Ward 2 residents if they call DeCristofaro at 376-1341 any week day between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Quincy-To-Quincy:

280,000 Pounds Food-Supplies To Illinois

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Final numbers from the city's Quincy to Quincy, Ill. relief effort in July show that the city collected 280,000 pounds of food and supplies and over $21,000 in monetary contributions for victims of the flood-ravaged Midwest.

Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley, who initiated the effort, said Quincy sent a total of seven 48-foot trailers filled with food and supplies to Illinois. Each truck was designed to carry approximately 20 tons, he said, bringing the total to 140 tons or 280,000 pounds.

Bradley added that although a few local businesses donated food and supplies, most of the contributions came from residents and the majority of those residents were from Quincy.

"The predominance of food and supplies came from Quincy and others on the border like Dorchester, Braintree, Weymouth and Milton, but over three-quarters of the donations were from Quincy."

Two trucks were donations by Stop & Shop, Bradley said, one from Star Market and one from Shaw's Supermarket. In addition, he said, three came from Travel Line, a trailer service which Stop & Shop uses to deliver fruit from California to the East Coast.

Monetary contributions, which were collected by the office of Mayor James Sheets, totalled $21,442.89, according to mayoral secretary Mary Driscoll.

Of that total, Driscoll said approximately $1,200 came from businesses and the rest from residents. She added that about 80 percent of the money collected was donated by Quincy residents.

Driscoll noted, however, that donations came from everywhere from Concord, Mass. to the State of Florida.

"It was so impressive," she said. "We had little kids coming in with pocket change, and one elderly woman donated $500. It was unbelievable."

Bradley said he, also, was "delighted" by the results of the drive.

"I was overwhelmed," he said. "Word can't express how you feel after something like this. I figured if I had one 24-foot Ryder's truck to send, it would be nice. But it just kept mushrooming."

Bradley expressed gratitude toward Quincy Police Officer Bob Hanna and Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director Tony Siciliano for their help in coordinating the relief effort, as well as local media outlets who helped increase public awareness about it.

He added that the generosity of the people of Quincy in aiding the effort did not surprise him at all.

"I'm extremely proud of the people of Quincy, but whenever there's a crisis, they're always willing to lend a helping hand," he said. "You can't help but feel anything but pride coming from here."

STUDENTS OF Quincy Afterschool Day Care Summer Camp stenciled this environmental notice on several storm drains in West Quincy. Montclair, Lincoln-Hancock, Squantum and Merrymount Schools participated. Advisors included Sine Pounder, day care director; Marge Milne, Quincy Housing Authority and Leo Kelly, former QHA employee. Students plan to stencil more drains in the city this fall.

"DON'T DUMP" warning is stenciled in front of a storm drain on Granite St. by students of Quincy Afterschool Day Care as part of a program to urge the public not to dump rubbish in storm drains as they are part of the MWRA system that drains into Boston Harbor. Daniel Jenkins, center, spray paints stencil held by Adam Culley and Angela Sass.

Home Quarters Hearing

The City Council and Planning Board will continue a joint public hearing regarding the Home Quarters company Tuesday, Sept. 7 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The hearing, which regards Home Quarters' proposal to build a store in Braintree on the West Quincy line, was recessed June 28.

arrested and charged with a number of motor vehicle violations, including driving to endanger and using a motor vehicle without authority.

Mullen said Officer Praetsch and Officer Scott Smith will routinely patrol Quincy Center and other business areas on the mountain bikes.

"According to other police departments around the country, the mountain bike has become a great tool in the fight against crime," said Mullen. "The mountain bike is fast and silent when responding to a crime scene and the initial cost and upkeep are minimal, compared to a cruiser."

Flood Relief Video, News Clippings Mailed To Clinton

A video, news clippings and photographs telling the story of Quincy's relief effort to her sister city of Quincy, Ill. has been sent to President Bill Clinton by Anthony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management Agency.

One of the articles was a column written by Mayor James Sheets which appeared in The Quincy Sun Aug. 12. Sheets and Siciliano aided the flood victims in July.

"I am sure you will agree that the videotape and news article clearly demonstrate what volunteerism is all about . . which is . . people helping people," Siciliano said in a letter to the president.

"Mayor James Sheets appealed to the people of our City to donate much needed items such as groceries, toiletries, etc. and money for people of our namesake, Quincy, Illinois who were devastated by the great flood. The outpouring of contributions was overwhelming.

"We here in Quincy, Massachusetts are truly proud of our people who responded to a cry for help and opened up their hearts to the people of Quincy, Illinois who were the victims of a devastating disaster.

"Once again, volunteerism has proved to be our country's most precious asset," Siciliano said.

HELP FOR YOUR ACHING BACK

Aches and pains are part of life, and pain in the lower back is just one of those things we have to live with. Right? Wrong! While it is true that our upright, two-footed stance makes us vulnerable to back problems, it can't take all the blame for the epidemic of back pain that continues to grow in this country. If you experience significant, persistant, or recurring back pain, it is absolutely essential to get it diagnosed. The cause could be a disease that is affecting the back, infection in another part of the body, bone degeneration, muscle spasm, torn or pulled muscles or ligaments, or curvature of the spine. Conservative treatment involving exercise is often recommended for back problems before resorting to surgery.

P.S. You can help your doctor diagnose and treat your back pain by keeping a diary of what hurts, when, and how much.

Many people find that they can keep the back problems that have plagued them for years at bay with the help of medically prescribed exercises. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call any of the doctors—myself, Dr. Lisa Antonelli, or Ronald Dunlap, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment. We have more parking at our new office, located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Light Vote Forecast

This year's city preliminary election may very well be the one in which every vote really does count.

SHEA

City Clerk Joseph Shea sees a light voter turnout.

"I don't think it will be more than 20 percent," he says. "And it could be under that."

It looks like an early night for election workers.

"We should have it all wrapped up (results tabulation) by 10 p.m.," Shea says.

The election is Tuesday, Sept. 14 and the only contest on the ballot is for School Committee. Nine candidates are seeking the six nominations for the three seats in the Nov. 2 final election.

Shea thinks the small number of new voters who enrolled for the preliminary election is an indicator of a light turnout that day.

"We've had under 400 voter register in the past six months," he says.

And, in the past couple of weeks during the final registration sessions the city gained under 40 new voters.

Only 12 registered in five different locations throughout the city one night. Only five on an all-day Saturday session at City Hall. And, only 15 showed up during the final 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. session at City Hall. (Total enrollment now: 45,174.)

"A far cry from last year," notes Shea. "On our final registration day for the Presidential election we got 1,800 new voters."

What you need to attract new voters, he says, is a main election bout. Like president, governor or mayor.

There's no mayoral race in Quincy this year which will keep the voter turnout down in both the preliminary and final elections.

But with a City Council at-large race, two ward council contests and the School Committee finale, the Nov. 2 election should bring out more voters than the preliminary Shea says.

Meanwhile, the nine School Committee candidates—incumbent Ron Mariano, Sean Barry, Jo Ann Bragg, Christine Cedrone, Gregory Hanley, Toni Kabilian, Ronald McCarthy, John McDuff and John Spada—are going to have to work at getting the vote out.

One vote could really make the difference.

SENATOR Michael Morrissey and family were in the right place at the right time on Martha's Vineyard last week.

MORRISSEY

They were in the Bunch of Grapes book store in Vineyard Haven when this announcement came over the in-store PA system: "The President is expected. You may leave or continue to shop."

No one, of course, left and soon in came Clinton, Hillary and Chelsea. The door was locked behind them so no one else could get in.

Morrissey, his wife, Joann and son James, 5, got to shake Clinton's hand. Joann's sister, Ellen Pecce of Braintree, shook hands with Clinton and Hillary. Morrissey's daughter, Colby, 8, and the Pecce children, Teresa, 8, and Krista, 6, shook hands with Chelsea.

The Clintons were so friendly that Ellen told them: "We're having spaghetti and meatballs at our place tonight, we'd love for you to join us."

"Thank you for your kind offer," Hillary replied. "But we have something else on for tonight."

The Clintons shook hands or said hello to everyone in the store.

"They were very pleasant," says Morrissey.

The only disappointed member of the family was Morrissey's brother-in-law, Bob Pecce.

He was standing outside the store when the Clintons arrived and got locked out by the Secret Service.

QUINCY'S UNCLE SAM Rounseville made it to Martha's Vineyard himself last week for a breather.

UNCLE SAM

In full regalia, he carried a sign proclaiming: "No Photos, Please. I Am On Vacation."

But the cameras clicked away.

SEAN BARRY, candidate for School Committee, hopes "9" proves to be a lucky number for him.

Barry is holding a pre-primary fund-raiser Sept. 9 (ninth month, ninth day) in the Quincy Room at Walsh's Restaurant, Billings Rd., North Quincy. Tickets are $9. (The time though, is 7 not 9).

But 9 is there again on election day. Barry's name is ninth (and last) on the ballot.

MEANWHILE, Ron McCarthy, also a candidate for School Committee, hopes the date he picked for his final fundraiser before the preliminary election is a good omen for him. It will be held Wednesday, Sept. 8—the first day of school.

AND SPEAKING OF School Committee candidates, the house that Greg Hanley lives in seems to be a political inspiration.

The house, located at 32 Shed St., was purchased from Edward Graham who served three terms as Ward 1 City Councillor from 1968 to 1973.

Graham encouraged Hanley to go into politics. Graham now lives in Weymouth.

THE BIG QUESTION at City Hall this week involves City Clerk Joseph Shea. Specifically his new beard. To shave or not to shave is the question.

Shea has been cultivating the shrubbery for about a month now and so far the reaction has been pretty even as to whether he should keep it or shave it.

"Distinguished looking," say proponents.

"Makes you look too old," say opponents.

But what could be the final deciding vote may already be in. Shea asked his wife, Josephine, how she liked it. She told him. She doesn't.

Linking Quincy's Historic Sites

Visitors Find Trolley An Educational Experience

By BRYAN CONNOLLY

Did you know that when you drive along Hancock Street in Quincy you are driving on part of the oldest road in the United States?

Did you know that the South Shore Bank in Quincy Center, formerly named the Quincy Stone Bank, was the first bank in the United States to earn capital from the sale of stock?

Did you know that Delaney's Pub on Franklin Street in Quincy was once a grade school attended by the second president of the United States, John Adams?

If not, then perhaps you should take advantage of the outstanding tours offered by the National Parks Service, which now runs a trolley to the Adams birthplaces and mansion from its office at Presidents Place in Quincy Center.

The Quincy tourism industry has been thriving this past year, due in part to the addition of the red Beantown Trolley which cruises around to the historical land marks twice every hour.

"The addition of the trolley looks like a great thing to improve access to the sites," said Barney Loiter of Columbia, Maryland, who has visited the Adams' mansion and flower garden fairly regularly over the past twenty five years.

"It's really made it much easier and much more enjoyable for people because they don't have to worry about getting to the different parts of the park," said Park Ranger John Stanwich.

On any given day tourists from California to Concord can be found viewing the sites. Whether they come as presidential fanatics, history buffs, curious tourists or interested local residents, most leave with a deep feeling of satisfaction for an experience often found much more enjoyable and educational than expected.

ON THE HISTORIC TRAIL--The familiar Beantown Trolley passes the Adams Mansion while making one of its many trips along the Quincy Historic Trail.

Laurie DeLeon and her mother Mary Lavigne, both of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, travel every year to some distant point and make certain to visit the National Historic Sites "because they are the most interesting," according to DeLeon.

After her trip through Quincy's offerings, she said, "We really enjoyed it a lot. We find these kind of sight seeings to be much more enjoyable than the big cities."

Mary and Alden Knapp of Oneonta, New York came to Quincy because they have an affection for historical homes and have trying to see as many presidents' homes as possible. "I hated history when I was in school," explained Mary, "but I love seeing it. It kind of brings it alive."

"I'm just amazed with the Adams family. I've been fascinated by them for years," said Denise Christensen of Mount Pleasant, Michigan, who first gained her interest in the family by reading the writings of Abigail Adams.

"I think this is one of the best places I've been to because it has so much stuff that it takes a full day to get through it," she added. "You don't have to go to Boston."

"I've enjoyed it very much, and I'm going to do a lot more reading about the two countries," said June Pearson, who was visiting all the way from Nottingham Shire, England. "It's a lovely town."

"I actually thought of passing by it," said Irwin Starr, who was travelling from Simi Valley, California, with his wife Renee. "I'm so glad I didn't."

The flower garden alongside the Adams' mansion, which is the main attraction for a few tourists like Loiter, remains as one the park's most beautiful hidden secrets, even though secrecy is not the intention of the rangers.

"It's a good time of year to come because the flowers are in their summer peak," said Park Ranger Mona Phelps. "It's like a secret place. A lot of the plants were here from John and Abigail."

A botanical group from New Zealand, in fact, came to to view the gardens earlier this summer, and some artists frequent the placid surroundings to do their work. "It gets more

Council Adjourns Investigation Of Investigation

Sept. 2-8 1950 43 Years Ago

A City Council investigation of City Manager William J. Deegan's investigation of the Fire Department adjourned without action after Chief Thomas F. Gorman conceded that Deegan's recommendations were reasonable.

But Councillor Frank N. Orcutt, who spearheaded the Council investigation, fought off a move by fellow Councillor David J. Cowley that the "entire matter be dropped."

Councillor Alfred G. Helfrich moved that Deegan and his investigation be given a "clean bill of health" and that the Council vote its confidence in the Fire Department but neither motion got a second.

Deegan explained the methods he used in carrying out his investigation. which resulted in a letter of recommendations to Gorman and Councillor Edna B, Austin asked the chief:

"Did you find any demand, request or recommendation in the letter unreasonable?"

"No," replied the chief.

Members of the Council's investigating team included the councillors, Chief Gorman, Deegan and his assistant, and Joseph A. Sullivan, vive president of the State Federation of Labor.

City Solicitor Arthur I. Burgess resigned from the committee on the eve of the meeting, saying that he was neither an informer, a reformer or an investigator of investigations.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Marine Corps Battle Color Ceremony Here Sept. 11

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro announces the U.S. Marine Corps Battle Color Ceremony will return to Quincy for a performance Saturday, Sept. 11 at 7 p.m. at Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The event is coordinated by the New England Chapter of the 2nd Marine Division Association and The Caddy Detachment of the Marine Corps League.

The U.S. Marine Corps Battle Color Ceremony is known across our country and throughout the world for its precision drill, musical and marching arrangements. The Drum and Bugle Corps, the Silent Drill Team and the Marine Corps Color Guard are featureed in this unique display of art, skill and ceremony.

The evening begins with a drill and concert exhibition known as a "concert-in-motion". Their program includes a colorful mixture of popular and patriotic music. Then, the Silent Drill Team takes center-field spotlighting their famed drill routine that has thrilled thousands. The precise handling of their M-1 rifles through all movements are the hallmark of this routine which is performed without verbal command.

The drill climaxes with the performance of rifle inspections in which a series of intricate and precise movements are executed.

After completion of the drill, the Marine Color Guard marches onto the field with our National Color, carried by the Color Sergeant of the U.S. Marine Corps and the Marine Corps Battle Color with its 49 multicolored streamers joins in. Following the presentation of colors, the National Anthem will be played and the Marines will Pass in Review to the Marine Corps Hymn.

"This is a wonderful family evening of entertainment and national pride as this is the performance that is put on for visiting heads of state in Washington," said DeCristofaro.

For further information and tickets, the following people can be contacted: Martin Flaherty, Sr. 470-2198, Bob LeFleur at 376-1194, Dee Lawson at 984-0220 and DeCristofaro at 472-1265. Trevor Davies and Gerry Nichols are also committee members who have worked to make this event possible for people of the South Shore.

As a result of fundraising efforts by the committee handling this event, admission costs will be held to $2 per person so that it is an affordable event for families to attend.

New Cable Rates To Affect Most Customers

Some local customers' monthly cable bills will decrease, some will increase, and some will change slightly effective this week.

Continental Cablevision officials said this week the company must make numerous changes in cable service and equipment prices to comply with the 1992 federal cable law and new regulations issued by the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) which went into effect yesterday (Wednesday).

Continental will not benefit financially from the changes, which include adjustments in rates for cable service packages and equipment fees, elimination of some fees and the introduction of new options for customers, officials said.

Under the new FCC rate regulations, cable companies must adjust their rates to either a "benchmark" or average rate determined by the FCC, or a rate based on the cost of doing business in a community.

"We are substantially reducing the cost of an additional cable outlet from $7.95 to zero per month while the cost of a remote control drops from $1 to 21 cents per month," said Continental General Manager Steve Farquhar. "On the other hand, the actual cost of some services is higher than what we have been charging, so those prices will increase. For example, the cost of Standard cable service (50 channels) will increase from $19.40 to $21.12." Convertor box charges will increase from $1.25 to $1.91 per month, be added.

Basic Broadcast, 27 channels including the Boston broadcast channels will increase from $8.50 to $11.46 monthly. The company will institute a new four-channel "mini-tier" that includes CNN-Headline News, Turner Network Television, WTBS and WWOR for an additional $1.68 monthly. The new service can be purchased along with Basic Broadcast for a total of $13.14 monthly.

In addition, Continental officials said the company must eliminate its senior discount. Continental being offering the discount in 1984 to customers 65 and older. Under the new regulations, Continental cannot offset the cost of the discount by charging more to other cable customers. The regulation requires the same pricing for all residential customers.

Most installation related rates will change in order to reflect the actual cost of performing this work and in keeping with the new regulations, officials said. A new standard installation will become $52.51, installation in home with existing wiring will be $28.44. Multi-unit installation will become $26.87 and $29.28 for the installation of an additional cable outlet.

Premium service rates such as those charged for HBO or Sportschannel continue to be unregulated and will increase from $9.95 to $10.95 per month while the second and third premium channel will go from $7.55 to $9 each. Each subsequent premium channel will be an additional $7. The Sportschannel-NESN package will increase from $14.95 to $15.95.

Officials said Continental will also introduce a new "Take-2" premium package of 2 premiums from a group including HBO, Showtime or the Disney Channel. Any two of these three premium services will be discounted to $15.95, a savings of $4 from the new higher rates. Existing customers presently in the "Take-2" package will see automatic savings in those rates on their September bill.

The Quincy Sun

We're Celebrating Our 25th Anniversary!!!

We're celebrating our 25th anniversary with a Special Commemorative Issue of The Quincy Sun on Thursday, Sept. 23, 1993.

It will be a nostalgic look at a most significant quarter century in Quincy's history, featuring the top stories and photos going back to The Sun's very first issue Sept. 26, 1968.

We hope you will join us as we look back on such stories as the Coming of the T, the Blizzard of '78, those red hot mayoral election battles, the issues that affected our community, our Page 1 New Year Babies, and back to when the Fore River Shipyard was turning out ship after ship, the landmarks that have disappeared and their replacements, and, sadly, the prominent members of the community we have said farewell to.

Twenty five years of Quincy and The Quincy Sun. This special issue will be a collector's item.

We hope you will be part of it.

Advertising rates for this special supplement will be:

Quarter page, 5" wide x 8" deep, $200. Half page, 10" wide x 8" deep, $325. Full page, 10" wide x 16 " deep, $595.

Reservations deadline is Sept. 2. Copy deadline is Sept. 9.

Ads may be retail or congratulatory. And maybe you would like to mention your own anniversary.

For reservations or more information, please call us at 471-3100.

Call Answering Service For Homeless At Fr. Bill's Place

Homeless men and women seeking help at Father Bill's Place in Quincy soon will get more than clean beds, nutritious meals and expert counseling and advice.

They also will get a personal phone number and answering service to help them in their search for permanent homes and jobs.

In September, Father Bill's Place, Bentley College and New England Telephone will begin a year-long project to demonstrate how voice messaging can be used to improve the delivery of services to homeless people. Using technology of its Call Answering services, New England Telephone will provide Father Bill's Place with 50 voice mail boxes, each with its own telephone number. Father Bill's staff and students from Bentley College Service-Learning Project, which works with the Quincy agency, will assign and administer use of the mailboxes by the clients.

Clients will not be able to make calls with the numbers, but using a phone at Father Bill's Place or elsewhere they will be able to retrieve messages left at their numbers.

"Not having a phone service is just one of the many hurdles homeless men and women face," said Joseph Finn, executive director at Father Bill's Place. "They often can not be reached by phone, or have to give the number of the shelter, which instantly identifies them as homeless people.

In this project, they will be able to leave a telephone number with a prospective landlord or employer who, when they dial the number, will hear a recording much like those heard on many home telephone lines."

Messages left for clients will be stored in a computer that New England Telephone maintains and operates for its Call Answering service, which is available throughout much of Eastern Massachusetts. Clients will retrieve their messages by dialing their access number and password.

In addition to helping clients get information, Finn said the voice mail project "will provide them with the legitimacy of a normal telephone number and the opportunity to demonstrate, to themselves and others, that they can use it in a responsible and effective way."

New England Telephone Product Manger Vern Nelson said the project also will allow the company to test a new way of using its Call Answering technology--to help people who do no t have a telephone line.

"Having access to communications and information is critical for everyone," said Nelson. "We hope to demonstrate that new technologies and services can help people, even those without homes, communicate better with each other."

Father Bill's Place, sponsored by Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, for the past six years has served thousands of homeless adults on the South Shore. Named after one of its founders, Father Bill's operates a 45-bed overnight shelter at 38 Broad Street and a 20-bed overflow shelter at St. John's School in Quincy.

"We're very pleased to have facilitated this partnership between New England Telephone and Father Bill's," said Bentley Service-Learning Project administrator James Ostrow, an associate professor of sociology. "While there are other voice-mail projects for the homeless around the country, this is the first one we know of in the Northeast involving a college' community service program.

"Bentley students will be able to apply their business education skills to help users of the voice-mail system develop interviewing, resume-building, financial management and other employment-related skills," Ostrow said.

The Bentley Service-Learning Project lets students at the Waltham college expand their educational experience by working with community and social service agencies throughout the are. Bentley students have been working with Fr. Bill's Place for the past two years.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Labor Day was first celebrated in 1882 by a parade and holiday in New York City.

Today, in the minds of some people, Labor Day will signal the end of summer, the last long holiday of the season...a time for a final outing for swimming, picnicing, boating or just loafing. The real meaning of Labor Day has been lost for many in the frantic pursuit of fun.

That is unfortunate because never before have so many people been able to enjoy the leisure, the luxuries and comforts we see around us in our United States. The rights of labor never have been so certain, nor its obligation to act in a responsible manner more necessary. We must never, therefore, become insensible to the time-honored virtues of thrift, competence and pride in a job well done.

These are the characteristics that have made possible the turning of Labor Day into a holiday of fun and leisure. These are the virtues that Labor Day ought to commemorate and, if the nation is to survive in its greatness, they will be needed as never before in the years to come...

After 4th Straight Zone Title

Morrisette Looks To 50th Year With Optimism

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion baseball team won its fourth straight Zone 6 championship this year (two straight as undisputed champion and two as co-champions) and next year will celebrate the 50th anniversary of its baseball program.

Morrisette defeated Needham in its state playoff opening series but was eliminated by state and Northeast Regional champion New Bedford in the second round.

Dave Perdios, a former Morrisette star, who completed his seventh season as coach, loses eight players from this season's squad but will have 11 players returning in 1994.

Perdios has a fine coaching career and he said that the team's record the past three years has been one that will be looked up at for years to come. During that time, Morrisette has a 67-15-3 record, the best three-year mark in the post's history. It captured three zone titles, a state championship and qualified for the state playoffs all three years.

Leaving are pitchers Mike Patch, Sean Donovan and Matt O'Toole, infielders Jay Schnabel, Robbie Kane, Pat Shea and Adam Calvert and catcher Serge Belcastro.

Patch put together a career record of 15-2 with two saves, Donovan was 12-3-1 and O'Toole was 10-1-1.

All three had an ERA of under 2. Patch will attend college in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Donovan will attend UMass/Dartmouth and O'Toole will return to Massasoit Community College.

Kane, an outstanding second baseman, will head for Trinity after leading the team in hitting (.457 average), walks (19) and steals (12).

Another three-year starter, Shea is going to Brandeis University. He had another fine year, leading the team with 33 runs scored and 33 hits. He batted .407.

Schnabel is also headed for college after playing standout ball at first base. He is a power hitter who won several games with his bat.

Calvert, known as a super sub, always came ready to play anywhere and contributed heavily. He will also attend college.

Belcastro will return to Assumption College after a fine three-year career as catcher-first baseman. He struck out only once in 87 at bats, believed to be a team record.

Returning next week will be hard-hitting outfielder Dave Reinhart, a two-year veteran who batted .413 and led the team with 27 RBI and 13 extra base hits.

Also returning for one more year are Dan Duncan, outfielder-pitcher; and outfielders Mark Cahill and Brian Hayes.

There are seven returnees with two years of eligibility left, led by Tom Malvesti, outstanding shortstop who was largely responsible for a team record 27 double plays this season. He is also a fine pitcher.

Jim Sapienza, a non-roster player and a fine outfielder, will be on the roster next summer; Andy Joyce, a catcher-infielder, appears ready for a starting role; and A.J. Carthas, Chris Cotter and Sean Dolbeare all have fine potential and will see more action in 1994.

Morrisette will mark the 50th anniversary of its baseball program next year and manager Ray Cattaneo has applied for the state tournament next August at Adams Field.

Most of the staff is expected back including Perdios, assistant coach Tom Malvesti, assistants Bob Biagini and Larry Taglieri, Cattaneo and athletic officer Frank Osborne.

Veteran scorer-statistician Richard "Berger" Ryan submitted his resignation but Perdios and Cattaneo, in addition to several parents, have urged him to return next year.

Although undecided, Ryan, 73, is expected to return for the post's 50th anniversary of baseball.

Morrisette officially closed the season with the annual team dinner at which Bob Saville, who played for Morrisette in 1963, '64 and '65, was the speaker.

All players received jackets and Tom Mullaney, who had video tapes made of the team's games at the Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y., presented a copy to each player. Gus Russo, former athletic officer, presented each with a copy of all the team's press clippings put into book form.

Chaplain Ed Boland offered the invocation and post commander Ed McAllister and City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, representing Mayor James Sheets, offered their congratulations to the team.

Quincy 12-Year-Olds Complete Good Season On Disappointing Note

Quincy's 12-year-old all stars, missing several vacationing players, completed a successful season in disappointing fashion as it went 1-3 in the recent Needham Little League Tournament.

Quincy lost its opener to Needham, 13-5, as pitcher Mike Powers was the victim of costly errors and a lack of timely hitting.

Billy Connolly and Pat Dolbeare had three hits apiece and Jose Diaz, named Quincy's MVP, had two hits, including a two-run double. Dolbeare also drove in two runs.

Quincy bounced back to defeat Hull, 7-4, behind Chris Bregoli's three-hit pitching.

Quincy scored three runs in the second inning as Mike McEvoy doubled and scored on Kevin Walsh's single. Bregoli doubled in Walsh and he scored on Brian Doyle's single.

Quincy added three in the fourth to break a 4-4 tie. Walsh led off with a single, Doyle singled and Chris Cummings drove in two with a single. Dolbeare singled and Shawn Manning beat a bunt with Cummings scoring.

Walsh had three hits and Doyle and Dolbeare two each. Doyle was selected Quincy's star of the game.

Quincy lost of Parkway, 3-2, despite an outstanding pitching performance by Dolbeare.

Trailing 1-0 in the fifth, Walsh walked and Bregoli hit a two-run homer to give Quincy a 2-1 lead.

Bregoli came in to relieve Dolbeare and, with one out, Parkway scored the two winning runs on a single, two walks and another single.

Bregoli was Quincy's star of the game.

Quincy then lost of Parkway A, 6-1, as a lack of timely hitting did it again.

Dolbeare started and gave up three runs in the first inning. Quincy got one back in the second as Dolbeare singled and was doubled home by Cummings.

McEvoy took over for Dolbeare and pitched five innings, allowed three runs and five hits.

Connolly, the team's star of the game, had three hits, Walsh had two and Chad Fitzpatrick one.

TOURISTS BOARD the Beantown Trolley which provides visitors with access to the Adams Birthplaces, Adams Mansion and United First Parish Church. The narrated tour also gives visitors information and historical tidbits about the "City of Presidents."

Visitors Find Trolley An Educational, Enjoyable Experience

beautiful every year," said one Quincy resident.

Although some tourists felt slightly rushed by the trolley and others were a bit confused by the location of the trolley's starting point, reaction to the new touring system has been very positive. One point that did surface fairly consistently, however, was the need for a hotel in Quincy.

The Starrs, who spent the night in a Woburn hotel after their day of touring in Quincy, commented that Quincy would have been a much more ideal place to stay because they would not have had to travel far from the historic sites, they would have been right outside Boston, and they would have been very close to public transportation. "This is really a wonderful location," said Mary Starr.

Trolley driver Peter Callina explained, "I have a lot of people coming and asking me where they can stay, and what can I tell them? The nearest hotels are in Braintree. If somebody had the money, it would be a gold mine."

Mayor James Sheets said his administration and Quincy 2000, the public-private partnership charged with revitalizing Quincy's business districts, are "fast-tracking" their effort to bring a major hotel to Quincy Center.

"We're working on this. We're trying to fast-track it because we believe the market for a hotel is here," Sheet said. Realizing that the hotel industry has been hit hard by the recent recession, the mayor said the city would like to negotiate with a large hotel chain which will not only build a hotel but provide financing for the project.

"We're compiling a list of those hotel chains and hotel developers which put those packages together," he added.

Although there has been a recent upswing in the number of Quincy natives and residents of other local towns attending the tours, they have been far out numbered by long distance travelers. With the trolley continuing to run twice every hour, seven days a week, Park Rangers hope for a boost in the number of local tourists.

Bragg Nominated For Inclusion In Two National Publications

JoAnn Bragg, a candidate for a seat on the Quincy School Committee, has been nominated for national recognition and inclusion in two publications, Who's Who in the East and 2000 Notable American Women.

Each award is based upon both professional accomplishment and community service.

Who's Who in the East identifies individuals distinctively important to the business, cultural, political and academic communities of eastern United States. Individuals are listed because of noteworthy achievements that have proved of lasting value.

2000 Notable American Women also recognizes achievement. Women are selected whose varied professional achievement and responsibilities to family and community deserve the highest recognition.

Bragg, a lifelong resident of Quincy, resides at 74 East Elm Ave. with her husband Rick Bragg and their three children. She owns and operates a home-based tax preparation and consulting business she started in 1978.

Bragg has served the Quincy public schools and city youth for 10 years as a PTO officer and in various positions with the Citywide Parents Council.

She also serves on the board of directors for School-Community Partnership and of Afterschool Day Care, and recently organized parents and community leaders to work toward the opening of youth centers in Quincy.

"I am proud to be considered for these distinguished awards," Bragg said. "I think I've been successful in balancing the needs of a professional career, school and community involvement, and my family."

Cheney Urges Rollback Of Senior Citizen Cable Rates

Councillor Michael Cheney has written to Congressman Gerry Studds, Sen. Edward Kennedy and Sen. John Kerry to urge them to contact the FCC in an effort to roll back senior citizen cable television rates.

According to Continental Cablevision officials, the senior discount rate will no longer be offered. The change comes as a result of new rules and regulations issued to cable companies across the company effective yesterday (Wednesday).

Cheney said that many seniors' only form of entertainment is cable and some of these seniors are shut-ins.

"This may not seem like an earth-shattering issue; however, to senior citizens on a fixed income who rely on cable for information, news and entertainment, this will be a dramatic increase in their rates," he said.

Cheney also said he hopes the FCC will allow for a "Lifeline Rate" for seniors, and urges representatives to contact their U.S. legislatures to encourage a rollback of cable rates.

READING AN ENGINE'S HEALTH

One of the first tests that an auto technician will perform in a comprehensive tune-up is a cylinder compression test. By using a special gauge to measure the pressure in each combustion chamber of a running engine, much can be told about the engine. If the readings are quite low or erratic, it is useless to continue with the tune-up until the problem is cured. Generally, low compression readings may indicate worn rings, valves, or pistons. If the addition of a little oil into all cylinders with low readings produces normal compression readings, the problem may well be worn rings, pistons, or cylinders. If adding oil in this manner does not increase compression, the valves may be at fault. When compression is low in two adjacent cylinders, a blown head gasket is the most probable cause.

HINT: As a rule of thumb, the lowest compression reading should be no lower than 25 percent less than the highest.

School Committee Only Preliminary Race

Light Turnout Seen For Election

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A school committee contest, the only race on the ballot, is expected to draw a light turnout for the city's preliminary election next Tuesday, Sept. 14.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said he expects approximately 9,000 of the city's 45,174 registered voters or 20 percent to go to the polls Tuesday.

"We've had other preliminaries with 20 percent turnout, unfortunately," Shea said.

Nine candidates are seeking three seats on the school committee. The preliminary election will pare the field to six candidates who will then square off in the final election Tuesday, Nov. 2. The top three candidates Nov. 2 will win four-year terms.

Shea said he believes the small number of new voters who enrolled for the preliminary election indicates voter turnout will be low next Tuesday.

He noted less than 400 voters registered in the past six months. During the preceding voter registration period for the preliminary election the past few weeks, the city gained only 40 new voters, Shea said.

To achieve a higher turnout, the nine school committee candidates will have to work to get the vote out. Of the the nine candidates, one is an incumbent, four have run for school committee before, and four are first-time candidates.

The candidates, listed in the order they appear on the ballot, are:

Christine Cedrone, 99 South Walnut St., Gregory Hanley, 32 Shed St.; JoAnn Bragg, 74 East Elm Ave.; John H. McDuff, Jr., 216 South St.; Toni Kabilian, 33 Hyde St.; John E. Spada, 88 Forbes Hill Rd.; Ronald Mariano, 57 Presidential Dr.; Ronald H. McCarthy, 72 Norton Rd.; and Sean L. Barry, 184 Marlboro St.

Mariano is running for a second four-year term. Bragg, McDuff, Kabilian and Barry have run unsuccessfully for school committee. Cedrone, Hanley, Spada and McCarthy are first-time

Health Dept. Warning: All Raccoons Should Be Considered Rabid

By MICHAEL WHALEN

All raccoons in the city should be considered rabid and a potential health threat, according to Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue.

The commissioner made her comments after a rabid raccoon was discovered last week on Ames St. in West Quincy less than two weeks after another had been found near Cedar St. in Wollaston.

"Now that we've had a second raccoon test positive for rabies, all raccoons should be considered rabid as a precaution," said Gallahue.

Last week an animal control officer shot and killed a raccoon that appeared to be in a dazed, confused state in the back yard of an Ames St. resident, Gallahue said. The head of the animal was shipped to the state health department laboratory for testing, where the raccoon was confirmed to be rabid.

Another raccoon that had been bitten by a dog Aug. 16 on Cedar St. also was found to be rabid, Gallahue said. The dog's chances of contracting the disease are "very remote" because the dog's owner had made sure it was properly vaccinated, the commissioner added.

Gallahue has said that the Aug. 16 rabies case was the first ever reported in the city's history. The disease is transmitted by saliva, she noted, and can be fatal to humans who do not receive immediate medical treatment.

She added that she does not want to alarm residents as prevention of the disease is not difficult if proper precautions are taken. Residents should make sure they and their pets avoid, if possible, all contact with wild animals, Gallahue said.

In addition, trash cans should be secured and all entrances to homes, including chimneys, should be tightly closed so that animals may not invade houses.

Those bitten by a confirmed or suspected rabid animal should wash out the wound and seek immediate medical attention. Likewise, pets that come into contact with wild animals should be handled with gloves, have any wounds washed out, and be taken to a veterinarian at once. Animals that are properly vaccinated have a good chance of not contracting the disease, according to Gallahue.

Owners, however, should also as a precaution wash their hands after handling pets that have come into contact with suspected or confirmed rabies carriers, the commissioner noted.

Gallahue said she hopes to mail informational pamphlets on "critter-proofing" homes and yards to as many residents as possible in the near future. Pamphlets are currently available at City Hall, she added.

In addition to the two rabid Quincy raccoons, two raccoons and two bats in Milton recently tested positive for the disease. State officials have said that the animals in the two communities were probably infected by the

Cheney Tries Again For Municipal Lottery

Councillor Michael Cheney is hoping his home-rule petition introduced at Tuesday night's City Council meeting which would allow Quincy to conduct a municipal lottery in the city has better luck than it did two years ago.

The lottery would give the city the ability to raise revenues for city programs such as education and public safety without having to raise taxes, he said.

"Hopefully, we could stabilize taxes or even bring them down," he said before The Sun went to press Tuesday night.

The petition is the same one that won the approval of both the City Council and Mayor James Sheets after he introduced it to the council in February 1991, Cheney said. He added that although most members of the state legislature at a public hearing later that year seemed to be in favor of the petition, the matter remained in committee.

Cheney said State Treasurer Joseph Malone, as well as one representative at the 1991 legislature hearing, expressed concerns that a municipal lottery would detract from sales of the Massachusetts State Lottery. Cheney, however, who said he based his counter-argument on state lottery reports, argued that the Massachusetts lottery actually competes with itself every time it introduces a new game and in fact, sales of one game do not go down when another is introduced candidates.

Mariano, 46, who also serves as a state representative, was elected to the school committee in 1989.

Attempting second bids for school committee are Bragg, 38, a tax accountant and president of the Citywide Parents' Council; Kabilian, 46, a parent activist and former president of the Citywide Parents' Council; and Barry, 28, director of public affairs at Quincy College. McDuff, 59, a retired hospital manager and vice chairman of the Quincy Republican City Comm-ittee, is making his fourth bid for school committee.

Making their political debuts are Cedrone, 23, employed as an office manager; Hanley, 27, a quality control specialist; Spada, 40, a business unit manager for Fidelity Investments; and McCarthy, 32, acting vice principal of Middleboro High School.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday at each of the city's polling places. Shea said he expects the final results will be tabulated by 10 p.m.

Some voters should be aware that the city has redrawn its precinct and ward lines. As a result, some voters have changed precincts and wards and therefore will vote at a different polling place.

The changes were mandated by the state because of minor shifts in population and growth since the last redistricting in 1985.

Among the more notable changes:

•A significant amount of voters who had been in Ward 5 Precinct 1 are now located in Ward 3 Precinct 2. They will vote at the First Baptist Church, Prospect St., Wollaston.

•A significant amount of voters who had been in Ward 3 Precinct 2 are now in Ward 5 Precinct 1. They will vote at the Bernazzani Elementary School, Furnace Brook Parkway.

•Residents of the Drohan Apartments, 170 Copeland St., West Quincy, are now part of Ward 4 Precinct 1 instead of 4-2. Also, the Drohan Apartments is the polling place for for Ward 4 Precinct 1.

Before this change, Drohan apartment residents voted at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School instead of the apartment complex. Now, the residents are part of 4-1 and can vote where they live.

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School will serve as the polling precinct for Ward 4 Precinct 2.

On Tuesday, Shea began mailing cards to voters who have been affected by the new ward and precinct lines. The cards inform the voter of what ward and/or precinct they are now located in, and where he or she will vote.

Voters who have questions regarding the new ward and precinct lines can call Shea at 376-1141.

Pet Peeves, Anyone!

(Henry Bosworth decided to take it easy this week by recycling one of his old columns. He says although the column may be recycled, the pet peeves are still current.)

You can call them pet peeves, annoyances or whatever, but we all have our share of them. Here are a few of mine. Maybe some of them are yours, too.

• You're waiting for an important telephone call. The phone finally rings. And a voice says: "Hello, I'm a talking computer."

Not for long, pal, Click!

• The "get-the-hell-out-of-my-way" cowboy who roars through a residential area, tires screeching, ignoring parked cars from which a youngster might dart out from behind. You wouldn't feel too badly to see him again about a block away wrapped around a steel utility pole.

• And his buddy who has a ball for himself speeding through puddles seeing how many pedestrians he can soak. You wouldn't mind meeting him later, too, dead in the water, his engine conked out.

• The writer who dashes off a sizzling letter-to-the-editor alleging somebody is a criminal or something is a crime and finishing it off with a challenging "I bet you don't have the guts to print this letter." But doesn't have the guts to sign the letter.

• The waitress who doesn't know how to take an order for a dry martini on the rocks with a twist. Or, if she gets it right, the bartender who doesn't know the science of mixing it.

• The guy who steals a parking space reserved for the handicapped.

• Drivers — men and women — who sail through pedestrian lights in front of City Hall or at Hancock and Temple Sts. with no police officer around to see them. Meanwhile, meter maids are busy ticketing parked cars.

• People who talk during the playing of the National Anthem.

• Men who keep their hats on when Old Glory passes by in a parade.

• The horn tooter who lets you know as soon as the red light turns green.

• Blaring car radios (especially in warm weather) that force loud rock 'n roll and other noise they call music on everyone within earshot.

• Ditto boom boxes.

• Women who campaign for equal rights but don't want to open all-women colleges to men.

• Kids on skateboards risking their young necks maneuvering alongside traffic on Hancock St.

• That sticky string stuff kids leave on sidewalks for pedestrians to step on and spend the rest of the day trying to get off their shoes.

• Young girls in small cars who have apparently seen too many movies or TV shows with young girls in small cars and trying to drive just like them.

• The guy who likes to surprise you by waiting until he starts making a turn before giving a directional signal.

• People who love dogs but love to let them roam with no control, tipping over trash barrels, leaving souvenir deposits on the lawn, and howling at the moon at night.

• Motorcycle cowboys who just can't get enough noise out of their bikes. If your car made as much noise, the Registry would have you in court for faulty equipment.

And, did you say one of your pet peeves is an opinionated columnist forcing his pet peeves on you?

MAGNETIC RESONANCE IMAGING (MRI)

Just when you thought you were pretty savvy about major medical procedures, your doctor recommends something called MRI. Magnetic Resonance Imaging, or MRI, is one of the most important new diagnostic tools for examining bones and soft tissue. Using low-energy radio waves, MRI can produce much sharper images of the body's internal workings than is possible with X-rays or other evaluation methods. This allows physicians to "see" fat, muscle, cartilage, ligaments, blood vessels, and bone virtually as clearly as if they were looking at the internal body directly. MRI is a painless procedure, although it may require the patient to remain inside the scanning equipment for as long as an hour or more.

P.S. People with pacemakers are not candidates for MRI.

If you are claustrophobic, it is important that you inform your doctor of this before undergoing the MRI—he or she will probably prescribe tranquilizers for use during the test. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call the doctors—myself, Dr. Ronald Dunlap, or Lisa Antonnelli, at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment, and our new office is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Favors Opening Quarries To Supervised Swimming

[A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Sun by the writer for publication]:

James A. Sheets
Mayor
City of Quincy

For 45 years I have been telling anyone who would listen to me that the Quincy quarries, properly supervised, would be a tremendous swimming facility for the City of Quincy.

I have fond memories, as a young man, of spending many a hot summer day swimming in the quarries. I have been in pools, lakes and oceans around the world and never have I found the water as invigorating and refreshing as the Quincy quarries.

I can't understand why the MDC has taken the stand they have taken.

I congratulate you on recognizing the potential of the Quincy quarries as a natural recreational asset for the City of Quincy.

Pleased About Listing Of 'Walk Of Names'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Some time ago I wrote and asked you to consider printing the names of those who had ordered bricks for the "Walk of Names"--thinking it would acknowledge those who had been earlier contributors and motivate others who just hadn't gotten around to sending in their orders.

I had earlier written Mayor Sheets who said he thought it was a worthy idea but possibly printing that huge number of names might be an obstacle.

I was very happy to see in the Aug. 12 issue that you have not only begun to highlight the contributors but you have chosen a very good way to do it--in segments. This letter is to say "thank you," sincerely, for the gesture. The people of Quincy will certainly line up now to get in on the final group and it is one more illustration for them to show the benefit of working together to accomplish goals.

Thank you again.

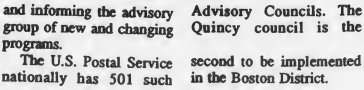
Postal Advisory Council First Meeting Sept. 14

A Postal Advisory Council has been established in the city and will hold its first meeting Tuesday, Sept. 14 at 5 p.m. at the Quincy Post Office, 47 Washington St., Quincy.

Ten volunteers were selected from over 189 applications received. The Customer Advisory Council will provide a forum for individual customers to express their ideas, concerns and suggestions to postal officials.

Officials will be active participants, answering questions, helping to make regulations easier to understand, discussing and resolving service problems and informing the advisory group of new and changing programs.

The U.S. Postal Service nationally has 501 such Advisory Councils. The Quincy council is the second to be implemented in the Boston District.



In 1990, the U.S. center of population was 9.7 miles northwest of Steelville, Mo.

Sending Plaque To N.M. Memorial

Fire Captain Remembers Vietnam POWs And MIAs

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Capt. Fred McCray of the Quincy Fire Department wanted Vietnam War POWs (prisoners of war) and MIAs (missing in action) from Massachusetts to be remembered.

And so, they shall be.

The Vietnam Disabled Veterans Memorial in Angel Fire, N.M. has been sent a plaque with the names of the 62 Massachusetts POWs and MIAs lost in the war, mainly because of the efforts of McCray.

McCray said he and his wife, Dolores, came up with the idea after touring the visitors center at the memorial in April 1991 while on vacation in New Mexico. At the time, he said, there were only three states--Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico--whose POWs and MIAs were represented by plaques at the memorial.

And although McCray said the Vietnam Disabled Veterans Memorial is a relatively new and unknown facility (which he had happened to learn of while watching an episode of CBS-TV's "60 Minutes"), he felt that those from Massachusetts should be recognized as well.

"The (POW-MIA) motto says it all: 'You Are Not Forgotten,'" said McCray, an Army veteran and member of American Legion Post 95 on Revere Road in Quincy. "I just thought that if there is a place to remember these veterans, then our people should be there too."

Some months after returning home from New Mexico, McCray contacted the memorial to discuss the possibility of putting a Massachusetts plaque in its visitors center. Officials at the memorial, who McCray said have since added other states' plaques to the initial three, gave the thumbs up.

The next person McCray contacted was Quincy Veterans Services Director Hank Bradley. According to McCray, Bradley contacted officials in Washington, D.C. who supplied him with the 62 names.

"He (Bradley) had the names for me within two or three days," said McCray.

After McCray came up with a design for the piece, it was made by his friend Jerry Goldberg of Norwell, owner of Jerry Goldberg Enterprises. The finished work is a solid walnut plaque measuring approximately 17 by 24 inches and containing the names of the 62 POWS and MIAs, the POW-MIA motto, Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine symbols (according to records, there are no Vietnam Coast Guard POWs or MIAs from Massachusetts, McCray said) and the following words:

"To Those Who Fought For It, Freedom Bears A Taste The Protected Will Never Know."

Of the 62 remembered on the plaque, McCray said only 54 are still actually missing, including one Quincy resident, Lt. Charles Bifolchi of the U.S. Air Force. The remains of the other eight, McCray said, have since been returned, but officials allowed all of the names to be included on the plaque because it was a relatively small list.

McCray said everyone who has seen the plaque has been impressed by it.

"When they saw the finished product, everyone agreed it was a good idea, and tastefully done," he said.

He also made light of the fact that he and his wife paid for the plaque out of their own finances and refused to disclose the amount.

"It was a relatively small amount of money," he said.

McCray said he sent the plaque to New Mexico through United Parcel Service Sept. 1 in the hopes its would reach there in time for a POW-MIA Day to be held tomorrow (Friday).

Those interested, however, may not have to travel quite that far to see it: according to McCray, officials of a local state organization for POWs and MIAs are hoping that Goldberg can design another copy of the plaque to be put on display at the Statehouse in Boston.

Baseball Card Collecting Kids: Don't Be Fooled

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

One of the most popular investment ideas today is baseball card collecting. Throughout the 1940s, 50s and 60s, and even through the early part of the 1980s fans collected baseball cards not for profit but for amusement. When collectors came on the scene recently these cards became more valuable as an increase in demand developed.

Baseball and other sports cards today are collected for investment by adults and children, many of whom don't know the difference between a double play and a double steal. The most basic investment rule for a collectible, whether it be a rug, a coin, a piece of artwork, an antique, or a baseball card is that assuming there is demand, given similar condition, the value increases with its rarity.

Cards from decades ago are valuable because many of our mothers threw out our cards when we lost interest in them. This left fewer available, and those naturally became more valuable. In addition, not nearly as many were printed as are on today presses.

Today there are hundreds of thousands of cards printed for every player. Many people keep the cards in immaculate condition inside plastic sheaths hoping for that big payday. No one flips baseball cards against a brick wall anymore, they may become damaged. Hardly any are thrown in the dumpster during spring cleaning, so a tremendous amount in perfect condition will remain for decades. Translation: they will not be rare.

Thirty years from now, when we are determining the value of a card of that famous power hitter from the middle 1990s, Clubber Sledge, we will find that there are thousands of cards available in near flawless condition. Some undoubtedly will have been lost, but a huge amount will remain holding the value low. The older card from the 1960s will have appreciated (assuming a demand still exists) at a faster rate because it will become even more rare.

Economics 101 teaches us that there exists a relationship between supply, demand and price. Great Demand + Short Supply = High Price. In the unlikely event that there is much demand for 1993 baseball cards in the year 2023, there will be plenty available, so don't expect to retire on your collection.

Don't be fooled. The "investment experts" at card shows understand economics very well. They know that the children in particular, with the unreasonable expectation of future wealth, are grossly overpaying for these cards, and they are laughing all the way to the bank.

Coast Guard Vs. Clam Diggers Criticized

Sept. 9-15
1929
64 Years Ago

Cong. John J. Douglass of the North Shore appeared in Quincy District Court on behalf of 16 clam diggers from his district who were arrested on the mud flats off Squantum after a fight with coastal officers and Coast Guardsmen.

"I am here to put a stop to the alleged practice of using the United States Coast Guard boats and men for chasing clam diggers, " he said, "The Coast Guard service is maintained for enforcing federal laws and not petty state regulations."

The arrests were made Aug. 29 following an hour and a half battle involving three Coast Guard boats, one of which was rammed and nearly sunk. The clam diggers were from East Boston and Chelsea.

When nine of the clam diggers were convicted, Douglass promised to take the issue of the use of Coast Guard boats up with the Treasury Department in Washington.

DUMP BLASTED

A quantity of dynamite was exploded in the old Merrymount quarry off Quarry St., which had been used by the city as a dump for two years in an effort to redistribute the waste and end the fires and foul odors that annoyed residents.

"There was a muffled roar," said an observer, "and up from the middle of the pit rose a black mass 60 or 80 feet and where all has seemed to be solid debris in the pit was a yawning expanse of blue-black liquid.

"For hours thereafter the contents of the great hole in the hilltop was seething and bubbling."

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Sean Barry is no stranger to challenges.

In 1991 Sean Barry was an unsuccessful School Committee candidate. Since then, Sean has worked hard to earn the respect of Quincy voters. As a teacher. As a concerned citizen. As a person committed to education.

In 1992 Sean Barry lost his right leg to cancer. Within weeks of leaving the hospital, Sean was back at School Committee Meetings, speaking out on important issues like safety, overcrowding and tougher attendence policies.

Sean Barry is capable, caring and qualified.

BLOWN OUT OF PROPORTION

In the tome immediately after a cold engine is started, it will normally emit white smoke from the exhaust pipe as condensation is burned off. However, if white smoke continues to pour out after the engine has warmed, it could be an indication of an internal leak in the head gasket. Lying between the cylinder head and the engine block, the head gasket endures a tight seal between these two engine parts. A so-called "blown" head gasket means that the seal has ruptured, with the result being that coolant from the coolant passage leaks into the combustion chamber that causes the white smoke from the tailpipe. The solution lies with replacing the head gasket.

HINT: Oil in the radiator or water in the motor oil could also indicate a blown head gasket.

Leo Slack Quincy Hospital Employee Of The Month

Leo Slack, a phlebotomist at Quincy Hospital since 1987, was recently named the hospital's Employee of the Month.

The award is given out to recognize outstanding contributions by an employee.

LEO SLACK

Slack was recognized for his role in developing two new community outreach sites for the Quincy Hospital laboratory; one at 300 Congress St. in Crown Colony Office Park and the other at the Center for Women's Health in Quincy. These sites make it more convenient for patients with doctors in the Crown Colony medical buildings and at the Center for Women's Health to have their lab work done.

Slack oversees the program, coordinating and tracking specimens and ensuring customer satisfaction. Tony Richard, manager of Quincy Hospital Laboratory Services and Slack's supervisor, said, "Leo has been instrumental in making our outreach program a success. He is well-liked and respected by the employees at both our sites."

Slack was also commended for his technical expertise and skills in working with people. He played a key role in training nurse technicians to draw blood for testing and is often requested by patients when they need to have blood drawn.

Slack received his technical laboratory and certification while working in a commercial laboratory. He is a graduate of West Bridgewater High School and lives in West Bridgewater with his wife and two children.

Parents Can Give Children Math Power

(NU)—Every child loves puzzles and games. That's why it's helpful to connect the puzzles and games played at home with the math taught in school.

According to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM), by developing everyday activities into mathematical games, parents can help make the "math connection" that will build youngsters' interest in the subject.

One idea suggested by NCTM is to discuss with your children which grocery store is best for shopping. You can base decisions solely on price, or introduce other factors such as quality, availability of brands and service to make the problem more complex. If you start by just asking the question, your kids may look at newspaper ads to compare prices or check the prices of a few items in the stores themselves.

Energy use is another possibility. Ask your children to make a bar graph plotting your monthly electric bills for the past year. Encourage them to ask why those bills fluctuate from month to month. The same thing can be done with heating bills.

Have your child make a scale drawing of one of the rooms in your house and make scale templates of the furniture in that room to show proper perspective. Together, rearrange the furniture in as many patterns as possible. Discuss whether additional pieces of furniture could fit in the room.

Games Help, Too

Standard board and card games are good for developing math skills and interests, but you can also use simple pencil-and-paper games such as these:

Pick-a-Number. Each player takes a piece of paper and draws a series of boxes. Then one player picks a playing card and reads the number while each player writes that number in any one of their boxes. The process is repeated until all the boxes are full. Whoever has the largest number is the winner. For variety, the winner could be whoever has the smallest number or the greatest even or odd number.

Pick-a-Problem. Essentially the same as the game above, but here the blank boxes are arranged in addition or subtraction tables. The goal for each is to finish with the largest positive number once the calculation is completed.

Math Standards Deserve Support Outside The Field

(NU)—The national goal of making American students first in the world in mathematics and science by the end of the century is reachable, but it won't be easy, says the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics.

For today's students to function effectively in tomorrow's society, the responsibility for teaching mathematics cannot fall to teachers alone.

That's why the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics, in their Professional Standards for Teaching Mathematics, spells out the responsibilities of those who make decisions that affect teaching mathematics.

Four Groups Must Help

If American students are to improve substantially on their low international ranking, NCTM says, the support of four groups is critical:

- Policymakers in government, business and industry must help develop and implement high-quality school mathematics programs. Publishers of textbooks and standardized tests have a special responsibility, NCTM says, because they so profoundly influence what is taught.
- School administrators and school board members should recruit qualified mathematics teachers and provide adequate resources, equipment, time and funding to support mathematics education.
- College and university administrators are encouraged to establish an adequate reward system, including salary, work conditions, promotion and tenure, so faculty can, among many goals, spend time in schools working with elementary and high school teachers.
- Leaders of professional organizations need to promote professional growth opportunities for those involved in mathematics education and to initiate political efforts that produce positive change in mathematics education.

All Americans benefit if U.S. students set the international standard for excellence in mathematics, NCTM says. Business and industry, for example, now spend huge sums to train workers in the math needed in the technological workplace. A workforce better educated in math in K-16 programs would change the nature of on-the-job training and improve American economic competitiveness.

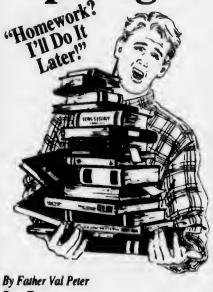
Family Spotlight



By Father Val Peter
Boys Town

(NU)—With another school year underway, our thoughts turn to homework and this simple fact: a student who cannot or will not do homework will not succeed in school.

Research has shown repeatedly that student achievement rises when teachers regularly assign homework and pupils consistently do it. In other words, homework boosts achievement and directly influences how much is learned.

Of the more than 17,000 young people who have spent a significant portion of their lives here at Boys Town, too many were far behind in school when they came to us, and most, if not all, had trouble doing their homework.

As most parents know, homework problems are not indigenous to Boys Town. I doubt that there is a mom or dad in these United States who has a son or daughter who doesn't skip homework. Worse yet, there are some students who just don't do homework.

Parents Can Help

What's a parent to do?

First, you meet with your child's teachers so you can establish a relationship. Second, we at Boys Town believe it is essential to start on a positive note, so we always praise a youth for something that's done well. There ought to be something in school that your child is doing well.

Third, set clear rules for your child and his or her homework. A child should really have all homework assignments written down on a sheet of paper when he or she comes home from school.

Next, set a specific time for study, perhaps right after dinner or just after the kids come home from school. Designate a study area with no distractions—no television, no radio, no telephone until homework is done.

Finally, you should check over the homework—either right after it's finished or at breakfast the next morning. Research shows that looking over homework gives a parent a window on their children's schoolwork. It's also a good way to stimulate conversation with your children. Try it.

17 Quincy Police Recruits Graduate From Academy

Seventeen rookie patrolmen who graduated last Friday from the Foxboro Police Academy could be on the streets by the end of the month, according to Police Chief Francis Mullen.

Mayor James Sheets hired the recruits earlier in the year. One patrolman hired originally by Sheets left to join the State Police, Mullen said.

The recruits will spend two weeks doing desk work at various departments and attending classes run by the Quincy Police Department, the chief added.

Mullen said each new patrolman will be teamed with a veteran who will act as a field training officer. The training will continue even when the recruits go on patrol in a cruiser, motorcycle or one of the department's two mountain bikes, he noted.

The 17 rookies are:

John E. Bersani, Robert E. Bina, Patrick J. Calabro, Gerard V. Connolly, Thomas M. Corliss, Richard M. Gilmore III, Donald H. Greenwood, Daniel Guarente, John P. Kelly III, Steven L. Kelly, Robert L. O'Donnell, Joseph C. Paccioretti III, William E. Plant Jr., John D. Steele, Michael J. Sullivan and Kevin G. Tobin, all of Quincy, and John J. Keenan of Hanover.

Mullen said Daniel McGinn of Quincy, a former Yarmouth police officer, had also joined the 17-week program at the police academy but left after two weeks to join the State Police.

The chief told The Quincy Sun last month he hoped to see the recruits on the streets "by the latter part of September."

The recruits, who will start at a base salary of $24,080, will bring the total number of patrolmen in the department to 145. In addition, there are 25 sergeants, 10 lieutenants and five captains.

Sheets has said the recruits, as well as additional firefighters he plans to hire later this year, are being added their departments without increases in the police or fire budgets.

The mayor has noted that although the positions had been financed in the past, the departments had been using overtime assignments in an effort to fill the void.

Over 2,700 Bricks Sold

'Walk Of Names' Project To Start Oct. 1

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Construction on the "Walk of Names" project at Constitution Common at City Hall should begin by Oct. 1, according to Mayor James Sheets.

Work on the project, which calls for a new brick plaza to replace the present granite pavers in the area in front of the City Hall annex, should be completed by the end of the month, the mayor added.

The construction contract for the project has been advertised and bids will be received until later this month, according to Department of Public Works Programs Manager Michael Wheelwright. Bids should be sent to the DPW's engineering office, he noted.

The DPW will send to Sheets the name of the company it believes should do the work on the project, and the mayor will make the final decision, Wheelwright added.

The "Walk of Names" is being funded by the sale of dark red bricks to be used in the construction as well as a $50,000 bond issue that was approved in 1992 by the City Council, Sheets said. He added that although most people probably think the project is only being done for aesthetic reasons, it was initially conceived as a safety measure after a number of older residents tripped and fell on the pavers presently at the site.

"Several people had fallen," said Sheets. "They caught the front of their shoes on the pavers."

Sheets said he was extremely pleased when the city reached its goal of 2,500 bricks sold for the project last week. At press time, the mayor said 2,750 bricks had been sold and that the project actually has room for "another 75 to 100 more bricks."

More Names On Page 2

The bricks will be engraved with the names of people from the past, present and future to form a "Walk of Names" at the site. For a $50 donation, any Quincy resident, business or group can have a personalized brick with up to 15 characters each. Sheets said those interested in ordering one of the remaining bricks should call 376-3676.

Sheets said he was grateful to all who have purchased bricks for the project.

"I think the program has gone tremendously well," he said. "The people are participating in making their city more beautiful and more meaningful, and I really appreciate that."

The project, which was designed by Quincy landscape architect Mary Smith, will include other renovations besides the "Walk of Names," according to Sheets.

The mayor said a granite fountain, which will serve as the centerpiece of the project, should be in place by early summer. Sheets said the fountain will cost around $40,000 but will be funded by a private donor at no expense to the city. The piping and electrical work for the fountain will be done in October and "capped off," Sheets said, and a pine tree and flowers will be installed in place of the fountain until summertime.

Sheets added that the sculpture which is currently located at Constitution Common will be moved to Freedom Park on Burgin Parkway.

Other additions to the site, to be funded by private donations, will include 20 colonial lights costing $2,500 apiece, 12 wooden benches costing $1,000 each and four flagpoles costing $1,100.

Sheets said all of the flagpoles and six of the benches have already been donated. Anyone interested in donating a light or one of the remaining benches should call secretary Helen Murphy at the mayor's office, 376-1990.

Michael King, of Quincy, received the Associate in Applied Science degree in Business Management from Newbury College.

Sheets Back On Job After Accident

Mayor James Sheets was back on the job Tuesday after his left eye was injured in a scary Labor Day mishap at his home.

Sheets said he was hammering a nail in his kitchen Monday at around 5 p.m. when the flat end of the nail broke off and struck him in the eye.

The mayor said that because the eye began to bleed, he decided to take his son's pickup truck to Quincy Hospital.

"I've never had an eyebleed before," Sheets joked.

Sheets, who was treated at the hospital and later released, said a follow-up visit to his own eye doctor Tuesday confirmed that the nail had not reached the cornea of his eye and no serious damage had been done.

"There are some abrasions on the white part of the eye, it's sore and bloodshot, and they told me it will be that way for about a week.

"I'm very fortunate, though. They gave me some medication and told me that my vision will not be affected."

Sheets said the nail may have glanced off a contact lense before striking him in the eye, saving him from more serious injury.

He laughed when describing his trip Monday to Quincy Hospital.

"I was in my old sneakers, my Bermudas (Bermuda shorts), and my sweaty old T-shirt, with my dirty arms and my dirty hands, because I'd been working," said Sheets. "That was the mayor."

Raymer: 'Going To Concentrate On Passing'

Quincy's Main Attack Will Be Through Air

By TOM SULLIVAN

When the Quincy High football team opens its season Sept. 17 against Marshfield, the Presidents will be throwing the ball more than ever.

"We are going to concentrate on our passing," 10th-year coach Jack Raymer said. "We will have a limited running attack, but I think it will be effective."

Mike Bartlett, who had an excellent season a year ago, is back at quarterback and he has an outstanding group of receivers to throw to. Last year Bartlett threw 10 touchdown passes.

Backing up Bartlett are Sean McDonald, Jeff Burrell and Tom Malvesti. Malvesti played as a freshman but didn't play the past two years. In addition to being a backup quarterback he will be an end and will play in the secondary on defense.

"Tom is a fine athlete and I think he is going to do a great job for us," Raymer said.

The receivers will be Jason Sova, sophomore Terry Bowman, Mike Sheffer, Malvesti, Steve Provost, Tom Pepdjonovic, John Gangi, Wilken Jeantry and Matt Miller.

JACK RAYMER

"This is the strongest and fastest group of receivers I've ever had and I feel our passing game should be very strong with Bartlett throwing to them."

For running backs Raymer has Mike Elder, Sam Brown, a senior out for the first time; Bill Dunn, Skip Lumpkin, Greg Santoro and Ed Anderson.

The centers are Dave D'Olympio, Jason Bennett and Greg Fernald. At guard will be Mike Feeley, who had an outstanding sophomore season and is expected to be a standout this year; Mike Lombardi, Peter Kolson, John Green and Brian O'Connor.

The tackles are Butch Palaza, Burrell, Matt Strauchon, Jake Drohan, Matt Goguen, Ming Tung and Jim Savini.

"Our big question is the offensive line and it must give Bartlett good protection," Raymer said.

On defense the ends are Bennett, Green and Strauchon.

The tackles are Feeley, John Moss and Tung.

Linebackers are Paul Colleary, Dunn, Brown, Lumpkin and Kolson.

Cornerbacks are Kevin Carey, Ashley Davis, Santoro, Anderson and Sean Perkins.

The coaches expect big things from the secondary, which includes Provost, Dowling, Gangi, Malvesti, Miller, Joe Cassetta and Ray Slukocki.

"We are young on defense but we will be aggressive and there will be a lot of movement," said assistant coach Bob Keuther.

"I was pleased with our showing in our first scrimmage against Newton North," Raymer said. "This is a very enthusiastic group of kids and I can promise we will be competitive. We have a lot of seniors but we will be starting three or four sophomores."

Raymer was greeted by 90 candidates, including 25 freshmen, who will be playing for first-year coach Chris Noble.

Keuther and Bob Noble are back as assistants and Mark Giordani, a former assistant and a volunteer aide last year, is a full-time assistant this year.

Quincy, hoping to rebound from a 3-6-1 season, plays its first Old Colony game Sept. 25 at Bridgewater-Raynham.

McPhee: 'We Will Improve On Offense'

North Quincy's Strength Lies With Defense

By TOM SULLIVAN

When the North Quincy High football team, 1992 Old Colony League and Super Bowl champions, opens its season Sept. 18 against Stoughton and defense of its league title against Falmouth Sept. 25, the Raiders will be relying heavily on their defense.

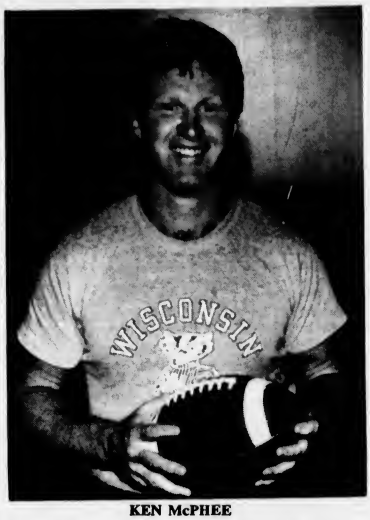
Ken McPhee, starting his 12th season as coach with only three losing seasons, lost a lot of players to graduation, but has a large number of returning players with experience.

North has nine returning players who started either on offense or defense, plus six other lettermen.

"I think we have the ability to both run and pass, but our strength definitely lies with the defense," McPhee said. "Our defense should be very strong and with a lot of experience and poise. Offensively, we will as the season progresses. We are relatively inexperienced on offense."

Offensively North will have two outstanding veterans, 260-pound Brian Raftery and 230-pound Kevin Ross at tight end in addition to Mike Callahan and Mike Coner.

McPhee has a large number of wide receivers in George Wirtz, Nathan and Jeremy Gott, Jerry Fernandez, Toby Odom, Mac Ngetta and Keith Deshler.



KEN McPHEE

North lost all-scholastic tackle Dave Reinhart, but there are several returns who saw service a year ago. The tackle corps includes Sean Halpin, Dave Carney, Pat Kielty, Ricky Maciero, Mike Manganaro and Chris Washburn.

Dave Pacino, one of the finest nose guards and offensive guards in the league last year, heads the group of guards who also include Justin Dilks, Billy Dugan, Matt Hourin and Joe Renzi.

Jason Picardi, Danny Reynolds and Tom Burke are battling for center spot.

All-scholastic quarterback Liam Higgins, who had 11 touchdown passes last fall, is gone but Danny Duncan, a starting wideout in 1992, is ready to step in and McPhee feels he will do more than an adequate job. He is backed up by Sean Dolbeare and Jim Rendle.

Sean Nee, who gained 600 yards as a sophomore despite missing three games with injuries, heads the tailbacks.

Behind him are Jamie Kaldres, Chris Geary, Kenny Burke and Keith Martinson.

Mike MacGregor, Fernandez and Brian Whalen are the wing backs and Glenn Peterson and Tim Zaniboni are the fullbacks.

On defense Pacino, Neil Kiley and Bob Ragusa are the nose guards, Halpin, Raftery, Picardi, Carney, Coner, Steve Estinaford and Zaniboni are the linebackers.

Dilks, Ross, Maciero, Manganaro and Wahsburn will be the tackles and Carney, Peterson, Marty Shields and Picardi the ends.

Defensive backs are Nathan Gott, Ngetta, Odom, Epps, MacGregor, Martinson, Jeremy Gott, Wirtz, Fernandez and Joe Karvelis.

"We had a fine turnout and gave out 115 uniforms, including the freshmen," McPhee said. "We are going to have to work awfully hard as every team will be trying to knock us off. I am fairly optimistic, but some of the other league teams will be improved. Plymouth will be loaded and Barnstable and Falmouth will be strong."

McPhee has the same assistants as a year ago, Peter Chrisom, Tom Carter, Earl Metzler, Pete Zoia and freshman coach Dick Meyer.

By TOM SULLIVAN

As the North Quincy girls' cross-country team prepares to open its season, the team will feature depth and experience. Coach Geoff Hennessy, starting his sixth year with a 28-6-2 record, expects the team to be in the thick of the Old Colony League race.

Hennessy lost four outstanding runners to graduation, Suzanne Lewis, all-league and Boston Globe, Boston Herald and Patriot Ledger all-scholastic, now attending Brown University; Karen Leahy, now at Simmons College; Kerry Evans, now at Rhode Island, and Jenny Marks, now at Bridgewater State.

Also returning are senior four-year veterans Chrissy Herman, sophomores Cathy Jordan and Colleen Cotter and three-year veterans Danielle Rinella and Ursula Feurtado.

Promising newcomers are senior Amy Shea and freshmen Dianne McGonigle, Lauren Molloy, Carrie Jarvis, Christine Sullivan and Meaghan Powers.

Other freshmen are Angela Chin, Vivian Chan, Kara Timbone, Melissa DeBonis and Amanda Hunter.

A year ago the North girls won the league title, had a 7-1 dual meet record, were second in the Brown Invitational, third in the Eastern Mass. Div. II meet and sixth in the all-state Div. 1 meet.

"Nobody is going to replace Suzanne Lewis, but all the other varsity runners are back," said Hennessy. "Once again we will work hard and point to the end-of-season big meets. Falmouth again will be tough as will Silver Lake, Weymouth and Plymouth. To our advantage, only Plymouth's meet will be on the road, the other three teams will run at Pageant Field."

Realtors Professionally Help Smooth The Relocation Process

Each year, U.S. companies transfer between 500,000 and 600,000 employees, and about 60 percent of those moves involve the purchase or sale of a home or both, according to the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors.

"Numbers like this mean there is a demand for professional real estate services in the relocation process--brokerage, appraisal, and even property management, to name a few," says Betsy Trethewey, president of the Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors.

"While there are plenty of real estate professionals to choose from, the best bet in terms of ethical , efficient and reliable service, is a Realtor," she said. "Nearly 750,000 of the 1.2 million active real estate licensees nationwide belong to the National Association of realtors, entitling them to use our registered mark, 'realtors', after their name. Unlike many real estate brokers and sales-associates who are simply licensed by their state to do business, realtors have taken additional steps to become member so the local board of realtors and have agreed to act under and adhere to a strict code of ethics. This membership obligates them to be fair to all parties involved in a transaction, be it buyer, seller or cooperating agent.

"As of 1990, 15 percent of all real estate firms were affiliated with a third-party employee relocation management company. Realtors representing both large and small firms, have something to offer relocating families. And, the services provided by a good real estate professional are not limited to the home sales transaction itself, in fact, a Realtor will get involved in helping a transferee find the right neighborhood, schools, public services, and, sometimes, even job leads for the trailing spouse.

"Realtors know how to price and market a home successfully, how to advise a buyer and seller through each step of the transaction, as well as help buyers find appropriate financing. Relocations--especially for person and families who are moving to a market they know nothing about--can be especially traumatic. A well-trained, sensitive real estate professional is crucial to the success of a positive relocation experience."

Real estate markets are local by nature, she said, and national trends of sales figures, do not necessarily reflect the reality of a particular area.

"A move from a small town to a large city, for instance, will mean extreme culture shock, as well as sticker shock for the relocating family. A Realtor will work with that family, educate that family and help that family make the financial, as well as the emotional transfer.

"At the starting point, a Realtor can provide the marketing strategies to sell a home fast and for the best price, which is essential for a successful relocation. BY listing a home in a Multiple Listing Service, the Realtor works with many other realtors to assure a far wider range of prospective buyers than sellers who do not have their home listed in the MLS. The Realtor does a lot of homework back at the office in order to sell a home. It is listed, ads are placed, telephone inquiries are handled and appointments for showings are arranged with the convenience of the seller in mind.

"At the "land" point, a Realtor can help the relocating family determine how much home they can afford. Also be or she can suggest ways to put together a sufficient down payment and can explain alternative financing methods. Also, as a market expert, a Realtor is familiar with current real estate values, taxes, utility cost, municipal services and facilities, and may be aware of local changes that could affect a family's decision about whether to and where to buy.

Through the MLS, a Realtor can research a transferees housing needs in advance. Even before the relocating family has left their previous home, the Realtor in their future location can find out who's available in their price range and make suggestions about housing options that will fit their needs."

The Quincy and South Shore Board of Realtors recommends that relocating families ask their company or relocation firm about Realtors they may turn to for help in making the transfer from one home to another.

"A Realtor has great value to bring to the relocation process," Trethewey said. "Whether hired through a relocation firm or referred through a relocation network, the Realtor can offer essential services at both ends of the transfer. Realtors take great pride in their professionalism and are eager to bring it to the relocation process."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Modern funeral service today performs, by design, many of the functions that primitive man performed by instinct.

The funeral with the body present impresses the reality of the situation upon the minds and emotions of the bereaved. Constant and continuing experience indicates that the vast majority of people want and need this confirmation.

Among all men and in all time, custom has devised a meeting place between the living and the dead. This is more than a show of sympathy for the bereaved family. It is more than a parting from someone well lived and well regarded. It is a way of saying that the sorrows of one are the sorrows of all. Today this meeting place is usually the funeral home - where none are formally invited, but all are welcome to come . . .

For those times when the darkness lingers

With the loss of a loved one through death, it is helpful to be able to share the feelings and emotions which we all experience.

For most of us, there are family members, clergy, and friends who are ready to listen in a caring way.

Yet, there are those who find it helpful to share their grief with someone outside their immediate circle of support.

Because of our continuing commitment to the families we serve, Keohane Funeral Service is pleased to announce that Dr. Sherry Johnson has joined our staff as a Grief Counselor. Her educational background, professional experience and understanding manner can be particularly helpful.

We are the first funeral home in New England to offer the service of a Grief Counselor.

Cheney Tries Again For Municipal Lottery

but instead overall sales go up.

He added that he thinks the home-rule petition will pass the state legislature this time because of the lottery's constant expansion of its programs. Cheney also noted that he feels anyone who purchases tickets in the Quincy lottery will also be likely to participate in Massachusetts State Lottery games.

Cheney said he thinks the lottery, which he would like to see begin by next summer if it passes the legislature, could raise as much as $1 million in its first year and even more in subsequent years.

He added that the Quincy lottery tickets could be tied in with the city's historic sites and tourism drive and become "novelty items" for those who purchase them.

"We would be allowed (if the petition passes) to create our own scratch tickets," said Cheney. "We could be as innovative as we wanted and show some real creativity.

Cheney's petition calls for the creation of a municipal lottery commission which would make up of the rules and regulations of the lottery. The seven members of the commission would be appointed by the mayor, subject to confirmation by the City Council, and would determine such matters as the type of lottery to be conducted, price of tickets and ticket locations, frequency of drawings, manner in selecting winning tickets, prize amounts, and other particulars. The city treasurer would serve, without further compensation, as the executive director of the municipal lottery system.

The commission would also determine where the funds to establish, or initiate, the lottery would come from. Cheney said either money could be appropriated or a "start-up fund" could be started at no cost to the city.

"We might be able to raise the money on our own," he said.

Cheney stressed, however, that Sheets and the City Council would have final authority to approve or disapprove any decisions made by the commission. In addition, the commission would have to file both monthly and annual reports to the mayor and the council. That way, Cheney said, there would be a form of checks and balances that would prevent the commission from doing anything it wanted.

Other stipulations of Cheney's proposal include an "insurance policy" that call upon the mayor and City Council to either purchase insurance or provide bonding to protect lottery officials from any potential lawsuits, as well as the establishment of a municipal lottery account on the books of the city treasurer. The revenues of the account would be used only for three purposes: payment of prizes to winning ticket holders, expenses of running the lottery system, and appropriations which Cheney said would be the real reason for the lottery system itself, such as education and public safety matters.

Cheney said he has received positive feedback from residents on the idea of establishing a lottery, both in 1991 and more recently. He added that although some, like himself, feel it is "unfortunate" that government has to raise funds through gambling, a lottery would still be a very practical way to do so.

"The moral decision (regarding gambling) has already been made, and that's the way government has decided to go," said Cheney. "Most would concur that we have the right to tap into that system as well."

Cheney said he planned to leave the petition in the City Council Ordinance Committee Tuesday night to allow more residents to contact him with their opinions on the matter. After a favorable approval by the Ordinance Committee, the City Council would then take a formal vote at a subsequent regular meeting. The petition would then have to be signed by Sheets before going to the state legislature for final approval.

Bragg, Mariano, Barry Win Top School Nominations

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

JoAnn Bragg, Ron Mariano and Sean Barry won the three top nominations in Tuesday's School Committee preliminary election.

Bragg, a 38-year-old tax accountant and president of the Citywide Parents Council, led the nine-candidate field with an impressive vote of 2,976.

Mariano, 46, a state representative and the only School Committee incumbent in Tuesday's election was runner-up with 2,468.

Barry, director of public affairs at Quincy College, nailed down the third spot with a vote of 2,249.

The other three nominations went to Christine Cedrone, Toni Kabilian and Ronald McCarthy.

Cedrone, a 23-year-old office manager, polled 1,755 votes. Kabilian, 46, a parent activist and former president of the Citywide Parents Council, had 1,418 votes. McCarthy, 32, acting vice principal of Middleboro High School took the sixth nomination with a vote of 1,405.

Cedrone and McCarthy were making their first run for public office.

Finishing out of the money were John Spada, 40, an investment firm business unit manager with 974 votes; Gregory Hanley, 27, a quality control specialist with 915; and John McDuff, who turned 60 Wednesday and is a retired hospital manager and vice chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee, had 469 votes.

The six nominees will face off in the Nov. 2 election for three four-year seats, two of which are vacant. Frank Santoro and Margaret (Peggy) King decided not to seek re-election.

Only 13.8 percent of Quincy's 45,174 registered voters cast ballots--one of the lightest turnouts in recent years.

Several nominees expressed happiness with Tuesday's election results but were disappointed with the low voter turnout.

Bragg, making her second run for School Committee, said moments after the results were in, "I'm totally elated. I just want to thank the Quincy voters who voted today and I want to thank my team of volunteers who got the vote out."

Johnson To File Appeal After Dismissal

Creedon May Appoint Interim College President Within Next Two Weeks

By MICHAEL WHALEN

School Supt. Dr. Eugene Creedon said Tuesday he hopes to appoint an interim president at Quincy College to replace Dr. O. Clayton Johnson within the next two weeks.

"I've been putting together names and talking to the School Committee, citizens and particularly the mayor," said Creedon. "I'm hopeful within the next two weeks it will be done."

Creedon fired Johnson at the School Committee's Sept. 8 meeting, saying the new State Education Reform Act gave him authority to do so. He has also taken over as head of the college until an interim president is appointed.

A six-page letter sent by Creedon to Johnson last month said the dismissal was "for reasons including, but not limited to, your ineffective, inappropriate, and unprofessional management method and style; and/or insubordination; and/or misrepresentation; and/or substandard administrative performance." The charges in the letter date back to 1990.

Although Creedon and Johnson have both acknowledged that the possibility of offering Johnson a severance settlement was discussed, Creedon emphatically denied a report in the Sept. 10 issue of The Patriot Ledger that stated that "college sources" indicated Johnson was offered a buyout of $200,000.

"No offer of any amount of money was made," said Creedon. "We looked at a solution that could be amicable to both sides, but absolutely nothing was put on the table. Every figure mentioned was always in response to something Dr. Johnson said.

"I don't know where they (The Ledger) could have gotten that."

Johnson's salary as president of the college was $70,000 a year.

Johnson, who has said he was fired for political reasons, not professional issues, said he plans to appeal Creedon's decision to the state commissioner of education.

"I plan to use every kind of legal means at my disposal to clear my name," he said.

Johnson, who is black, said he feels his firing was not related to performance as president and likely has more to do with his filing a complaint with the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination (MCAD) in March.

"All of these things came to the forefront after I filed a letter to the MCAD," he said. "There seems to have been some kind of political retribution against me."

He added he hoped to bring to light "10 years of overt discriminatory practices" he experienced since becoming Quincy

Quincy Sun's Special 25th Anniversary

The Quincy Sun will celebrate its 25th anniversary next week with a Special Commemorative Issue Thursday, Sept. 23.

It will be a nostalgic look at a most significant quarter century in Quincy's history, featuring stories and photos dating back to The Sun's very first issue Sept. 26, 1968.

We will look back on such events as the Coming of the T, the Blizzard of '78, mayoral election battles, our Page 1 New Year Babies, issues affecting the community, the landmarks that have disappeared and sadly, prominent members of the community we have said farewell to.

Twenty-five years of Quincy and The Quincy Sun. This special issue we think will be a collector's item.

Don't miss it.

More 'Walk Of Names' In Next Week's Sun

Bragg, Mariano, Barry Win Top Nominations

(Cont'd From Page 1)

Mariano said, "I'm happy but I'm a little disappointed in the turnout. I wish people would take more interest in what the school committee has been able to do.

"But only 15 percent of the city's taxpayers have children in Quincy public schools and that's reflected in the low turnout."

Cedrone said she was "thrilled" with her fourth place finish but vowed to work harder over the next seven weeks. "I'm very thrilled. I'll work even harder and I'll try to find my weak spots and get people to vote.

"The city's schools are important to everyone and it's important that people vote."

City Clerk Joseph Shea shared similar sentiments.

"Yes, I'm disappointed. There were no other races (on the ballot). Clearly you need other races to get the vote out. I'm looking to get into the 30th percentile in November when there will be some other important races."

Tuesday was also one of the fastest election nights in years. With the small voter turnout and only one contest on the ballot, results were tabulated by 9 p.m.--just one hour after the polls closed.

Donald Greenwood Standout At Foxboro Police Academy

Donald H. Greenwood of Quincy was a standout among the recruits who graduated this month from the Foxboro Police Academy.

Greenwood, 46, was voted Company Commander by the class of 69 recruits, 17 of whom have joined the Quincy Police Department. In addition, he gave the President's Address at the graduation ceremony, was an honor graduate, and received a Leadership Award and Physical Training Award.

A veteran of the Gulf War, Greenwood is currently a major in the Army reserves. Previously he worked as a Quincy firefighter for over 10 years.

Greenwood has two sons, Donald G. Greenwood, an Army lieutenant stationed in Germany, and Travis R. Greenwood, a senior at North Quincy High School. He is the son of Edward and Dorothy Grimmie of Quincy and the late Donald M. Greenwood.

LaRaia Raises Downtown Traffic, Parking Concerns

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia has contacted Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon in the hopes of alleviating parking and traffic problems in Quincy Center.

LaRaia said his actions were prompted by the recent demise of the Business and Mailing Service store at 31 Temple St. The store's owner has blamed its closing on the city, claiming that business dropped dramatically after three parking spots formerly in front of the site were eliminated.

"It disturbs me to think that the city contributed in any way to the demise of this business," said LaRaia. "There is a lack of minimum parking for any business to operate in that area. A strategy for this location needs to be worked out before any other business sets up in this location so as to avoid a repetition of self-destruction."

LaRaia said that Quincy Center, particularly on Cottage Ave., is another problem area where many businesses need to have "short-term" parking because customers are "in and out in a matter of minutes."

"The businesses on Cottage Ave. are experiencing serious problems because of the inadequate parking situation," he said. "There are parking spaces reserved for a taxi stand that would better serve the shops on Cottage Ave."

He also said that he has received complaints from a number of merchants regarding the negative impact on their volume of business due to the current parking situation.

"I personally see the need to eliminate such restrictive practices and allow for 15 minute parking," said LaRaia. "Also, there is presently a proposal regarding the new Shaw's in North Quincy to take 20 parking spaces away from Hancock St.

"This is another example of a situation that hurts small business in the area and gives a higher priority to upscale businesses."

$1.5M State Grant Earmarked For Education, General Aid

Mayor James Sheets Tuesday called over $1.5 million in state funds the city received this week "a very encouraging sign."

Sheets, who said Quincy is now "stable financially," noted that the state money will break down into four areas:

•$661,000 for part of the work done to North Quincy High School in the mid-1970s. The state agreed at the time to pay 65 percent of the $17 million project, which included a new addition, gymnasium and other renovations. A community can apply for state assistance for a new school building depending on the need of the building.

City Auditor Robert Foy has said the state has been paying back the city since 1975, but the largest amounts will be reimbursed over the next three fiscal years. The state plans to make payments of $661,000 in FY94, 95 and 96, he said.

•$377,000 for education. Sheets said the money will be put into use by the Quincy Public Schools.

•$271,000 in general aid. The mayor said it was the "first increase in local aid since I've been mayor."

•$240,000 for the state's share of bonus salaries given to police officers with college degrees. Under the so-called Quinn Bill, the state is required to pay 50 percent of such bonuses. However, it was only paying 32 percent until Quincy and other communities won a recent lawsuit forcing it to pay half.

Foy has said the state will distribute the funds on a quarterly basis.

Sheets said that the city budget of $128.4 million approved by the City Council in June will increase by over $800,000, including $540,000 for 2 percent raises in firefighters' salaries and $264,000 for 11 new police cruisers and four unmarked detective cars to replace old ones.

However, the city has "money beyond the budget" for those expenditures because they were anticipated earlier, the mayor added. He also said that overall, the city is in about as good of a financial situation as possible.

"We're pretty much on target," he said.

Visits from the New England Aquarium, the Metro Zoos and interactive exhibits are planned.

MYOMECTOMY: FIGHTING FIBROID TUMORS

The good news is that only about one in 1,000 fibroid tumors of the uterus are cancerous. The bad news is that they can grow and multiply, causing heavy menstrual bleeding, intense pelvic pain, and pressure on the bladder or bowels. While hysterectomy (removal of the uterus) is necessary in some cases, alternative treatments that leave the uterus intact are providing new options for others. Myomectomy is the surgical removal of fibroid tumors from the uterus through an incision in the abdomen. Like a Cesarean section, it is major surgery, requiring a hospital stay of four to five days. Other possible treatments include vaginal mymectomy (removing small fibroids via the vagina), and drug therapy.

P.S. As many as half of all women with fibroids experience no symptoms at all and may not even be aware that they have them.

Since extremely heavy periods are often the first sign of a fibroid, notify your physician if you notice such a change in your menstrual cycle. If you would like to learn more about this topic or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our new office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

One More Time . . .

(Henry Bosworth decided to take another day off. So he's recycling another of his old columns. Well, TV has a lot of re-runs.)

Things I wish I could see, do, or hear once more. (But not necessarily in this order.)

• Take in a movie at the Lincoln, Strand or Quincy Theater.

• Sit down to a 45-cent luncheon special at the Howard Johnson restaurant downstairs at the Granite Trust. (Now South Shore Bank).

• Order a Coke with a dash of lemon at the Alhambra Tea Room.

• Plunk a nickel in the jukebox and get Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey, Harry James or Jimmy Dorsey with Bob Eberly and Helen O'Connell.

• Look at Munroe MacLean on one side and Jack Donahue on the other plotting strategy at the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day football game.

• Hear former Mayor and Councillor Tom Burgin stand up and tell his colleagues: "It's time to fish or cut bait."

• Henry Prairio at Point Junior High School stressing: "Always give it (effort) that extra ounce."

• Percy Lane, punster, newspaper man and bachelor observing: "You don't have to be crazy to be a newspaper man, but it helps . . . "Marriage is an institution, but who wants to live in an institution?"

• Dorothy Lamour, at our second meeting 10 years later, pulling me down beside her at the Latin Quarter and kidding: "C'mon now, you're not a cub reporter anymore."

• Ruth Gordon, calling from her apartment in New York City or her home on Martha's Vineyard all excited about her latest movie or TV show and asking me to keep an eye on her birth certificate at City Hall.

• President-elect John Kennedy in his father, Joseph's, home in the Kennedy compound a few hours after his slim win over Richard Nixon pouring drinks for and chatting with the press. When asked to explain what he thought made the difference between victory and defeat, he replied: "He (Nixon) screwed around too long in the South." And confessing he was going to play some golf when he got to Florida. "But don't print that, they'll think I'm another Ike."

• Watch Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa walking through City Hall turning off unnecessary lights.

• Ride a street car from Quincy Point to Quincy Square — and for only a nickel.

• See City Clerk John Gillis in a crew cut.

• Buy a suit or sport coat from Ray Josephine at Remick's.

• Or a TV set from Remo and Pete DeNicola.

• And a big band album from Jason Feldman at Jason's.

• Walk up the runway at Fenway Park and see Jimmie Foxx, Bobby Doerr, Joe Cronin and Ted Williams taking batting practice.

• Take a seat in the stands at Fore River Field and see Jay Desmond, Fran Desmond. Nick Malvesti, Clappy Wildridge, Joe Shapiro, etc. in action.

• Stop at the Quincy Arena to boo Ted Germaine or Tony Papalino.

• Get up at 4 a.m. for Quincy High School hockey practice at the Boston Arena. (I'm not so sure about doing that again.)

Time To Keep The Focus On Tomorrow

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It is nice to see the Woolworth's clock ticking again, but as far as the time being right again for downtown shoppers (Quincy Sun, August 26), it is time to keep the focus on tomorrow and not yesterday.

Expansion has become an issue for folks in Wollaston and North Quincy. Shaw's Supermarkets is seeking to open a new store on the site of Boston Gear. Stop and Shop meanwhile desires to relocate their Newport Ave. store onto the site of Pneumatic Scale. Folks in the neighborhoods are concerned about such expansion plans and are worried about the adverse impact on them, for example, from increased shopping traffic.

However, Quincy 2000, a public-private partnership appears already in support of Shaw's as a result of positive views for the project being aired by its executive director. Personally, I believe Quincy 2000 should be more supportive of local retail merchants operating in both Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Center. Quincy 2000 should also be more supportive of neighborhood folks concerned about the plans being pushed by both Shaw's and Stop and Shop. How will a Shaw's or relocated Stop and Shop affect the neighborhood surrounding them or local businesses in both Wollaston or North Quincy?

After all, the real economic vitality of Quincy in the long-term can be seen in places like Beale St. Look around. Places like Barry's Deli, the Beale Street Diner, Dot's Smoke Shop, O'Brien's Bakery, Wollaston Theater and Tony's Pizza to name a few. How about Frank Miller and his Wollaston Market? A big chain store ran from that site and Miller recognized the need for a supermarket. He invested in his community and everyone won as a result.

It is time for Quincy 2000 to move beyond Quincy Center and into the heart of the city's neighborhoods. Quincy's future is tied to her neighborhoods and the shopping areas such as Norfolk Downs and Wollaston Center.

Yes, the city should continue to attract new businesses and chain stores. Yes, the new shipyard museum will be an important tourism attraction and help local merchants in the Quincy Point area. But, Shopperstown USA is dead, gone the way of the drive-ins and sock hops. It is 1950's mentality and quite outmoded in these final years of the 20th century. Let's put the future on the agenda.

City Offering First-Time Homebuyers Program

Mayor James Sheets announces the City of Quincy, through its Department of Planning and Community Development and the Quincy Housing Partnership (QHP), is implementing a new program to assist first-time homebuyers.

The program represents the city's commitment towards providing affordable housing and helping people achieve their dream of ownership, Sheets said.

The program consists of two parts: assistance for downpayment and closing costs provided by the city's Federal Community Development Block Grant (CDBG); and mortgage subsidy funded through the Massachusetts Housing Partnership (MPH)/Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) Soft Second Program which awarded the city $100,000 this year.

Quincy Savings Bank and the Cooperative Bank have been selected through a formal solicitation process as the lending banks for the first mortgage.

The city's CDBG funds will provide up to three percent of the purchase price of the home. Of this, up to two percent may be used as part of the homeowner's five percent down payment. Up to one percent may be credited towards closing costs.

The second program component is the MHP/EOCD Soft Second Loan. To make mortgage payments more affordable, with the homebuyer putting down five percent of the purchase price, the mortgage is broken into a 75 percent conventional first mortgage and 20 percent second mortgage.

The homeowner pays principal and interest on the first mortgage. The Soft Second component subsidizes the interest on the second mortgage for the first 10 years. The subsidy is highest for the first five years and decreases from year 6 through 10. From year 11 to 30 the homeowner pays the entire principal and interest for both first and second mortgages.

The Soft Second Program has three other key features: five percent down, no points and no private mortgage insurance.

To be eligible, the applicant must be a first time homebuyer, meet the HUD low-mod income limits, have good credit, and take a First Time Homebuyer Course. There is no residency requirement.

The property must be located in Quincy. Other restrictions may apply. Applications will be processed on a first come, first served basis.

To apply, the applicant first submits an application form and copies of financial documents to the planning department. The planning department reviews the application, verifies the information and determines eligibility.

A credit report is obtained and reviewed. The planning department and the QHP conduct preliminary screening and determine the level of subsidy. Eligible applications are then forwarded to the bank.

Next, the bank hold a pre-qualification meeting with the applicant and obtains from EOCD a temporary 90-day set-aside on the Soft Second funds. The applicant finds a home, signs a purchase and sales agreement and submits a mortgage application and support documents.

The bank makes final loan decisions. The bank confirms with the city the amount of downpayment/closing costs assistance and with MHP/EOCD on the soft second mortgage subsidy. The bank conducts the loan closing and the client(s) take possession of their new home.

The program combining CDBG and MHP/EOCD soft second funds was implemented by the Planning Department for the first time last year. The city utilized all of its $100,000 of MHP/EOCD funds and $37,762 of CDBG funds to assist 13 first-time homebuyers.

The Cooperative Bank, Quincy Savings Bank and Bank of Boston participated in the program last year.

Early this year, planning department implemented another program of first-time homebuyers' program involving about $175,000 of federal HOME funds earmarked for downpayment and closing costs.

The planning department encourages all interested people to apply for this new program.

For more information, contact James T. Chaput or Sandra Brant, Department of Planning and Community Development, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169, 376-1379.

The PASS program can now fund admissions to programs in the arts, humanities, and interpretive sciences, including exhibits and educational tours.

Huge Crowd Seen For USS Massachusetts Launching At F.R.

Quincy Police and Bethlehem Steel Co. officials were making preparations for a crowd of 75,000 to witness the launching of the $75 million battleship USS Massachusetts Sept. 23 in the Fore River Shipyard.

Bethlehem announced that only invited guests would be permitted inside the shipyard for the launching ceremony but several thousand invitations were issued and all of the 16,000 shipyard workers were given passes for their wives and children.

Sept. 16-22 1941 52 Years Ago

Police, expecting 30,000 to view the ceremony inside the yard and another 45,000 from vantage points outside, set up strict traffic rules for the Quincy Point area starting at 10 a.m., some two and a half hours before the scheduled launch time.

The sponsor of the ship. Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, wife of the former mayor of Quincy and former Secretary of the Navy, said that in lieu of the customary dinner, she and members of the christening party will entertain at the Adams mansion.

Massachusetts, 750 feet long with a standard displacement of 35,000 tons, is believed to be the largest ship ever launched in the United States. She would be the first battleship launched at Fore River since the Nevada in 1914.

COUNCILLOR OUTRAGED

Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Offering Community Service Forethought Alert Program

The Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy, is now offering a new program as a free community service called the Forethought Alert Program.

The program is an emergency information service designed to speak for someone in the event of an emergency--when he or she is unable to speak for himself for herself. It provides participants with a plastic Alert Medical Emergency Identification Card. A special microfilm inset and built-in lens viewer allow emergency medical and law enforcement personnel to have immediate access to needed information about the card holder including name, medical conditions, drug allergies, family to contact and much more. It provides information without delay when every minute counts.

Because the Forethought Alert Program is a free community service, to any person over 60 years old, there are no annual dues or membership fee. Part of the program includes a permanent and confidential record that does not have to be renewed, yet can always be updated at no cost.

In addition to the Forethought Alert Program, the Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home also offers information about funeral planning using policies from Forethought Life Insurance Company. Local residents interested in more information about how to participate in the Alert Program should call the funeral home at 472-5888.

Quite A Catch For Police Underwater Recovery Unit

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Police Underwater Recovery Unit came up with quite a catch during a recent dive.

A 300-plus pound propeller and $1,000.

The unit recovered the propeller, which belonged to the yacht Christine of the Fleet Yacht Charter Co. in Boston, in the waters surrounding Marina Bay in Squantum. John Blackadar, chief of the recovery unit, said the propeller had been torn off "a couple of weeks" earlier when an attempt was made to dock the yacht at the site.

Blackadar said a number of people attempted to locate the propeller because the yacht company was offering a $750 reward to the person or persons who retrieved it.

"Everyone and his brother went looking for it," said Blackadar, who added that both amateur and professional divers spent about two weeks searching for the propeller before the yacht company turned to the recovery unit for help.

Blackadar said the dive team, which is funded solely through private donations, was more than happy to oblige, especially after the reward was increased to $1,000.

"We said it would be well worth it to try," he said. "We only had $76 left in our kitty (dive fund)."

Blackadar said the recovery unit arrived at the site on a recent afternoon at around 12:30 p.m. and fully intended on staying seven hours if necessary. After two divers preceded the others into the ocean and resurfaced to report low visibility, Blackadar said the team began probing the water by swimming in "circular pattern," a common diving method.

Metal detectors are not helpful in conducting such a search, Blackadar said, because there is "so much metal down there (in the ocean) all the time" that they ring constantly and therefore have a hard time locating a specific item.

Although the first circular pattern came up with nothing, the team began another pattern roughly 50 feet away, Blackadar said. About 35 minutes into the dive, at approximately 2:30 p.m., recovery unit member Tim Burke located the propeller.

Blackadar said a large line was secured to the propeller, but eight men were not enough to lift it. He noted that that propeller, which is composed mainly of bronze, weighs between 300 and 400 pounds.

The team enlisted the aid of local lobsterman Paul Urbanus who used the wench of his craft to hoist the propeller out of the water. The propeller was then taken to Marina Bay, where Blackadar said "the big lift (crane) there" was used to remove the propeller from Urbanus' boat.

Employees from the yacht company came to pick up the propeller the next day, he added.

Blackadar said the recovery unit will use the $1,000 to maintain its diving equipment, truck, and other supplies.

He laughed when he thought of the other divers at the scene who greeted the recovery unit with good-natured taunts.

"Some of them had spent over a week searching, and they told us 'you'll never find it, it's impossible,'" he said. "They couldn't believe it when we did."

Citizens Advisory Committee On Rifle Expansion Being Formed

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers and State Rep. Michael Bellotti are planning to form a Citizens Advisory Committee regarding the Moon Island-Long Island Rifle Range expansion.

The joint project between the Drug Enforcement Agency and the City of Boston calls for the expansion of the range into a "new, state-of-the-art rifle range," according to Ayers. The property is owned by the City of Boston.

A Conservation Commission meeting was scheduled to be held on the matter last night (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at New City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center, Ayers added.

Ayers and Bellotti said they plan for the Moon Island-Long Island Advisory Committee to become a permanent standing committee.in Quincy so that residents will have a voice regarding the rifle range project as well as any future plans in the area. Ayers said the 11-member committee will be comprised of himself, Bellotti, a representative from Boston and residents from Squantum.

"We feel that it is imperative that the committee be established and that it is, in fact, long overdue," said Ayers.

"Residents of Squantum have a right to know and a right to say what their abutters on Moon and Long Islands are proposing to do," agreed Bellotti.

Kolson Urging Attendance At Protest Rally Saturday

Ward Councilor Peter Kolson invites the public to attend a Protest Rally at City Hall Plaza in Boston Saturday, at 1PM. The rally is being organized in an effort to continue to bring national attention to the need for Federal financial aid regarding the MWRA Boston Harbor project and the resulting water/sewer rates.

Kolson said it is estimated rates will reach an additional $2 billion in the next 15 to 20 years. This burden cannot be tolerated by the average rate payer, especially during the difficult financial times that are being experienced at present.

Kolson added that he would like as many as possible join together in a show of solidarity and strength. "It is only by having a large turnout that this matter will be brought to the attention of the press and the Federal Government," he said.
